FOREWORD

Modern Sanskrit scholars have not bestowed that amount of attention on the study of the Purāṇas which they have done on that of the Vedas. This neglect of the study of the Purāṇas proceeds from more causes than one. Every one of the Purāṇas is a real Encyclopaedia Indica and so a very comprehensive knowledge of the whole range of Sanskrit literature is necessary to understand them. There are very few scholars who possess such a knowledge.

The present translation of the Matsya Purāṇa has been done by an esteemed Talukdār of Oudh—well known for his scholarly attainments in Sanskrit and English.

The introduction has been written by Pandit Lalit Mohan Kai, who obtained the diploma of Kāvyatirtha from the Sanskrit College, the degree of M. A. in Sanskrit and Pali from the University of Calcutta and is professor of Sanskrit in the Ripon College.

Most of the appendices are from the pen of my brother, Rāj Bahadur Śrīśa Chandra Vidyārṇava, whose profound knowledge of Sanskrit has enabled him to rightly interpret many difficult passages in this Purāṇa. It is hoped that the notes and appendices may be of use to scholars interested in the study of the Purāṇas.

The greater part of the present volume is taken up with a description of Vratas or fasts, followed by feasts and gifts to the Brāhmaṇas. They are of interest only to the Hindu public. To the non-Hindus they are of very slight importance.

According to its own statement in Chapter 53, this Purāṇa is 16th, in the order of precedence. This is according to the northern recension, where the Brahma Purāṇa stands first. According to the southern recension, the Matsya Purāṇa heads the list, showing thereby that this is par excellence the Purāṇa of the southern people. It probably owes its origin to the south.

To complete the dynastic records of the kings of the Kali age, the matter has been somewhat anticipated, and Chapters 271, 272 and 273 have been inserted in this volume. This part is complete in itself, and its second part, which will appear in future, will not break the continuity of the book.

INTRODUCTION

The present war between the European Powers, the royal representatives of which, in many cases, stand to each other in the relation of cousins, brings forth, in the brightest colours to the Indian mind, the long past glories of another great field where cousins had met to measure, their swords. The date of that war is still an open question like many other great events of the Indian tradition. Many, indeed, there have been who deny it the name of an historical event and like to look upon it, as merely a part of the fayery tales which the Sanskrit Purânas, in their opinion, abound with. The details of that war are so familiar to every one of us that we have never questioned its occurrence, but as to its probable date we are merely content with believing it to be very very ancient. Many European scholars, in their over-eagerness to prove Indian civilization to be of a late growth, have assigned to the war a date not far beyond the birth of the Christian era. Leaving this tug of war regarding Indian dates to take care of itself, let us try to find out what internal evidence the Purânas can supply us to prove our case.

Custom, it is said, becomes law, when it is recognised by the state, and tradition, we may say on the same analogy, is accepted as history when borne out by evidence recognisable by critical and scientific intellects. Thanks to the indefatigable labours of scholars like Mr. Pargiter, who started on a study of the Purânas with some faith in the realities of their accounts—with the requisite amount of śraddhâ which the Vedântins enjoin—we are in a position to take the Mahâbhârata War from a realistic point of view.

Of late Babu Râmaprânâ Gupta, in the Åsvin issue of the Pravasi of the last year (Vol. XV Pt. I, 6th issue, pp. 740 et seq.), has made an attempt to fix the date of the Mahâbhârata War, and has referred to two different theories, viz. (1) the 6th century B.C., founded on astronomical observations and (2) 2450 B.C., based on the Râjatarangini. He holds a third view, namely, that the War took place a thousand and a half years before Christ, and says that many great scholars, Indian and European, have accepted the same view.

Note—Here I beg leave to point out an oversight of Babu Râmaprânâ Gupta. He says, at p. 741 (first column, towards the bottom) (of which I give the translation). It is written in the 54th Sloka, Chap. 24, Part IV, of the Viṣṇu that Parikṣit was appointed King 1200 years after the commencement of Kali, etc. And he finds it difficult to reconcile this passage with what follows in the Vīṣṇu

ते तु पारीश्विते कारो मयास्वासनः भ्रकुट्तमः।
तत्रा प्रवृत्तस्य कालः वाद्यालयतात्त्वमः॥

The meaning of the second line is —

"At that time (the time of Parikṣit) began the Kālīyuga, which comprises of 1,200 (divine) years." Cp the lines following in the Vīṣṇu

What Babu Rāmaprāṇā says, appears like an alternative theory, and may mislead readers. This arises, probably, out of the worthless vernacular translations, published by Indian press, bristling with mistakes, although purposed to have been done by the great Pandits.

Let us examine this view a little.

This theory has been built upon the interval of time that elapsed between the birth of Parikṣit and the inauguration of Mahāpadma Nanda. The words of the different Purāṇas are quoted below —

1. Brahmāṇḍa—

महानवयामध्यक्षं जन्म यावत् परीश्वितः।
पत्तुवर्गसुद्देशु हृदय पशुशालास्थितः॥

III—LXXIV—227

2. Vīṣṇu—

यावत् परीश्विते जन्म यावत्कल्याणेष्वेचनम्।
पत्तुवर्गसुद्देशु हृदय पशुवालस्थितः॥

IV—XXIV—92

3. Bhāgavata—

आर्यम् महोत्न जन्म यावत्कल्याणेष्वेचनम्।
पत्तुवर्गसुद्देशु हृदय पशुवालस्थितः॥

XII, II—26

4. Vāyu—

महावलोकनेष्विकारः जन्म यावत् परीश्वितः।
पत्तुवर्गसुद्देशु हृदय पशुवालस्थितः॥

Vol II, Chap XXXVII—409

All the Purāṇas have given the names of the Dynasties which ruled in India during this period. They are the Bāhradratha, the Pradyota and the Sisunāga, which last was overthrown by Mahāpadma Nanda. The Matsyas, the Vāyu, and the Brahmāṇḍa mention the respective reigns of each king, while the others give only the names and the sum total of the different reigns.
According to the first set of Purāṇas, the kings and the duration of their rules (as suggested by a critical perusal of the different Purāṇas and their different versions) are as follows —

|-------------------|-----------------|
| (1) Somādhi       | 56 years        |
| (2) Srutasravas   | 67              |
| (3) Aṇtāyus       | 36              |
| (4) Niraśtra      | 40              |
| (5) Sukṣatra      | 56              |
| (6) Bhaktarman    | 23              |
| (7) Svaraja       | 50              |
| (8) Srurajasya    | 40              |
| (9) Vībhū         | 26              |
| (10) Suchi        | 58              |
| (11) Kārma        | 28              |
| (12) Suvarata     | 64              |
| (13) Sunētra I    | 35              |
| (14) Nirṛti       | 58              |
| (15) Suvarasāya   | 38              |
| (16) Drūshasena   | 46              |
| (17) Mahinētra or (Sumati) | 38 |
| (18) Suchāla      | 82              |
| (19) Sunētra II   | 40              |
| (20) Satyasāla    | 88              |
| (21) Vishajit     | 85              |
| (22) Rupuṣakṣya   | 50              |

Total: 1,000 years

Regarding this list, it is to be noticed, that wherever a parallel reading has been given by Mr. Pargiter, there has been no difference in the name, except in the three following instances —

1. Sunētra I and Drāmanētra, where the readings regarding the latter are rather confusing, and hence less deserving of acceptance.

2. Mahinētra and Sumati, where there would be no difference if the king be regarded as having two names, their period of rule being the same.

3. Trinētra and Suvarasāya, where it appears as if both had an equal claim to be accepted as the correct name. But if both were to be accepted, the list would not be of 22 kings, but of 23, but this is impossible as the list is confined to 22 and 22 only. Now, which name to reject?

Brahmāṇḍa—CXXIV, 121

† विविधता ज्ञाप योले अभितरीत्र बुद्धिमण्डः *

—Brahmāṇḍa—

III, cxxiv—121
The line devoted to Trinêtra reads as follows —

which, compared with the line celebrating Sunêtra (II)

presents a striking similarity (excepting of course in the number of years)

This led me to suppose that it would be a repetition of the same thing if we accepted both these lines, and so I preferred to adopt the line for Suśramasya I find that I am, most fortunately, backed by other readings of the Matsya which actually have Sunêtra for Trinêtra, and the line for Suśramasya can, therefore, be safely accepted for the one for Trinêtra

It may be here remarked that long reigns, and almost absurdly long ones, are occasionally met with in Indian chronologies. But it is to be remembered that the names are of memorable kings, and often the reigns of predecessors and successors of minor importance and less worthy of a separate remembrance, have been added on to those of these remarkable ones. To give a familiar instance, can anybody, excepting a specialist, remember with correctness the two shorter periods of rule of George IV and William IV, while the long and memorable reigns of George III and of Victoria the Good, are remembered so exactly? If people were to write history after the lapse of a dozen centuries, these two shorter periods would be engulfed in either of the longer ones in the traditions of this long period

INTRODUCTION

This is exactly the total number of years as given by Matsya Purāṇa. The Viṣṇu gives 362 years as the total period of the Sisunāgas, but does not give the reigns against each king. So it is not verifiable. The above reigns have been taken from the maximum periods given in the Purāṇas, and this must be the correct reckoning, as it tallies exactly with the total periods given even by those Purāṇas which do not give the details. How to account for these 2 years of the Viṣṇu?

But a very strange result is obtained by adding together these different totals. They give the grand total of \(1,000 + 138 + 360 = 1,498\) years, or, according to the Viṣṇu \(1,000 + 138 + 362 = 1,500\) years, while they declare, as already observed, that the period between Parīkṣit’s birth and Mahāpadma Nanda’s inauguration covered 1015, 1050 or 1115 years.

This discrepancy was observed when working at the Matsya Purāṇa. The totalised interval thus coming far above the three different totals, as given by the different Purāṇas, the only possible explanation lay in this—When there are three divergent readings in the Purāṇas, depending, no doubt, on slight variations in the texts, could not there be a fourth and certainly more reasonable reading to say that the period was 1500 years?

Very happily this reading has been actually found, as given by Mr Parry, at p. 58 of his Dynasties of the Kali Age.

This clears up all doubts regarding the interval between Parīkṣit and Mahāpadma Nanda. It was a period of 1500 years.

If a comparative estimate be desired between the totals, as given by the different Purāṇas (viz., 1015, 1050 and 1115 years), and the sum total found out by calculation of the details, the scale must turn in favour of the latter, as a corruption, or at least a variation, depends on the mutation of two or three letters of the alphabet, as is evident from there being those different versions of the total period, while the details are more definite.

It is worthy of note here that this contradiction had struck Śrīdhara Svāmī, the worthy commentator of the Bhāgavata, whose critical spirit is noticeable in another portion of his commentary, viz., where he discusses the length of the Jambūdīpā. In his commentary on the 26th verse of the 2nd chapter of the 12th skandha, he remarks—

“In fact, the interval between Parīkṣit and Nanda is less than one and a half thousand years by two years.”

* “वस्तुतःस्तु परीशिष्टशैलेश्वरस्ते ज्ञानं नूतं वर्षीयो लाखे-सहस्रं मयाति।”
INTRODUCTION

The 2 years added to 360 by the Viṣṇu seems to have proceeded from the desire of making the sum total of the durations of the three dynasties (viz., 1,000 + 138 + 360) come exactly to 1,500 years.

Now, Parīkṣit was a posthumous son of Abhimanyu, who died in the War, so that many months did not elapse between the War and his birth, which preceded Mahāpādma Nanda’s inauguration by 1,500 years.

Mahāpādma Nanda ascended the throne in 422 B.C., as we come to know from Indian History. So from a retrospective calculation we arrive at 1922 B.C. as the date of the Great War fought on the field of the Kurus.

The astronomical data supplied by some of the Purāṇas seem to go against this date. The Viṣṇu and the Bhāgavata state that the Great Bear was in the Magha in Parīkṣit’s time. When it will go to Pūrvāśādha, it will be the time of Nanda, and the Kali age will begin to attain maturity. (There is no mention of the speed of the seven Rṣis.)

The Vāyu adds the seven Rṣis dwell in a Nakṣatra for a century.

So, as Pūrvāśādha is the 10th from Magha the interval between the days of Parīkṣit and Nanda comes to ten centuries.

The Brāhmaṇḍa corroborates this. But the Matsya says, “The seven Rṣis were then (on a line) with the towering, blazing Agni”, and that being the presiding deity of the Kṛttikā, we conclude that in Parīkṣit’s time the seven Rṣis (the Ursa Major or the Great Bear) were in the constellation Kṛttikā. From Kṛttikā to Pūrvāśādha are 19 Nakṣatras, and so, from Parīkṣit to Mahāpādma Nanda, there elapsed a period of 1900 years.

The statement in the other Purāṇas may be easily explained. In their anxiety to be consistent with the statement of 1015, 1050, or 1115 years—(and regardless of the totalised number of years)—they fixed on the tenth star from Pūrvāśādha (about which there are no two opinions), by backward calculation.

As the Matsya claims a superior place among the Purāṇas, the data it gives, verified by calculations which the other Purāṇas supply as well, and corroborated by backward and forward references, are throughout consistent, and hence the date arrived at from them are well worth accepting.

INTRODUCTION

We are thus in a position to say that the Kuruksetra War took place as many years on that side of the birth of the Giver of Peace as the present war has occurred on this side of it.

THE MATSYA PURANAM

श्री गणेशाय नमः ||

SALUTATION TO SRI GANESHA

ॐ नमः भगवते वासुदेवाय ||

SALUTATION TO THE ADORABLE VASUDEVA

Note — The sacred word "Om" is formed by the letters a, u, m. Of these, a represents Visnu, u, Siva, m, Brahma. Pranava is, therefore, the symbol of the sacred Trinity.

CHAPTER 1

May the lotus feet of Bhava who shook the diyastras at the time of His dance, disperse all obstacles — 1

Note — Bhava is a name of the God. Tanda is a particular kind of dance of which Siva is very fond. Diyastras is laid down in the pauranic allegory that the universe lies balanced on the backs of ten elephants — each elephant supporting a quarter.

May the words of Lord Visnu, embodied in the Vedas and uttered by His Matsya-avatara, in which incarnation, at the time of His sallying forth from the region of the patakha, the blow of His tail caused the seven seas to intermingle with the high heavens and then to fall down, spattering the sphere of the earth, steal away all your evil — 2

Note — Brahmanda, literally, means the Egg of the Creator, and the word, as it stands, applies to all the regions — both upper and lower. In the above roka Brahmanda is coupled with the word Urdhva, which means upper. Here the complete word is Urdhva Brahmanda which means the upper regions. Matsya avatara is the incarnation of Lord Visnu, in the form of a fish. The Merciful manifests Himself in different forms, whenever He finds it necessary — (1) To educate the world in the performance of its manifold duties which, in spite of their being incorporated in the works of divine revelation, very often remain incomprehensible, (2) To save the world from wilful neglect of duty

Compare —

यहह यथाशि दयंस्य ग्लामभेदिति भारत ।

वन्ययुग्मणी मध्यर्मिनि तेजायमान सुजात्यहम् ॥""

"भर्मे सत्यापताधिय सम्मचायरसयुगे युगे ॥"

(3) "Old order changeth yielding place to now,
God fulfils Himself in many ways,
Let one good custom should corrupt the world."
To deal with the doubts that are very often raised on the theory of incarnation, it would be necessary to make copious references to Vedic Upansads and Nyāya, and to add exhaustive commentaries on those dogmatical aphorisms which would swell the bulk of the Purāṇas. I will therefore confine myself to very brief notes on most important items. The necessity of Matsyāvatārā will later on become clear by going through this Purāṇa. śrutī means the Vedas that are regarded by the Hindus to be the words of Divine revelation.

Matsyāvatārā which is the dispeller of all ignorance, should be read after saluting Nārāyaṇa, Nara, Narottama, Devi Śaśiṣṭha — 3

Note — Nārāyaṇa, Narottama, etc. are all analogous expressions and apply to the Supreme Being who is omniscient, omnipotent, omnipresent and omniscient. Words cannot describe Him or His glory.

Compare —

“प्रतिलोकोऽसं स्वाक्षरां संस्कृतां सुरत्तत्वशाखा लेखी प्रज्ञुर्वभारि ॥ विशेषत् यथा गृह्यता शारदा सर्वस्वाभावतं नदिपि तत्र गुणान्वितः पारं न यति ॥”

I salute Lord Brahmā who though unform manifests Himself for the sake of creation, and is known under different epithets, viz. — Nārāyaṇa, Triguṇa — 4

Note — Triguṇas are Satya, Rasa and Tamas. Mahā is the resultant of Triguṇas. When Māyā combines with any particle of Omnipresent Parabrahma, that particle is known as Brahmā. Triveda means the three Vedas — 12. Rig, Yajur and Sāma. The metre which is prosodical but cannot be chanted is called Rik and Rig Vedas is full of such metres. The metre which is neither prosodical nor can be chanted is called Yajus and Yajurveda is full of such metres. The metres that can be chanted are known as Sāma, and therefore the Veda containing such metres is called Śaṁa-Veda. Strictly speaking therefore, there are only three Vedas. The sage Vasiṣṭha collected several metres of the above mentioned three Vedas dealing with Āśvamedha and Śatikrama, etc., and compiled the Atharva-Veda which now forms the fourth Ved. The Vedas are the works of Divine revelation and are held very sacred by the Hindus. Lord Brahmā is the chief revealer of the sacred Vedas. Now, with the above verse ends the introductory verses, after which the subject matter of the Purāṇa commences. Before proceeding further, something must be said about mangalāchāraṇa. Mangalā is of three kinds — viz. — (1) Namaskārāmakam — mangalā is that in which there is salutation to some Deity as in śrī Ganesāya māhā, and Om Namō Bhagavate Vasudevaḥ which occur in the very beginning of the Purāṇa (2) Vastumirdvāśātmakam mangalā is that in which there is some clue to the subject matter of the work following it. (3) Aśvamedha-mangalā is that in which some Deity is invoked to shower His blessings on somebody.

The couplet Triguṇādī Tam lāvātpa, etc., contains a prayer to Lord Siva which shows that later on there will be something about the annihilation of the universe Siva is Sanbhākārtā. The śāstra Patheśvātvanāpaniśāho, etc., contains a prayer to Lord Viṣṇu which shows that there will also be a description of the Śthiti Viṣṇu as Santikārtā. The above two stanzas are both Vastumirdvāśātmakā and Aśvamedha-mangalā. The couplet, aṣṭopi, etc., contains salutations to Lord Śvayambhūte, etc. Brahmā which shows that the Purāṇa contains a history of creation also. Brahmā is Svātikārtā. This couplet is Namaskārāmakā as well as Vastu Vardesātmakā.

Ganapati, the Lord of Siva's attendants. It is laid down in Siva Purāṇa that God Siva was in the habit of going into His abode, even when His consort, the Goddess...

Parvati, would be having her bath. The Goddess did not like this, and in order to keep Siva out at the time of her bath, she once upon a time made a figure of sand clay and put life into it. Afterwards, the goddess located him at the door of the house, directing him not to let any one enter. A little while after, Lord Siva turned up, but the figure at the door drove him away. Siva got very angry and sent his attendants to subdue him, but they were repulsed. Then the Lord sent a large army under the Devás to subdue him. They were also on the point of being routed when Siva himself appeared on the scene and overpowering him by his large army, cut his head with his trident. The head was carried away by the nymphs. Afterwards, Siva's attendants were also stationed in the cliffs. The Goddess was pleased with their prayer and devotion, and said that she would not give effect to her determination, provided her son was recalled to life and allowed the first place in all the ceremonies, which they all promised to do. But when a search for the head was made it was not found. They found the head of an elephant with only one tusk lying somewhere at a distance which they put on the body and then infused life into it. Ganésa then came to have the head of an elephant on his shoulders. Afterwards, He was given the first place in all ceremonies and was made the Lord of Siva's attendants. Going to his having the first place in all ceremonies, He is always saluted at the beginning of Mangalcharana in each work.

We understand from the Mangalcharana that Matsya Purāṇa mainly deals with the history of—

1. The creation of the Universe by Brahma, the Creator
2. The annihilation of the Universe by Siva, the destroyer
3. The preservation of the Universe from total annihilation by Visnu the saviour Brahma, Visnu and Siva are the different manifestations of the one and the same Supreme Being.

Once upon a time, the inhabitants of Naimishāranya, at the close of a long sacrifice, began to relate to one another pious, charming stories from different Purānás. The great sage, Sūta, was present in that assembly Saunaka and other sages who were also there on that occasion, after complimenting Sūta on his deep lore said—

"() unless one, we wish to hear again the very same nectar-like stories of the Purānás which have been recited to us by you"—5-6

Note—Naimishāranya is modern Nimkhar-Misrikh in the Sitapur district, Oudh.

"Tell us please, how Brahman created the Universe, and for what reason Visnu adopted the form of a fish. We are also anxious to know why Siva took the goblet of human skull, why He is called Puñāri, and how Bhava, the cause of our prosperity, came to be known as Bhairava? O, Sūta! Be gracious enough to relate all this exhaustively, for we never feel satiated with listening to your sweet narrations, as one is not with nectar"—7-8

Note—'Bhava' means the giver of prosperity. This is a synonym of God Siva

'Bhairava' means terrible or one who causes fear. This term applies to a form of God Siva.
Kapāli literally means one who carries a human skull. This expression also applies to Siva.

"Vṛṣabhadhvaja" means one who has a bull for his conveyance; Siva rides the bull, therefore, this term denotes Siva.

Sūta said — "Hear, now, O, Brahmānas, the sacred Matsyapurāṇa which was revealed by Lord Viṣṇu in the form of a fish" — 9

Note — Now follows the narration of the Purāṇa.

In ancient times (Varāvāra) Mann, the Merciful, the first king of the Solar dynasty, after making over his kingdom to his son, devoted himself to rigid asceticism. On a summit of the Malayā mountain, the devout austenities of that resolute hero, who was adorned with spiritual knowledge, and whose equilibrium of mind was just the same in adversity as in prosperity, were crowned with the attainment of transcendent yoga (that is, union with the Deity) —10. 11

Note — "Rāmaṇḍana" means the Son of the sun.

Varāvāra Mann was the offspring of the God sun from Śrīhūṁ, the daughter of Lord Kuvera. He was the founder of the Solar race of Kṣatriyas.

Note — Viśvā is a range of mountains in Southern India abounding in sandal trees. It is to the west of Malabar.

Samadhiḥkasahāvha means the hero who is neither overwhelmed by misfortunes nor is carried away by prosperity, but remains firm under all circumstances. Such a bent of mind is not common. Only those few who resign themselves to His will and concentrate their minds on the sacred object of their devotion, can remain so firm-minded.

Devotion to God alone leads to such a bliss.

It points out to the soul the pitfalls of life and the mundane uncertainties. It takes away the shroud of illusion and places the soul on the pinnacle of celestial glory where eternal peace and contentment reign. Bhakti or Yoga begets such knowledge.

The King Varāvāra Mann, inspite of his worldly glories, was not negligent of the life after death. Like many ancient kings, the first item of his duty was to acquire this ṛtum, and he became Rāma-Riṣa. It is therefore no wonder that a Rāma-Riṣa, like the King Varāvāra Mann, should have been so firm.

After a period of a million of years of continued asceticism, Lord Brahmā became pleased towards him, and told him to ask for a boon —12

Note — Kamsāra is another name of God Brahmā. It literally means, one who has a lotus to sit upon. It is laid down in the purāṇic allegory, that at the time of creation, a lotus with Brahmā sitting on it, springs from the navel of Viṣṇu.

Having been thus addressed (by Brahmā), the king, after saluting Him, said "Lord! I have only one boon to beg of you, which is above all other boons. May I have power sufficient for the protection of the whole creation, moveable and immovable, when the hour of Pralaya will come" —13. 14

Note — "Pitāmaha" means paternal grand-father.

Brahmā is the Creator of the Universe. He is therefore called Pitāmaha.

Note — Pralaya is chiefly of two kinds, viz. — (1) Khaṇḍa pralaya, in which there is a partial dissolution, and (2) Mahā pralaya in which there is a total dissolution.
CHAPTER I

In this Purana, there is a mention of Khandapratiya. Mark the boon sought by the illustrious sovereign of the Solar race. This shows how selfless, highly virtuous and righteous the kings in ancient times were.

Lord Brahma, the Soul of the Universe, after granting the prayer of the king (in the following words, "Be it so"), disappeared then and there, and the Devas profusely showered a rain of flowers from the ethereal regions — 15

Note — Pusparasti The Devas showered flowers on the king to express Their unbounded pleasure and appreciation of his highest righteousness.

One day, in his hermitage, when the king was making a libation of water to the muses of his deceased ancestors, a carp (a small fish) fell into his hands along with the water — 16

Note — Tarpana is a libation of water to the muses of the deceased ancestors which a Hindu is in duty bound to perform regularly.

Consult 'The Daily Practice of the Hindus' by Rai Bahadur Sri Chandra Vidyarakshita.

Papita, i.e., fell from the king's vessel out of which he was pouring out water for libation.

Sarshari is a very small variety of fish called carp. It is very tiny and always restless. Eastern poets very often employ it in their similes, in their description of the movements of beautiful eyes.

On seeing that tiny fish, the merciful king, out of compassion, wanted to preserve it and put it into his water-jar. That tiny fish, in course of a day and night, grew into the form of a large fish, measuring sixteen fingers in length, and (feeling uncomfortable inside the water-jar where it was placed by the king), cried for deliverance — 17-18

The king took it out of the water-jar and put it in a large pitcher but there also, in course of a night, it grew three hands in length. "I am at your mercy, come to my succour." The king, again hearing these cries of the fish took it out of the pitcher and deposited it in a well. Later on, the well also proved insufficient. The king then accommodated it in a tank — 19-20

Note — Sahasra-karanatmaja, the Son of the Sun, i.e., king Vaivasa Vata Manu. Sahasra-karana means the Sun.

In the tank, again, the fish grew a yojana (eight miles) in length, and again appealed to the king, in a plaintive tone, to help it out of the tank. Then the king put the fish in the Ganges and, finding that it increased there too, he placed it in the ocean. The fish went on increasing and increasing in bulk, until it very nearly filled the vast expanse of the great ocean. The king, seeing this, was awe-stricken and said, "Are you the chief of the Asuras? Or are you Visnu-deva, who else has such an extraordinary power to assume such a tremendously big form extending to sixteen hundred miles?"— 22-25

Note — ‘Asura’ means a demon. ‘lauvara literally means master.
I have come to know you, O, Kesava! You are puzzling me in the form of a fish. I bow down to You, O, Harihara, Jagannatha, Jagaddhama” [These are all different names of God]—26

Being thus addressed, Bhagavâna Janâidana, in the form of a fish, complimented him, and said “O Spotless One, I have been truly known by you. In a few days time, O King, the Universe shall be deluged with water, along with the mountains and forests. The Devas have made this boat to rescue the creation from such a calamity, placing in it vedajas, andajas, udhujas and parâyujas. O, King! you take charge of this boat and help the distressed at the time of the impending danger. When you find the boat in danger of being blown away by the strong gusts of wind, tie it to my horn. By rescuing the afflicted from such an awful misfortune, you will be rendering a great paternal service to the creation. And, O, blessed sovereign! You shall reign for one Manvantara, from the beginning of the Krita-yuga, and shall be venerated by the Devas”—27-33

Note — ‘vedajas,’ literally means, born of sweat, therefore insects clinging to one's person, such as bugs,lice, &c., ‘andajas,’ animals born of an egg, Udbhaja, things that sprout, ‘parâyujas,’ born of womb, i.e., Mammals.

Note — Krita-yuga is the same as Satya-yuga, the age of truth. Manvantara is a period of 6,480,000,000 years.

Here ends the first Chapter dealing with the conversation between Manu and Viṣṇu.

CHAPTER II

Sûta, continuing his narration, said, that, on hearing such words of the Lord, the king begged Him to reveal to him in how many years the time of destruction was likely to come. The king also entreated the Lord to point out to him the means of saving the creation from such a distress and to let him know when he would again be fortunate enough to meet Him face to face—1-2

The fish replied that from that day there would be no rain for a hundred years, and the universe would be overtaken by a dire famine. After that, all the inferior beings of the universe would be scorched to death by the seven ordinary rays of the sun which shall become seven times more powerful—3-4

Note — The seven rays of the sun, are —

(1) सूर्यम्, (2) दिविका, (3) सिद्धिकर्म, (4) विद्याभाष, (5) सत्यशस, (6) वरदश्रेष्ठ, (7) सुंदर—

In addition to all that, the subteranean fire would shoot out, Seṣa, from his abode in the lower regions, would send forth venomous flames from his thousand months, and a furious fire would emerge from the third eye of Siva — 5
CHAPTER II

Note — It is said, in the purānic allegory that the universe rests on the head of a thousand-hooded serpent which is more popularly known as Sesa.
The fire emitting from the third eye of Siva. He has a third eye in the forehead which always remains shut. The Lord opens that third eye only on occasions of anger, and necessarily at the time of destruction. As soon as the third eye is opened, all objects falling within its range are reduced to ashes, as it sends forth a blinding flash of fire.

Thus the three worlds would be crumbled to ashes by the combined fury of all those various fires. The sky, with all the stars and planets, would also be destroyed by the heat thus originated — 6-7

Then the seven destructive clouds viz., Saṃvarta, Bhīmanāda, Drona, Chanda, Balāhaka, Vidyut patāka and Sōnā, would spring up from the vapours arising out of such a heat, and would rain in torrents till all the seas become united into one great mass. In fact the whole earth would be covered with one vast expanse of water, then get hold of that yonder boat and put the seed of creation and the sacred Vedas in it.
After that, fasten the boat to my horn by means of this rope that I give you, and then the contents of the barge will be saved by my glory."
O, Pious One! when everything will be destroyed, your good-self, the moon, the sun, myself, Brahmā, the sacred river Narmada, the great sage Mārikandeya, the sacred Vedas, the Purānas, the God Śiva, the various sciences, will alone be saved, and the reign of king Chaksusa Manu shall terminate with the coming partial dissolution — 8-14

At the beginning of the re-creation of the Universe which would follow the period of destruction, I shall propagate the Vedic knowledge."
So saying, He suddenly vanished away — 15

The king, till the time of dissolution, of which intimation was given to him by Lord Vāsudeva, engaged himself in the practice of Yoga — 16.

At the commencement of dissolution, the Lord appeared again in the form of horned fish. At the same time, Sesa, the Serpent King, appeared before the King Vaivasvata Manu in the shape of a rope, and the king, through his Yogic power, collected together all living beings and put them in the boat. And, after fastening the boat to the horn of the fish, by means of the rope, the king saluted the Lord and got into it — 17-19

Sūta said, "O sages! hear the history of creation, &c., which you have asked me to narrate. I shall now proceed to relate it in the words of the Lord which were addressed to the King Vaivasvata Manu." — 20-21

Manu entreated the Lord to relate to him, how the dissolution and the creation of the universe took place, how the generations of mankind came into being, the meaning of Manvantara, the biographies of eminent men, the expanse of the universe, the ways of charity, the path of duty, the precepts of śrāddha, the divisions of Varna and Āśrama, the ways of sacrificial rites, the greatness of the Devas, etc — 22-24

Note — śrāddha is an act of devotion to the pitrs and manes which every Hindu has to perform by means of certain prescribed rites, after which food, etc., is distributed to the Brāhmaṇas

'Varna' means tribe, caste, 'Āśrama' the four kinds of religious order, viz., (1) Brāhmaṇa-aharyya or the student life, (2) Grahastra or the householder's life, (3) Vana-prastha or the anchorite's life, (4) Sanyasa or hermit's life

Matsya said that during the period of Great Dissolution the universe was enveloped in darkness and was in a state of trance, as it were, inconceivable, still, and undefinable. In that state of unimaginable and indescribable trance, appeared Lord Svayamblu, who is also known as Nārâyana, owing to His omnipresence in Śhūla-sārira, made His appearance to create the universe — 25-27

Note — Śhūla-sārira, is corporeal body, i.e., what is visible to the naked eye

Svayambhu, with the design of creating the universe, first created water and planted the seed of creation in it. The seed of creation, i.e., chattanyā (consciousness) by coming into contact with water, produced a vast egg (i.e., the egg of Brahmā), of golden hue, which, after one thousand years, became ten thousand times more luminous than the sun. After that, Svayambhu merged Himself into that tremendous Brahmānda, and owing to His omnipresence in it, He came to be known as Viṣṇu — 28-30

He (Svayambhu) then created the Sun by His glory, which owing to its first place in the creation, is known as Āditya — 31

After dividing the huge Brahmānda into two parts, He (Svayambhu) made the Heaven and Earth, Ākāśa and the quarters. The upper portion of the divided Brahmānda formed the heaven, the lower one the earth. The direction in which the Sun was located was termed, purva i.e., East, the direction on the right hand side of Brahmā was named daksīna, i.e., South, the direction to His left hand side was styled uttara, i.e., North, and the one falling at His back came to be known as pashchima, i.e., West — 32

Note. — Purva means first, and the direction was so named, because proditya the first object of creation happened to be located at that side

Pashchima means behind. This direction was named so, because it fell to the back of the Creator, who was standing faced to the East

Daksīna means right. This direction fell to the right of Brahmā

Uttara means subsequent

Afterwards, the principal mountains, like the Meru, clouds, lightning, embryo, rivers, pitaris, Manu and the seven oceans, full of various gems, were created — 33-34
CHAPTER III

Note — 'Pitaris' means manes of the dead, Forethers. The seven oceans are क्रमेण: तत्सः दुधः स्नादः चुरुदः चरुदः स्नादः स्नादः

The above is the ancient division of oceans

Brahma created the Brahmans and, owing to His desire of calling the Universe into being, He is also known as Prajapati, Mārtanda came into being by the glory of the Creator — 35

Note — Bhādeva means the mundane God, i.e., the Brahmans. They were so named because they were inspired with Divine knowledge.

Prajapati means the father of progeny, i.e., the Creator.

The Sun, owing to its flashing out of the Brahmānda at the time of its breaking, i.e., being divided into two parts, is known by the name of Mārtanda, and the image of the Creator, Brahmā, the four-headed Deity, who is full of the element of Rajoguna came to be called as Mahatman — 36

Note — Rajoguna is the constituent quality of all the material substances.

The Creator Brahman has four mouths that are visible, and that is why He is called so Mahātman in the phraseology of Sankhya, means Mahātmatva, i.e., the attribute of buddhi and when this attribute has more of rajoguna then it is called Brahmā.

The same common Cause of the Universe who created all the Devas, Demons, and mankind is known by the name of Brahmā, who is full of Rajoguna and who is also styled Mahat-satva (or Brahmā) — 37

Here ends the second Chapter dealing with the destruction of Brahmānda

CHAPTER III

The king asked the Lord, how Brahman created the universe and the reason of His having four heads — 1

The Lord Vishnu replied that first of all Brahman practised devout austerities, whereby were revealed the sacred Vedas, together with their complements and supplements and the metres. The oldest of all Śāstras was first recollected by Brahman—the eternal Brahma—in words, with its ten million elaborations. After that, Brahman revealed the sacred Vedas and the sciences of Mimamsa, Nyaya, & c., together with the eightfold proof.
Inspired with the Vedic knowledge, Brahmā became conscious of His supreme potentiality and through His desire created the ten sages, who are known as the Mānasā sons of the Creator, viz., Marichi, Atri, Angira, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kuntu, Pracheta, Brigu, Vasiṣṭha and Nārada.

In addition to the fore-mentioned ten sages, the following came into existence from the various limbs of His body, without having any mother from His right thumb appeared Prajapati Dakṣa, from His breast Dharma, from His heart Cupid, from His brows Anger, from His lips Greed, from His intellect Delusion, from His egoism Arrogance, from His throat Glee, from His eyes Death, from His hands the sage Bharata. These are the nine sons O King and the tenth was a girl, called Anjana — 2-12

Note — Anjana means originating from the body.

At this, the king Vaivasvata Manu said —

"Lord! I have understood that intellect begot Delusion and egoism begot arrogance, but what is intellect?" — 13

The Lord replied that the presence of the three attributes, viz — Satva, Rajas, Tamas, in equipoise, form the Prakriti. The same Prakriti is also known as Pradhana, Ayakta and Maya. The Creation springs from this very Prakriti and ultimately disappears into it. By a disturbance in these attributes, the same one form manifested itself into three, as Brahma, Vishnu and Maheswara. Similarly, the presence of the three attributes in unequal parts begets Mahatatva, which is also known as intellect. Egoism sprang from the Mahatatva, and the five organs of perception and other five organs of action, originated from Egoism — 14-18

These are — The eyes, the skin, the eyes, the tongue, the nose, the anus, the male and the female organs of generation, the hands, the feet, the speech — 19

Note — The first five are the organs of perception, and the last five are the organs of action.

The five organs of perception produced words, touch, form, flavour, and smell, and the five organs of action brought forth emission, happiness, taking, walking and speech — 20

The mind is reckoned to be the eleventh organ, as it helps the faculties of intellect and action in their respective operations. The minute molecules of all the organs form the substratum for the individual soul that lies enthroned in it, and it is for this reason that the frame within which lies the asylum of the individual soul is known by the name of subtle body. The individual soul by coming in contact with this atomic body is called corporeal. The mind, propelled by desire to create, starts the work of creation. The subtle element of sound brought ether into being. Sound is the only attribute of ether — 21-23

Note — Lord Brahma first of all wished to create and then He threw His mind in the achievement of the work of His desire. Helped by His mind, He proceeded with the work of creation.

By a concussion in ether, came forth wind, possessing the qualities of sound and tangibility, and the subtle element of tangibility.
produced brilliancy, which caused water attributed with sound, tangibility and form—24-25

The earth was produced by the potency of the subtle element of liquidity inherent in water, and it has the attributes akin to water and also of the subtle element of fragrance. The Mahātātva, which is formed by the five subtle and primary elements, is called the Viśñāmaya koṣa by the Vedāntins, buddhi, i.e. intellect, is another name for the same. The man possessed of this twenty-fifth element enjoys and suffers—26-27

Note—Twenty-fifth (element), i.e. (consciousness) God has laid down certain laws for mankind to follow. Any action against the established laws leads to wrong which always causes pain. We have been given the faculty to distinguish between right and wrong, and it is our own fault if we choose the latter. A man always reaps the fruits of his actions. He suffers if he deviates from the right path and does wrong, and enjoys as long as he continues to follow the right track and does good.

The body therefore comprises the twenty-six elements, and the individual soul, which is subordinate to the wishes of the Lord, closes the list of the elements that make up the human body—28

Lord Brahmā created the Universe by the help of the above enumerated elements, and Sāṅkhya, which is one of the six systems of Hindu philosophy, is so called by Kapila, etc., because it enumerates these elements—29

Lord Brahmā, after creating His mānasa putras, was not quite satisfied with the work of His creation. He set about devising some plan which would carry on the work of creation and would relieve Him of the task. With this view, He began to invoke Gāyatrī. After some time the goddess Gāyatrī, known under different names, viz. —Satarūpā, Sāvitri, Saraswati, Brahmāni, &c., appeared in the form of a girl from the half portion of Brahmā's body who at the first sight mistakenly took Her for His daughter. Afterwards, the Creator, seeing that form of exquisite beauty, was fired with love and repeatedly uttered, "What an enchanting form!"—30-33

At this, the Mānasa putras of Brahmā, i.e., Vasiṣṭha, &c., taking Sāvitri for their sister, began to express their feelings of seething indignation and contempt at the attitude of Their Father (Lord Brahmā), but He was so much absorbed in love that He did not heed anything in the least—34

Brahmā continued uttering, "Oh! what an enchanting form! oh! what an enchanting form!" in His love for the goddess Sāvitri, and the latter, after saluting Him, began to circumambulate Him in reverence. Brahmā fixed his gaze on Sāvitri and could not distract Himself from Her. As she was circumambulating Him, He felt shy of turning His head each time to Her direction, as His Mānasā putras were standing close by. He therefore created four heads, each pointed to a direction, in order that He may see Sāvitrī undisturbed, without having to turn His head each time in course of His circumambulations. Seeing Brahmā in such a condition, Satarūpā went to heaven with the Mānas sons of the Creator, and as she was travelling towards heaven, Brahmā put on a fifth head right on top which afterwards He covered with His long matted hair. Thus is how Brahmā came to have five heads. After this, Brahmā lost his powers that He had acquired by practising asceticism, owing to His not controlling His mind and falling into the snares of Cupid. Then Brahmā dispersed His sons, after directing them to carry on the work of Creation —35-41

The sons of Brahmā, in obedience to His instructions, set themselves to complete the work of creation, and afterwards they took leave of Brahmā with salutations —42

Brahmā, fired with passion in Her company, married Satarūpā and began to pass His days in enjoyment inside a lotus. He enjoyed the company of Sāvitrī for hundred years, and after a long time Manu was born to them —43-44

Manu, thus born, was Svayambhu Manu, who, owing to his close affinity to Brahmā, is also called Ādipurūsa (the first man). The progeny of Svayambhu Manu multiplied considerably and the Vairājas are among them —45-46

Svārochinda, &c., the seven Manus, and another set of seven Manus, Auttami, &c., altogether the fourteen Manus, belong to the family of Svayambhu Manu. “O, King Vaswatsa Manu,” said the Lord, “You are the seventh of the last set of Manus” —47

Here ends the third Chapter dealing with primary creation

CHAPTER IV

The king said, “O, Merciful! I feel awfully grieved to hear that Lord Brahmā married Aṅgājā. Pray, tell me why He was not regarded as having committed a fearful sin by having done so. Remove my doubts, O, Master of the Universe! by graciously explaining to me why the offspring of Brahmā were allowed to intermarry in their paternal circle without any regard for close-knit kinship.” The Lord Fish replied: “O King! such doubts only arise in the case of mankind, for men have atomic bodies and beget children in a different way, while the primeval creation is celestial in which Rajoguna predominates. The Devas not have supersensuous bodies and they beget progeny in quite different ways. The celestial forms come into being in other ways, and it is very difficult for men having sensuous bodies to understand this great secret. Only supernatural intellect causes celestial creation, therefore those alone can understand its great secret who themselves are possessed with such an intellect, just as a serpent alone can trace the footprints of another serpent, and aerial tracks can only be discerned by birds and other beings that fly in the air. O, King! the question of any prescribed order on prohibition does not arise in the deeds of the Devas. Only their desire is taken into consideration in whatever they do. Other beings reap the fruits of their karma (doings) which the Devas do not. No doubts should therefore be raised regarding the doings of the Devas, nor should the beings having sensuous bodies think of doing the same deed."—1-6 Besides this, as Lord, Brahmā is the governor of the Vedas, so is the goddess Gayatri of the Brahmins (the sacred text, i.e., the Vedas). She is the better-half of the Lord, and that is why she appeared from His body. Brahmā and Gayatri are inseparables. Sometimes only one of the two puts on appearance and sometimes both do the same, but all the same both are always together. They never remain apart. As sunshine or light never lives devoid of its shadow, similarly Brahmā never lives apart from Gayatri. Brahmā is the master of the Vedas and Sāvitrī (another name for Gayatri), is the governor of the same. Brahmā is therefore also the master of the latter, and consequently He committed no sin by marrying Her."—7-10

"In spite of all this, Lord Brahmā felt ashamed for not being able to suppress His passion in presence of His mānasas sons. He therefore got much vexed with the God of love and cursed Him after the departure of His (mānasas) sons."—11

"The object with which you made me the target of your arrows will ate long lead you to be reduced to ashes by Śiva, when you similarly behave with Him," was the curse that Brahmā pronounced on Cupid."—12

"Hearing this curse of Brahmā, the God of love shuddered with fear and cried out in great dismay, 'O, Lord! You created me with

* Professor Wilson writes —

"The Matsya Purana has a little allegory of its own, on the subject of Brahma's intercourse with Satarupa; for it explains the former to mean the Vedas, and the latter, the Sāvitrī or holy prayer, which is their chief text, and in their co-habitation there is, therefore, no evil.' "

[Vishnu Purana, 2nd Edition Vol 1 p 108]
the object of captivating the minds of men and women and kindling amorous feelings within them. You never instructed me to make any exception in Your case. I only carried out Your mandate and have committed no sin for which I may be subjected to such a dreadful curse.—13

Therefore, be pleased with me and by Your clemency save me from the effects of Your curse and grant me the boon of assuming form again.”—13-16

"Hearing such entreaties of Cupid, Lord Brahmā melted with compassion, and said: 'In the reign of King Vaivasvata, Rāma, the destroyer of many Rākṣasas and my compeer in power and prowess, will be born in the family of King Yadu. When Rāma, the valiant prince, will fix Dwārakā as His headquarters, You will be born as a son of His brother, the God Kṛṣṇa.'”—17-18

Note—Rāma here means Balarāma, the brother of Kṛṣṇa, and not the king of Ayodhya.

"'In that body (as the son of Kṛṣṇa), you will have a series of enjoyments and afterwards you will be born as a son of Vatsa in the family of King Bharata. After this, you will live till the time of dissolution that will close the reign of Vidyādharas, and then you will again come back to me.'”—19-20

Note—Vidyādharas is a class of demi-gods.

"The God of love took leave of Brahmā and departed with mingled feelings of joy and sadness—joy on account of the hope given by the Lord and sadness for fear of sufferings, as the effect of His curse.”—21

After hearing thus, the King Vaivasvata Manu again addressed the Lord thus: "Lord! Be gracious enough to satisfy my curiosity by telling me who was King Yadu, in whose family the God of Love took His birth, how Lord Siva reduced Cupid to ashes, who was King Bharata and how the work of creation continued onwards.”—22-23

The Fish-god replied: "King! Gāyatrī that appeared from the body of Brahmā possessed of infinite forms and organs begot the following seven children—Svayambhu Manu, Rati (the wife of Cupid. It also means desire of something), Tapas, Manas (mind), Dik Sambhrama (delusion), and Mahattatva.”—24-25

"The Mānasa sons of Brahmā—Marichi, &c—who were born first, began to pass their days in the terrestrial globe in the practice of asceticism. The Creator, marking the indifference of His Mānasa sons with regard to the work of creation, produced Vāmadeva, the wielder of the trident and also Sanatkumar, the first even of the first borns.”—26-27
"From the mouth of Lord Vāmadeva came forth the Brahmānas, from His arms the Ksatryas, from His thighs the Vāsuvyas, and from His feet the Śūdras."—28

"Afterwards came forth lightning, thunderbolt, clouds, rainbow, metres of various kinds, several varieties of medicines, eighty-four crores of Devās, known as Śādhyā, and who have three eyes and are immortals, without any fear of getting old."—29-30

"Lord Brahmā, finding Śiva creating such a race of Immortals, said that it was advisable to create only such beings as would reap the fruit of their own karmas. Śiva, on hearing this, instantly stopped His propaganda."—31-32

Note—Śthānu, literally, the trunk of a tree. It means that Śiva instantly stopped the work of creation and became fixed like the trunk of a tree. In other words, He did not carry on the work of creation after Brahmā offered Him His suggestions. From that day He is also known as Śthānu.

"Afterwards, Svayambhu Manu became the husband of Ananti, whom he obtained after great penances. By this alliance, Svayambhu Manu was blessed with two sons, viz.—Priyaviśa and Uttanapāda, and of these, the latter was married to Śūrītā the daughter of Dharma."—33-34

"Uttanapāda became the father of the following four children, viz.—Apasyati, Apasyanta, Kirtimāna, and Dhrūva (Pole Star)."—35

"In the bygone ages, Dhrūva practised severe penances for a period of three thousand years and obtained from Brahmā an abode in the eternal celestial regions. The Saptarishis, acknowledging him as their chief clustered themselves round him."—36-37

Note—The seven Rāus (sages), i.e., the Mānasā sons of Brahmā. It means the constellation known as Ursa Major (the seven stars of which are said to be the seven sages, i.e., the Mānasā sons of Brahmā).

"Dhrūva begot a son, Śista, from Dhanyā, the daughter of Svayambhu Manu, and Śista had five children, viz.—Kṛpā, Ripuṇyāya, Vṛtā, Vṛkā, and Vīkatejāsa, from Suchiśhāya, the daughter of Agni. Ripuṇyāya became the father of Chāksu from Virini, the grand-daughter of Brahmā. Chāksu became the father of Chāksuśa Manu from the daughter of Virini, and Chāksuśa Manu begot on the princess Nāḍvalā ten valiant and enterprising sons, viz.—Uru, Puri, Sātāyumna, Satyaśa, Havi, Agniśat, Atriṣṭa, Sudyumna, Aparājita, and Abhimanyu."—38-42

"Uru had the following six sons, viz.—Agni, Sunian, Khyātī, Ritu, Aṅgirā, and Gayā, from his consort, Āneyī.—43

"Aṅgirā became the father of Vēna, from Sunithā, the daughter of Pītṛ. The sages rubbed Vēna to death, owing to his tyranny, and, as they were rubbing him, King Prithu appeared from his hand. The great King Prithu was the father of Antardhāna and Hāvardhāna."—44

"Māra was the son of Antardhāna from Sikhandini, and Hāvardhāna had six sons, viz. — Prachiśvarāṇa, Sāgara, Yama, Śukra, Vāla and Śubhā, from Dhiśā, the daughter of Agni."—45

"Prachiśvarāṇa begot many children belonging to the Hāvardhāna clan. He had ten stalwart sons, well versed in archery, who are known as Prachetas, from Savarnā, the daughter of Samudra. They all devoted themselves to asceticism, and the trees that they grew to form a small jungle where they could practise their austerities, in process of time developed into a thick forest of vast latitudes which was ultimately burnt down by the fire at the commands of India (the God of Rain)."—46-48

"The ten Prachetas had Māri, the daughter of Chandramā, for their wife, from whom they begot the Prajāpati Dakṣa."—49

"After giving birth to Prajāpati Dakṣa the daughter of the moon brought forth the trees, the herbs, and the river Chandravati."—50

"Now hear the tale of the multiplication of the eighty crores of Dakṣa's sons."—51

"Dakṣa became the progenitor of a most queer race. Among his children some were bipeds, some had mere feet, some had long ears and some broad ones, some had features resembling those of the horse, the bear, the lion, the dog, the boar, or the camel. On seeing such a vast multitude of his progeny, Dakṣa created a large number of women."—52-53

"Out of the girls he created, he gave ten to Dharma, thirteen to Kasyapa, and twenty-seven to the moon that form a certain galaxy of stars. These very same daughters of Dakṣa produced the further race of Devas, Rākṣasas, mankind and the other beings inhabiting the extensive universe."—54-55

CHAPTER V

The sages, after hearing this, requested the Sage Sūta to relate to them how Devas, Dānavas, Gandharvas, serpents and Rākṣasas were born.

Sūta said that in the days gone by, the work of creation was originated by desire, perception and touch. Later on, Dakṣa started the work of creation by the conjunction of men and women.—2

"Hear, O sages! I shall now relate to you how Dakṣa introduced a new system of creation at the injunction of Brahmā."—3
CHAPTER V

Dakṣa begot thousands of issues from his wife, Pāṇchajāni, when he saw that the Devas, the Rīṣis, and the serpents, etc., created from the mind of the Creator, had not the same faculty to help the growth of creation —4

Nārada, on seeing the progress of Dakṣa in the field of creation, said —5

"O, ye Rīṣis, who are sons of Dakṣa1 first reconnoitre the extent of the universe and then set yourselves to the work of creation" —6

"On hearing the above words of the Sage Nārada, the sons of Dakṣa started to survey the length and breadth of the universe, and ultimately lost themselves, as the rivers do when they fall into the ocean. They have not returned unto this day" —7

The lost sons of Dakṣa were known by the name of Haiyāṇā, and the former giving them up for lost, created one thousand Brāhmaṇas known as Śāvā —8

On finding the Śāvās carrying on the work of creation, the Sage Nārada went to them and said —"First examine the extent of the universe and try to reclaim your lost brothers, then carry on the work of creation" —9-10

"Taking to the words of the sage, they started to reclaim their lost brothers, but met with the same fate, and it is for this reason that no one dares to repeat the same experiment unto this day" —11

On losing the latter batch of his sons, Dakṣa begot sixty daughters from Pāṇchajāni, the daughter of Vuṇi. Out of those girls, he gave ten to Dharma, thirteen to Kaśyapa, twenty-seven to Chandramā and four to Aristanemi. He also gave two to the son of Bhūigu, another two to Kuśāva, and two to Anāgirā. Their names will be related hereafter —12-14

Marutvati, Vasu, Yāmini, Lambā, Bhānu, Arundhati, Saṅkalpā, Muhūrtā, Sādhyā, Viśvā, who were given to Dharma, were the mothers of the Devas —15-16

Visvadeva was born of Visvā, Sādhyaguna from Sādhyā, Marutvantāgana from Marutvati, Viśvā from Vasu, Bhāṇavah from Bhānu, Muhūrtaka from Muhūrtā, Ghoṣa from Lambā, Nagīthī from Yāmini, the dweller in pātāla from Arundhati, Saṅkalpa from Saṅkalpā —17-19

The most powerful of the Devas that pervade the universe are known by the name of Vasu, who are eight in number, viz —Āpa, Dhruvā, Soma, Dhara, Anila, Anala, Pratyuṣa and Prabhāsa —20-21

The four sons of Āpa are Sānta, Danda, Saṃva, and Manivakra. They became the protectors of sacrificial rites —22
Dhruva became the father of Kāla, Som of Vaichā, Dhara of Dravina and Hayavyāha. Dravina and Hayavyāha were born of Kalyāñī, and Manoharā, the daughter of Hāri, was the mother of Prāna, Ramana, Śīra — 23-24

Anila became the father of the two powerful sons, viz — Manojaya and Avijnatgatu from Śivā — 25

Anala perchance cast his seed in a heap of reeds, whence sprang up Kumāra, Sīkha, Viśākha and Naigameya. They were fostered by the Pleiades, and that is why they are known as Kuṭukēya, and the great Rṣi Devala was begotten by Pratyāva — 26-27

Note — Kṛittika, the third of the 27 lunar mansions or asterisms, consisting of six stars. The six stars are represented as nymthas acting as nurses to Kartikeya, the God of war.

Prabhāsa begot the renowned architect and builder—the great Visvakarmā to make mansions, pleasure gardens, statues, ornaments, tanks, wells, etc — 28

Vāmadevas, i.e., Rudras, the creators of the Immortals, are eleven in number, viz: Ajaikapāda, Ahirbudhinya, Virūpākṣa, Rāvata, Hāra, Bahurūpa, Tīryāmva, Sāvitra, Jayanta, Pināki, Aparājita. The eleven Rudras were created by the mind of Brahmā each holding a trident in his hand. An account of them having created a race of Immortals, numbering 84 crores, has been given before. The Rudras pervade and protect the universe and have begotten many children from the womb of Sunabhi — 29-32

Here ends the fifth Chapter, dealing with the progenies of Vasus and Rudras

CHAPTER VI

Sūta, addressing the sages who were listening to his narrations with wonted attention at Naimśīrīnaya, said — "O, sages! I shall now enumerate to you the names of Kaśyapa's sons that he had from his 13 wives. Aditi, Ditā, Dānī, Anūta, Sursā, Surābhi, Vinatā, Tamā, Krodhavanā, Irā, Kadru, Viśva and Muni were the thirteen wives of Kaśyapa — 1-2

Devas called Tūṣita who flourished in the reign of Chākeśa Manu, came to be known as Ādityas (Suns), owing to then having been born as the sons of Devas called glorious Kaśyapa from his wife, Aditi, during the reign of King Vaivasvata Manu. They were twelve in number, viz., Indra, Dhātā, Bhaga, Tvaṣṭā, Mitra, Varuna, Yama, Vivasvāna, Savitā, Puṣā, Ansumāna, and Visvā. These were the 12 Ādityas—the centre of rays — 3-5

The Devaprahārīnas the sons of Krīsāva Rṣis, and the twelve Ādityas appear at the beginning of every Manvantara and Kalpa and vanish at their termination. Ditti, the second wife of Kaśyapa, gave birth to two sons, viz., Hīranyakāśīpa and Hīranyakāśīpa had four sons, viz. Prahlāda, Anuhūla, Sāmphūla and Hālāda. Prahlāda had the following sons—Ayushmāna, Shivi, Biskala, and Vīrochana. Bhī was the son of Vīrochana, and the former had one hundred sons, the oldest of whom was Bāna—6-10
Chapter VI

The notable brothers of Bāna were—Dhritarastra, Sūrya, Chandra, Chandramūrti, Māikha, Sūrya, Chandra, Chandramsūtāpaṇa, Nikumbhānābha, Gurbākaśa, Kuṅābhīma, and Vībhīṣaṇa—11

These were the most notable of Bāna’s brothers. Bāna had one thousand arms, and each arm was bedecked with a different kind of weapon. Vāna was an ardent devotee of Lord Śiva, and had won over the latter by his deep devotion. In fact, he was such an earnest devotee that he had almost unified himself with the Lord. His realm was guarded by Śiva Himself, the wielder of the trident—12-13

Udaya, Śākuni, Bhūta-samāpsana, and Mahānābha were the sons of Hīranyakāśīpa. The four sons of Hīranyakāśīpa begot an invincible band of demons, numbering 77,000, who had mighty limbs, various kinds of faces, and were most hardy—14-15

Dānu, the third wife of Kaśyapa, brought forth one hundred mighty demons, the principal one of whom was Vīpračchitā—16

Dvīnūrdhā, Śākuni, Śankusūdhanā, Ayomukha, Śambara, Kapiśa, Vāmanā, Mālichā, Meghavāna, Itā, Garbhāstra, Vīrahanka, Ketu, Ketavirya, Sāthinda, Indrajit, Saṃgājita, Vajranābha, Ekačakia, Mahābāhu, Vajākṣa, Tāraka, Aśomā, Pulomā, Vindu, Bāna, Svarbhānu, Vīrāparvā were chiefly the noteworthy brothers of Vīpračchit—17-20

Svarbhānu gave birth to a daughter, named Prabhā, Pulomā gave birth to Śachi, Maya to Upānāvari, Manodari and Kuhū, Vīrāparvān to Śāmīsthā, Sundāri and Chandra, and Vaisvānara to Pulomā and Kālikā—21-22

Pulomā and Kālikā were married to the demon King, Mālichā, who begot another formidable batch of Rakṣasas, numbering 60 thousand from them—23

The Paulomas and the Kālikāyas, i.e., the demon progeny of Pulomā and Kālikā, after being made invulnerable even against the Devas, began to live in Hīranyakapura. Lord Viṣṇu killed the Paulomas and Kālikāyas, who had become most haughty after they were made invulnerable by Brahmā. Only Vīpračchit survived, and he produced another race of thirteen demons, known as Saṁhinākēya from the womb of Śimhikā, the sister of Hīranyakāśīpa—24-25
Note.—The Paulomas and the Kalikēyas were only made invulnerable by Brahmā, and only the minor Gods could not kill them, but Lord Viṣṇu is the Supreme God.

Vyamsa, Kalpa, Nala, Vatāpi, Ilvala, Namuchi, Svāripa, Ajana, Naraka, Kālanābhā, Samāna, Kālaviṇya, Potarana were among the Sahimkēya class of demons Samhāla, the son of Hiranyakaśipu, produced the race of Nīvātadvaccha demons —26 28

Note—Potarana, the thirteenth demon of the Sahimkēya class, is not mentioned in the text, but the number thirteen is laid down in the text. To complete the list, therefore, I have included the name of Potarana, on the authority of Hari Vaṣṇapurāṇa.

This class of Nīvātadvaccha demons that was made invulnerable to the Devas, demons and serpents, was ultimately destroyed by Ājuna—a hero of Mahābhārata—by the grace of Śiva —29

Kaśyapa had the following six daughters, from his wife, Tāmrā—Sukti, Šeni, Bhāśī, Sugrīvi, Gṛdhikā, Šuchi —30

Sukti became the mother of Suka and Ulūka, Šeni of Šyena, Bhāśī of Kuṭa, Gṛdhikā of Gṛdhra and Kaśita, Šuchi of Hamsa, Sārasa and Vaka, &c —32

Note—Sāka=Parrot Ulūka=Owl Šyena=Hawk Kurara=Osprey Gṛdhra=Vulture Kaśita=Pigeon Hamsa=Swan Sārasa=Crane Vaka=Duck

Sugrīvi gave birth to goat, horse, ram, camel, mule, &c

From his wife Viniṭā, Kaśyapa begot Garuda, the lord of birds, the Aruna, and a daughter, named Saudāmini (Lightning) —33-34

Sampāti and Jatāyuh were the sons of Aruna, and Vabhrū and Śīhragha were the sons of Sampāti —35

Jatāyuh was the master of Kamikāra, Šatagāmī, Sārasta, Raṭjuvāla and Bherunda —36

The above-mentioned sons of Jatāyuh became the ancestors of different species of birds, and Šurasā, one of the wives of Kaśyapa, became the mother of serpents —37

Kaṭu—a wife of Kaśyapa—gave birth to several thousand-headed serpents, the principal ones of whom are—Seṣa, Vāṣuksi, Karkoṭa, Šaṅkha, Aṇīvata, Kaṃbala, Dhanāṇjaya, Mahānila, Padina, Asvatara (mule), Takṣaka, Elapattara, Mahāpadma, Dhimarāstika, Balāhaka, Šankhapāla, Mahāsankha, Puṣpadanāstika, Subhanānā, Šaṅkuriomā, Bahula, Vāmanā Pāṁna, Kapila Durmukha, and Pataṇjali —38-41

The above-named sons of Kaṭu and Kaśyapa were the fore-fathers of different classes of serpents, most of whom were consumed in the great sacrifice of Jaṁmejaya —42

Note—Jaṁmejaya was the son of King Parikṣita. The latter was bitten by a serpent and died in consequence. Jaṁmejaya, therefore, to avenge his father's death, performed a great sacrifice to consume all the serpents in which a large number of them was destroyed.
CHAPTER VII

From his wife, Krodhavasī, Kasūrya had a race of Krodhavasī demons, numbering a million who were ultimately killed by Bīhīvasena—a hero of Mahābhārata — 43

Srutabhi, one of the wives of Kasūrya, gave birth to the attendants of Rudras, cows, buffaloes, &c. — 44

Note — Rudras are a group of Gods, eleven in number, supposed to be the manifestations of Śiva, who is said to be the head of the group

Muni and Arīṭā, other two wives of Kasūrya, gave birth to the class of Munis and Apsarās and the race of Kinnairs and Gandharvas, respectively — 45

From Iśā, Kasūrya begot reeds, trees, creepers, &c., and from his wife Vīśvā, he produced a race of numerous Yaksas and demons — 46

Diti—a wife of Kasūrya—gave birth to 40 maruts (Gods of wind), who were the beloved of the Devas

Here ends the sixth Chapter dealing with the progeny of Kasūrya

CHAPTER VII

The Rishis said — How did Diti again beget the Maruts and how did the latter become the friends of the Devas? — 1

Sūta said — In the days gone by, when Lord Viṣṇu destructed the offspring of Diti in the great war between the Devas and Asuras, Diti repaired to Śyāmantapaṅchaka—a holy place—on the banks of the Sarasvati, and devoted herself to the worship of her husband and practised severe penances for a considerable length of time — 2–3

Note — A true Hindu wife always regards her husband as her supreme Lord. She has the same devotion for her as one has for God. Her salvation lies through her husband

After a little more than a century, Diti, the mother of demons, who had practised hard penances like a Rishi and had become emaciated and aged owing to her living on phalāhāra and regularly keeping up Chāndrayana and other fasts, asked Vāsistha and other sages — 4–5

Note — Phalāhāra. The Hindus in course of their fasts do not take cooked food.
They only take light things and particularly fruits. Phalāhāra literally means a repast of fruits

Chāndrayana is a particular fast, the chief feature of which is that one has to regulate his morsels of phalāhāra to the phases of the moon, i.e., on the new-moon day he has to take only one morsel which he goes on increasing one by one each day, for a fortnight, when the fast terminates

"Sages! Tell me some such vrata that would free me from the crushing grief of my son’s destruction and make me feel happy in this world as well as in the next." — 6
Note.—Vrata means fast. Any self-imposed religious observance, Restriction, Vow, Precept, Penance.

In this world as well as in the next, The Hindus believe in the transmigration of soul. According to this idea, there is a life after death until the soul becomes totally unified with Brahma, which is Nirvāna or final rest. The next world here, therefore, refers to the re-birth after transmigration of soul.

The sage Vasistha advised Diti to observe the Madana-Dvādaśi fast, by keeping which Diti became the mother of the Maruts and was liberated from her pangs of grief.

The Rāṣis said—"O, Pious Sage, Sūta! we are very anxious to know something of the Madana-Dvādaśi fast, by the observance of which Diti begot forty-nine sons again (after her progeny was destroyed by Viṣṇu)."

Sūta said—"Hear, O Rāṣis! what the Sage Vasistha said to Diti about the fast in question. I shall repeat to you the same in detail."

"The fast begins in the month of Chaitra, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight. One who observes this fast should place a jar of gold, silver, copper, brass or earthen platform, after filling it with different fruits, pieces of sugarcane, and white rice. Before placing the jar on the platform, it should also be painted with white sandal and covered with two pieces of white cloth. After this, a small plate of copper containing some fruits, gold and raw sugar should be placed on the top of the jar. Above it should be placed a plantain leaf, bearing an image of Cupid, and to the left of it should be placed the image of Rati made of sugar. After this, the worship of Cupid and Rati should be performed in the following manner:—
The images should first be bathed with incense and water, then white flowers, rice, and sesame should be offered. Afterwards, the Aṅgāpūja (body worship) should follow, as indicated below—After pronouncing Om Kāmāya, worship the feet. After pronouncing Om Saubhāgyadāya, worship the legs. After pronouncing Om Smārīya, worship the thighs. After pronouncing Om Manmathāya, worship the waist. After pronouncing Om Svāschoḍārya, worship the stomach. After pronouncing Om Anānḍāya, worship the breast. After pronouncing Om Padmaṇukhāya, worship the mouth. After pronouncing Om Panchaśāraya, worship the hands. After pronouncing Om Sarvātmane, worship the head. On the completion of this worship, sandal and incense should be offered, and then prayers should be sung accompanied by music. In case there be no one to sing prayers and play on the music, then the glories of Kāma and Keshava..."

should be narrated and listened to. On the following morning, the jar should be given to a Brähmana. —10-18

Note — In the text, only Kāmāya, Saubhāgyadāya, &c., are given. But all those expressions should be prefixed by (Om) and suffixed by (Namah), before being pronounced at the time of worship. Kāmāya, thus prefixed and suffixed, becomes, Om Kāmāya namah, which means “I salute Kama, the God of love.” Similarly, all the expressions are simply meant to convey the salutations of the worshipper to the Lord of love—expressive of the former’s devotion and reverence to the latter. All the expressions are only adjectival that ultimately apply to Cupid, viz. —Kama—God of Love, Cupid Anangk, literally, means without a body. Cupid was destroyed by Viṣṇu and became bodiless. He is therefore known as ananga also.

Saubhāgyadāya, literally means the giver of good luck, and here applies to the God of Love who brings good luck.

Smara, literally, means remembrance. Because Cupid appears and begins to exercise His influence merely by thinking of Him, the term itself has become a name of Cupid.

Padmamukha, literally means the mouth of a lotus. This expression is often employed by Indian poets to describe a beautiful face. As the face of Cupid is as aromatic, as delicate, as soft and as healthy looking as a lotus, He is known by this name also.

Pañchashāra, literally, means one who holds five arrows. Cupid is armed with the following five arrows —

पञ्चशाराणां च तृतीयम् च नवमांत्रक || नीलोतप्ताः पर्वते पंचवार्षिकं लाभाः: ||

The same five arrows are also differently named as —

संभवनस्तेष्यां च नाशकस्तथा नवमांत्रक || तस्मादेवेति कामस्य पंचवार्षिक: प्रकृतितः: ||

He is therefore known as Pañchashāra also.

Sarvātmak means the whole soul and applies to Cupid.

After making over the jar to a deserving Brähmana, the worshipper should feast a number of Brähmanas with devotion, and afterwards he should have his own meal devoid of salt. Then, the invited Brähmanas should be dismissed with presents, and the following prayer should be uttered before giving them presents —19

“O, Lord Janārdana, in the form of Cupid! Who bring bliss to every soul, be pleased with thy devotee” —20

The same routine of worship should be observed each month, on the twelfth day of the bright fortnight, and continued on for a whole year. The worshipper should observe a fast on the 13th day of the bright fortnight and worship Viṣṇu. On the 12th day of every bright fortnight, he should live only on fruits and sleep on the floor. At the beginning of the 13th month, he is to finally complete his cycle of fasts by performing worship as mentioned before, and on its completion he should worship the golden image of Cupid. Afterwards, white sesame, mixed with clarified butter, should be poured into fire and at the time of each sacrificial offering the various names of Cupid, already mentioned, prefixed with om and suffixed with Svāhā, should be pronounced. At the close of the sacrifice, the worshipper should also worship the officiating priest and his consort, and then dismiss all his Brahmans guests after feasting, garlanding, and giving them presents of clarified butter, cows, decently-arranged beds, clothes, ornaments, sugarcane. The golden image of Cupid should be given to the officiating priest along with other presents mentioned above, according to the means of the worshipper—21-26

One who observes the Madana Dwādasī fast in this way, becomes liberated from evils and begets worthy children and, finally, passes away in peace, for Vishnu and Smaṇa are the same—27-28

Note—Liberated from all evils or sins, or unce. In other words Madan-dvādasī fast, by exercising its influence on the body and mind, improves the man both physically and morally. Later on, by being blessed with children, he passes away in peace and attains rest, for he feels that his worthy children would discharge their duties unto God, their deceased ancestors, and mankind. It is for the fulfilment of these duties that a Hindu is always so anxious to beget worthy sons.

The worship of Kāma fulfils the desires of the worshipper. Hearing the advantages of the Madana Dwādasī fast, Diti observed it devoutly—29

Kasyapa chanced to meet his wife Diti, and through his powers (of asceticism) made her young again. On being questioned by Kasyapa, Diti said that she wanted to be mother of such a progeny as would kill Lord Indra and conquer all the Devas. Kasyapa promised to beget such a child from her womb when the sage Āpastamba performed a putreśṭi sacrifice. The sage Āpastamba eventually began to perform the sacrifice—30-34

Note.—Putreśṭi is a special sacrifice which is performed to beget an offspring.

At the time of performing the sacrifice, the sage Āpastamba began to recite Indra Śatrurbhavasva Svaḥa, at which the Devas became pleased and the demons were overpowered with grief—35

Note.—Indra Śatrurvarthā svam and Svāhā Indra Śatrurvarthā svam Svāhā mean the same thing, but, strictly speaking, the latter expression was applied by the sage Āpastamba. It has been put in a modified form to suit the metre. It is a compound word, and can be expounded in two ways, viz. (the enemy of Indra) and (Indra is whose enemy) Āpastamba, through a coincidence, began to pronounce the expression with such accent and emphasis as would admit the latter way of expounding the compound word which entirely reversed the object of Diti and, consequently, the Devas were pleased and the demons were overtaken with grief. It is therefore said—

At the conclusion of the sacrifice, Kasyapa performed the purificatory ceremonies to facilitate conception, and began to counsel his wife how a pregnant woman should live.—36
CHAPTER VII.

He advised Diti to remain in that hermitage for a century and not to take any meals in the morning and evening. Continuing his advice he said that a pregnant woman should not often go and sit at the root of a tree, nor should she sit on a broom-stick or a pestle. She should not enter or plunge herself in deep waters, and should also avoid living in a solitary house, sitting upon an ant-hill, and also depression of mind. She should not write by her nails, charcoal or ashes, on the floor, and should avoid much sleeping and labour. She should also abstain from sitting in a place covered with coal, chaff and bones, as well as from quarreling and yawnings. She should not keep her hair unkempt, nor her person unclean, nor should she sleep with her head towards the north. She should never doff her garments, and should not allow her mind to be afflicted on her feet to remain wet. She should avoid much laughing and the use of inauspicious words. She should serve her preceptor, pious deeds, and bath in lukewarm medicated water. She should take great care of herself in every way, should wear fine ornaments, worship Vāstu (household deity), keep herself pleased, and devotedly serve her husband. She should give alms to the poor and worship Gauri (the wife of Śiva) on the third day of a bright fortnight. A woman and, particularly one who is in the family way, if she follow such a course, begets amiable, valiant, and long-lived children, otherwise there is always a danger of miscarriage. "Therefore O beloved! follow the directions just explained to you. May you be blessed. I am now going to practice penances."—37-43

After this, Kadāapa vanished then and there, and Diti followed the instructions of her lord to the letter—49.

India came to know all this, and became fearfully alarmed. In his consternation, he left his kingdom of Heaven and going to Diti began to serve her. He, putting on a bright appearance, patiently and craftily began to pry into the daily life of Diti, in the hope that she might give him an opportunity of causing an abortion, by some way neglecting or omitting to follow closely the precautions suggested by her husband. —50-51

Diti, not knowing the foul intentions of India, did not entertain any suspicion, and she went on following the injunctions of her husband very closely, till there remained only three days to complete the century. She was so much surcharged with joy that she failed to observe the precautions, and one day she did not wash her feet, kept her hair unkempt and went to sleep like that.—52-53.
In her recklessness, she slept in course of the day, with her head towards the north. All those irregularities afforded a good opportunity to Indra to enter into her womb in His subtle body, and by His weapon divided the child in the womb into seven parts. To His great surprise and dismay each part developed into a child. They all began to cry in the womb, then Indra divided each one into seven parts. Indra thus divided the child in the womb into forty-nine parts, but each part became a child, and they all began to cry. On seeing this, He was awfully astonished, and asked them not to cry —54—58

Note—Mārodīśa = "do not weep or cry," said Indra to the crying children in the womb, and that is why they were named "Marut" afterwards.

Indra came to know, through His Yogic powers, that it was on account of Dūti's observance of the Devadāsi fast and worship of Kāma that His weapon could not destroy her child in the womb. His own thoughts began to oppress Him. He said to Himself that, instead of one, they multiplied into forty-nine Devas could not destroy them. It would be safer to make them Devas —59-61

After this, India appeared before Dūti and besought her to forgive Him for His base action. He said that He did that, because statesmanship dictates that a wise man should always endeavour to put an end to his enemies. They would, from that day forward, be known as the "Marut" and would rank among the Devas and would be entitled to a share in the sacrificial offerings, like other Devas —62-63

In this way, India, after making the "Maruts" into Devas and, taking Dūti with Him in His vimāna, returned to Heaven —64

Note—Vimāna the conveyance of the Devas, something like the flying machine of the present times.

Since then, the Maruts are classed among the Devas. They receive their share of sacrificial offerings, and after leaving the demons their kith and kin, they have closely identified themselves with the Devas —65

CHAPTER VIII

The Rishi said —O Sūta! We have heard with concentrated attention what you have been pleased to relate to us, now we feel desirous to know the lives of the kings that flourished at each order of creation —1

The Sage Sūta said —At the time when King Prithu was anointed and made lord of the world, Chandramā was made the king of medicinal herbs, sacrifices, fasts, penances, stars, planets, Brāhmaṇas, trees, thickets, creepers, Varuna of waters, Kuvera of wealth and (other) kings, the Sun of the twelve Ādityas, Agni of Vasus, Dakṣa of Prajāpatīs,
CHAPTER IX

Indra of gods, Prahlāda of demons, Yama of pitris, Śiva of demons and Yakṣas, the Himalayas of the mountains, the Ocean of the waters, Chitraratha of Gandharvās and Kūmāras, Vāsuki of powerful serpents, Takṣaka of other snakes, Arrāvata of the Dīggajas and other elephants; the peacock of birds, Uchaśravā of horses, the lion of the animals living in jungles, the bull of the cows, the trees of the herbs—2-8

Similarly, Lord Brahmā made the Devas Sudharma, Śankhapada, Ketumāna, Hiranyarōma, the kings of East, South, West and North respectively and They protect the universe by destroying its enemies, unto this day—9-10

The various kings named above, collected together and took part in the coronation of king Pūthu, and recognised him as the sovereign of the world. King Pūthu reigned till the end of Chikũsa Manvantara, when he was succeeded by King Vaivāsvata Manu of the solar dynasty—11-12

Here ends the eighth Chapter dealing with the coronation of Kings

CHAPTER IX

The Sage Śûta said “After hearing that, King Manu again requested the Fish God to narrate to him the career of the Manus who flourished in bygone ages”—1

The Fish God said “O King! listen. I shall relate to you briefly the lives of the Manus of yore, and shall give you a short history of Manvantaras and their times—2

“O Son of Mārtanda, hear attentively. In the bygone ages, at the close of the reign of Svāyambhuva Manu there was a group of Devas, known as Yāmas. In all Manvantaras, classes, such as Marichi, &c., are recorded to have appeared. Svāyambhuva Manu had ten sons, viz. Agnighrta, Agnivāhu, Riphthila, Savala, Jyotismāna, Dyutimāna, Havya, Medhā, Medhātithi, Vasu. They having established a code of law and morality departed to felicity. This has been narrated as the Svāyambhuva Manvantara—3-6

The Svārochīṣa Manvantara followed it. There were of Svārochīṣa Manu four sons, viz., Nabha, Nabhāsya, Praśūti, Bhāvana. Of this Manvantara, the following are recorded as seven Kūsa, viz., Datta, Nischaya, Vānastamba, Prana, Kaśyapa, Aurvī, and Brihaspati.” The seven Devas of this Manvantara were sons of Vasiṣṭha, known as Tūṣita, Hastindra, Sukrita, Mūrti, Apa, Jyoti, and Ayaśmaya—7-10

In the third or Auttamīya Manvantara, Manu named Auttami had ten sons, viz., “Īśa, Īṣa, Tarja, Sauci, Sukra, Madhu, Mādhava, Nabhāsya, Nabhā, and Saha” (who was most illustrious). The group of Devas in this Manvantara was known by the name of hāvana. The following were the seven Rīṣas in this Manvantara who were also known by the name of Ēka — Kaukunudī, Dīlhbīya, Sāntka, Pravahanā, Sīva, Sīta, Sasmitā — 11-14

In the fourth Manvantara which was called Tāmasa, the seven Rīṣas were — Kauri, Puthu, Agni, Apari, Kapi, Lalpa, and Dīlmāna, and the group of Devas were known by the name of Sadhya" — 15-16

The King Tāmasa Manu had ten sons, viz — Akalnasa, Dhanvi, Tapomāla, Tapodhana, Taporati, Tapasya, Tapodyutti, Parantapa, Tapobhogi and Tapoyogi — 17-18

In the [fifth] Raivat Manvantara, Devabāhu, Subāhu, Parjanya, Somapa, Hitay-Romā, Saptāstva were the seven Rīṣas, and Abhātarajas was the group of Devās. Aruna, Tatvadāsi, Vittārāṇ, Hariyapa, Kapi, Yukta, Niutsuka, Satva, Nimbola and Prakāśaka were the ten pious and illustrious sons of Itavatalaka Manu — 19—22

In the sixth or Chīk-u-a Manvantara, Bhīnu, Sudhāma, Vīrāj, Sahisnu, Nīla, Vivasvāna and Atma were the seven Rīṣas. The group of five Devas was, Lekhās, Ribhīs, Ribhās, Bāmulas and Divākasas in this Manvantara. Chīk-u-a Manu had ten sons such as Uru, &c., as has been already mentioned by me in the genealogy of "Śvāyambhuva Manu in chapter IV" — 23-25

After the Chīk-u-a Manvantara, as narrated by me, shall occur the seventh Manvantara, which is called Vaiavasvata — 26

In the Vaiavasvata Manvantara, Atri, Vaśistha, Gautama, Kaśypa, Bharadvaja, the powerful Yogi, Vivasvāna, Jamadagni, are the seven Rīṣas. The seven Rīṣas, after establishing a code of law and morality depart to felicity Śidhayās, Viśis, Rudhis, Mauntas, Vasus, Adevikumāras, Adityās are the classes of Devas in Vaiavasvata Manvantara. The King Vaiavasvata Manu had ten renowned sons, viz — Ikṣvāku, &c. In every Manvantara there are seven Rīṣas who, after establishing a code of law and morality, depart to felicity — 27-31

Now I shall explain to you something about the Sāvainya Manvantara. Ādathāmā, Śaradvāna, Kauśika, Gīlava, Satānanda, Kāśyapa, Rāma, are the seven Rīṣas in this Manvantara. Bhūtya, Vālayāna, Yāsas, Suvainya, Viś-ṣi, Chātimu, Idya, Sumati, Vasu, Sūkṣma are the ten valiant sons of the Manu Sāvainya" — 32-33

Rauchāya &c., shall be another six Manus after Sāvainya.

From Prajapati Ruchi there shall be Rauchāya Manu, from Prajapati Bhūtya there shall be Bhāntya Manu and from Brahmā there shall be Merusāvānya, Rīta, Rītadhāmā, Visvakēśa Manus
CHAPTER X

"I have explained to you something about the past and future Manus, O, King! Similarly, commencing from the age of Devās, in the 994th age, the afore-mentioned fourteen Manus rule in succession. In their time, they play their part in the creation of the moveable and immovable objects, and afterwards attain final rest with Brahmā, at the end of the age. They (the Manus), after 1,000 ages, shall be absorbed in Brahmā and be joined to Viṣṇu."—34

Here ends the ninth Chapter dealing with Manvantaras

CHAPTER X

The sages said that in ancient times the kings came to be called Pāthiva, on account of their sway all over the land, but how did the earth come to be known as Prithvi? O Sūta! tell us also why the earth came to be called "Gau"?—12

Sūta said that Pratapati Anega, in the family of Svāyambhūva Manu, was born who was married to the vile daughter of Mitra, named Sunithā the shrew, who gave birth to Vēnas. King Vēnas was valiant, but oppressive and sinful. The sages, seeing the sinful deeds of the king, who used to forcibly seize the wealth and the women of others, approached him with the object of bringing about law and order by giving him good advice—35. But when the king did not listen to the good advice of the sages, they killed him by their curse. After that being afraid of anarchy, the sinless Brāhmaṇas began to churn the dead body of the king from which first came out the races of Mlecchas—67

Note—Mlecchas has been defined by Baudhāyana as meaning "Non-Aryan, a foreigner, sinner, outcast, barbarian."

Black as soot the barbarian race that came out of Vēnas was the outcome of the evil qualities of his mother, and from the portion of the good qualities of his pious father, appeared from the right hand of the dead king, a most brilliant figure, wearing an armlet, studded with precious stones, and armed with bow and arrow in one hand and holding a club in the other. The illustrious figure thus produced, after so much difficulty, was named Prithu. King Prithu was anointed by the Brāhmaṇas, but even then he practised severe austerities—8-10

Lord Viṣṇu, greatly moved by the profound devotion of the King Prithu, showered His blessings upon him. The king, after being thus blessed by the Lord, became most powerful and illustrious. On seeing the earth devoid of Vedic rites, he was filled with righteous indignation, and prepared himself to destroy it with his never-failing arrow. The earth, trembling with fear, assumed the form of a cow and took to flight—11-12.
Note — This expresses a beautiful allegory. The righteous king saw that the people had given up the practice of the Vedic rites and were drifting towards sin by leaps and bounds. Yathā Rājah tathā Prajā — no wonder, therefore, that the people should have become so much demoralised during the sway of his predecessor—the wicked Vena Prithu, the pious, could not possibly tolerate such a chaos, and in his rage he made up his mind to destroy the sinners, when suddenly a thought flashed through his mind that law and order could be evolved even without resorting to such an extreme measure. The land appeared to him like a cow that could give sweet milk, if properly milked. He therefore applied himself to uplift the degenerated and to take good care of the new generation.

Cf.

राजा दुष्कृष्टिः यदि वित्तिकेशुप्रेमात्

Besides this, the cow is the most important of all animals in India. She plays a great part in the agricultural prosperity of the country by bringing forth oxen. She nourishes the nation with her sweet milk and ghee. She is a very docile and harmless creature. Her hide supplies shoes to the people. She takes motherly care of the nation, and that is why she is held so sacred by the Aryans who are the original inhabitants of Bharatavarṣa. Even now a man, to seek forgiveness or shelter, puts in a blade of grass in his mouth and addresses a real Aryan, “I am your cow, forgive me or save me.” The moment such a man approaches a true Aryan, he is rendered all possible assistance at every risk and stake by the Aryan.

Similarly, when that thought crossed the mind of Prithu, he compared the land to the cow, and then he could not destroy it.

Thirdly, it is the poetic way of saying that, when the earth became so terribly afraid of the power of the king, it appealed for mercy by appearing before him and telling him that it was his cow.

Fourthly, the sinners, trembling with fear, craved the forgiveness of the sovereign by calling themselves his cow and promising to turn over a new leaf—which will be clear further on.

The earth went on running, and the king continued the chase. After getting overpowered, she stopped and craved forgiveness and asked what to do — 13.

Note.—The allegory is continued. The king is portrayed as chasing the race of sinners who, to save their lives, are depicted to be running away and calling themselves cows, so that the king may not shoot his arrow at them. The sinners in their consternation have no courage to face their righteous sovereign, until they are deadbeat and can proceed no further. The sovereign would not let them run away, for he is anxious to reclaim and uplift them. He would therefore simply put his arrow on his bow to guard them from evils and also to stop them from running away to any out-of-the-way place.

A cow, when she runs away like this from her master, is similarly chased by the latter with a stick in hand. The master does not mean to kill the cow with his stick. He carries it with him for his own safety as well as for hers. He also uses his stick in directing... the footsteps of the animal. The bow and the arrow were similarly carried by the king in his pursuit of the earth that was running away from him in the form of a cow.

At this, the king addressed the earth and asked her to quickly minister to the needs of all beings, whether moving or fixed. The land promised to obey the behests of the king. Then the king, after making Svayambhūva Manu as the calf, milked the earth in the form of the cow with his own hands. The earth then produced the different kinds of grain, which support mankind, after which the sages, using the moon as the calf and Bṛhaspati as the milkman, milked the (earth) cow and extracted the milk of virtue in the pot of the Vedas. Then the Devās, after making the God Indra the calf and the God Mitra as the milkman, milked the (earth) cow. They drew out the milk of elixir-vitae in the pot of gold. The Pitris also milked the same thing in the pot of silver – 14-18 – 14-18

Note – The allegory goes on The quality and richness of the milk depend on the care and feeding of the cow. The earth is a cow that will give any kind of milk, provided due care is taken of it, and people milking it know how to do it.

Then Antaka, after making the God of death the calf, milked the (earth) cow and took out Svadhi from it. Similarly, the Nāgas, after making Taksaka the calf and Dhritiśastra as the milkman, got out poison in a gourd, and the Asūnas, making Vīrochana the calf and Dvimūrdhā as milkman, pressed out Māyā into a pot of iron. The Yak-ās pressed out in an earthen pot the knowledge of making themselves invisible after making Kuvera the calf – 19-22

Note – Vasuṛavas is same as Kuvera, the God of wealth

The Pitās and Rākṣasas, making Sumali the calf and Raupya the milkman, drew out the stream of blood. The Gandharvas and Apsaras made Chaturath the calf and Vararuci the milkman and got out on a lotus-leaf various kinds of fragrance, and the mountains obtained several kinds of precious gems and medicinal herbs which they extracted in the foot of hill ranges, after making the Mount Himalaya the calf and the Mount Sumeru the milkman. The trees also in their turn took out the power of regenerating even after being lopped, in a leaf of Palāsa (Butea frondosa), after making Shāla (Shorea robusta) the milkman and the figtree the calf. In the same way, every one who milked the earth got the “fruit” he wished for.

In the reign of King Prithu, people were long lived, wealthy, had peaceful relations with their neighbours. None was wicked, poor or sick. In the glorious reign of Prithu, there was no phenomenon foreboding evil that would have caused consternation to his subjects. Everyone passed his days in perfect peace and contentment, without getting overcome by grief or pain. Prithu, the Great, by the power of his bow, made many a part of his extensive Empire habitable and culturable. During the time of that valiant monarch, there was no need of a fortress, it was not necessary for the people to arm themselves, the science of political economy was not in vogue. It was simply lying unhonoured. All the people performed their duties and prescribed rites.

"I have explained to you, O King! how they milked the earth and got out of it what they wished, from which it must be understood that at the time of performing sacrificial rites, the thing that each got out of the earth should be offered to him." The learned also call the land Prithvi because it was milked by the old King Prithu, the righteous—23-35

Note—It is called Gò, because it appeared in the form of a cow when Prithu took up his bow and arrow to destroy it.

Here ends the tenth Chapter dealing with the story of Vená

CHAPTER XI

The sages said, "O Súta! be pleased to relate to us the history of the solar and the lunar races."

Súta said that in the days gone by Kaśyapa begot from his wife, Āditu, a progeny named the Sun, and the latter had three wives, viz. —Sámjñā, Rájñi and Piabhá. Rájñi, the daughter of Raivata, brought forth Revata. Piabhá gave birth to Piabháta and Sámjñá, the daughter of Viśvakarma, became the mother of King (Vaivasvata) Manu—2-3

Sámjñá also gave birth to Yama and a girl called, Yamuná, who were twins. When Sámjñá could not bear the power of the Sun, she produced from her body a lady known as Chháyá (shadow). Seeing Chháyá standing face to face, Sámjñá directed her to serve her master and also to take motherly care of her progeny. On Chháyá's agreeing to carry out her injunctions, Sámjñá went away somewhere—4-7

The Sun mistaking Chháyá for Sámjñá begot from her Sávarni Manu so-called because he is of the same Vána as Vaivasvata Manu and Sani, and also the two girls, named Tapati and Víshú. When Chháyá herself became the mother of these children, she began to devote more attention to her own offspring than to the progeny of Sámjñá. Manu did not mind this, but Yama took it seriously, and one day he lifted his right leg to kick Chháyá. Chháyá also, getting in a fit of rage, cursed Yama, and said that his leg would be eaten by worms and would always discharge pus and blood—8-12

Hearing such a dreadful curse, Yama went to his father and told him that he had been cursed for no fault of his by his mother. In a childish freak, he lifted up his foot at her, at which in spite of the entreaties of Manu, she pronounced that curse upon him. Yama, continuing, said that such an attitude of Chhāyā showed that she was not their mother. The Sun said, what could he do. Who does not get into trouble by committing an act of folly? What to say of others, even the omnipotent Lord Śiva had to reap the fruits of His actions. But, in spite of all that, he would give him a cock that would destroy all the worms of his foot and would also remove the blood and pus flowing from it—13-17

On getting no redress from his father, Yama went to Gokarna tirtha, and began to practise severe penances by merely living on fruits, leaves and air. After practising penances for one hundred thousand years, Lord Śiva appeared and asked him to seek a boon—18-19

Yama asked the Lord for the power of protecting the world, the Kingdom of Pitṛs, and the faculty of distinguishing virtue from vice. The Lord granted him the boon he asked for, and then disappeared—20-21

The Sun, causing fear to Chhāyā, discovered that Samjñā, after leaving her behind, had gone to live with her father. At this, he got very angry and went to Kuvera, and asked him to send Samjñā back along with him. Hearing the above words of the Sun, Viśvakarmā said that Samjñā, not being able to bear his power, ran away in the form of a mare after leaving Chhāyā behind. On reaching home, she was very severely taken to task for running away like that, and was denied admittance into the house—22-25

Note — Viśvakarmā means in the form of a mare—which implies that she ran at a great speed from the house of her Lord, the Sun, so that she might not be overtaken by him in the way.

Consequently, she repaired to Maru desa, where she was roaming about in the form of a mare—26

Note — This implies that even in Maru desa, Samjñā was running about here and there at a tremendous pace, in order to find out for herself a good shelter where she could hide herself.

Viśvakarmā, continuing his speech, said that, under the circumstances, he would like to diminish his power, provided the Sun would willingly accord him permission to do so. He suggested that he would reduce his power by means of a special instrument, after which he would become agreeably strong to every one, to which the Sun agreed, and Viśvakarmā by his instrument, Bhrami, sliced away some portions of the Sun’s unbearable power. Viśvakarmā then made a quoit (Chakra) for Viṣṇu, a trident for Śiva and a Vajra (thunderbolt) for Indra to destroy the Daityas and Dānavas out of the particles of power that he took away from the Sun. The Sun after that, became fairly agreeable, but as he did not allow any power to be reduced from his feet, they continued to be very dazzling — 27-30

Note — The feet of the Sun mean the rays.

Nobody could stand the dazzle of his feet, and consequently let no one ever make the feet of the Sun in his image, for the purpose of worship even One who makes the feet of the Sun in his image, goes to hell and suffers from leprosy. Let, therefore, no one, who is anxious for his own welfare, make the feet of the Sun, even in pictures or temples — 31-33

The sun, after thus getting his power modified by Visvakarmá, went out in the form of a horse and enjoyed himself in the company of Samjñá, who, not recognizing him and taking him for another person, became terrified, but was helpless; she consequently ejected the semen viule through her nostrils, out of which Ávimukumáras, called otherwise Násatyas and Dasías, were born. They are called Násatyas, because they were born from the nose (násá), and Dasías, because they were born as Sons. Afterwards, Samjñá recognized her Lord and became pleased, and went with her Lord in a vimána to heaven — 34-37

Note — ‘Asvarupena’ means in the form of a horse—which implies that the Sun being overpowered with passion ran with the speed of a horse to enjoy himself in the company of Samjñá.

‘Manasaśvobham’ = was agitated in mind, because she could not recognize her Lord at the first sight. She met the Sun after a long time, and quite unexpectedly, and then there was a great difference in his features, as his power was moderated by Visvakarmá. The Sun of course recognized Samjñá, and mixed with her in the usual way Samjñá, being overpowered, became helpless, but was very much agitated in mind.

Sávanyá Manu is still living and practising penances unto this day on Mount Mev, and Saní, by means of his asceticism, brought about domestic concord (between the sons of Chiháya and Samjñá) Yaminá and Tapati became rivers, and Vísti obtained dark blue colour and was located in the time (Hell) — 38-39

Vaivasvata Manu had ten powerful sons, the eldest of whom was Ila, who was born by the performance of putriesti sacrifice. His brothers were — Ikswáku, Kušánábha, Arista, Dhruva, Nárayana, Karue, Sáryáti, Piśadvra and Nábhága, who were all very valiant and illustrious. Manu, after anointing his son Ila and putting the reins of the Government into his hands, went to practise asceticism in the forest called Mahendriavana — 40-42

After sometime, Ila started on an expedition of conquest and visited several countries. Following the horse, he happened to enter Sárvána, the pleasure-garden of Śiva which was blooming with various kinds of trees, creepers and perennial foliage — 43-44

Note — Dugrta means conquest

'Aśvakrśitah' means led by the horse. The ancient practice of conquest was that the sovereign wishing to conquer the world used to let loose a horse and follow it with his army. The monarchs through whose dominions the horse passed would either let it pass on without resistance, which implied their accepting the master of it as their sovereign lord, or would capture and tie it up. In the latter case there used to be a fight between the master of the horse and the monarch tying the animal. If the sovereign led by his horse returned to his kingdom after thus subduing the monarchs offering resistance or being acknowledged as their sovereign lord, then he used to perform the Rājasūya sacrifice, in which all the monarchs were invited to take part, at the conclusion of which the sovereign performing the sacrifice used to be declared and accepted as the sovereign lord of all the kings present.

At that time, Śiva and Pārvatī were enjoying themselves in their Saravanas, and they had willed it that any male being, coming within a radius of ten yojanas of their forest, would be transformed into a female being — 45-46

The King Ilā, entering the Saravana, without knowing the will of Śiva and Pārvatī, was instantly transformed into a woman, and his horse was also transformed into a mare. The king, thus deprived of manhood, was very much amazed to find himself in the form of a woman. He was named Ilā and had breasts like women. His thighs became stout, and his face became like the moon—which made him look more enchanting in that female form. Who would not be enamoured by the glances of such a beautiful form? His arms were long, his black tresses of hair were kissing his feet, there were no hair on his body, his teeth were well-shaped, and his voice was exquisitely sonorous — 47-50

His complexion was a happy admixture of dark and white, his strut was graceful like that of hamsa (crane) and elephant, his brows were like the bow and his nails were fine and red — 51

Ilā, of such unsurpassing beauty, began to roam about in that forest, and was thinking as to who and where were her father, brother and mother. She also thought as to who and where was her lord and how long would she have to remain in the world. As she was lost in that reverie, the son of the moon appeared before her. On seeing Ilā, of matchless beauty, Budha—the son of the moon—was fired with passion and began to devise plans for marrying her — 52-54

One day Budha, with a mace, a water-pot and a book in his hand, and accompanied by a train of Brahmacārīs, each holding a bamboo mace and wearing ear-rings, set out in quest of kula and sacrificial fuel. He passed close to that forest where Ilä was roaming. Seeing Ilä, Budha stopped behind a tree, at a distance from the forest, and from there beckoned Ilä to come to him—55-57

Note—Brahmachari means a student. In olden days, students were made to lead the life of perfect celibacy. They carried a bamboo mace and wore ear-rings.

Budha was careful enough not to get within the forbidden limits of the pleasure-garden, for fear of being transformed into a woman.

When Ilä approached Budha, the latter said, "Dear! This is not the proper time for you to roam about in the forest. Why did you come away leaving me at home and neglecting the arrangements of agnihotra? Come, come, why are you looking perplexed? This is the time when you should have put the house in order by washing the floor and decorating it with flowers. It is now dusk, and not the time for you to be sauntering about here"—58-60

Hearing those words of Budha, Ilä said, "Lord! I know not why I forgot to do what you have just said. I am really in a peculiar fit of forgetfulness at present, so much so that I am not able to recognise either myself or yourself. Tell me where you live, O Pious one!"—61

Budha replied that her name was Ilä and that he was Kämuka, who, owing to his versatile genius and deep lore, was known as Budha (a learned scholar). He was born in an illustrious family. His father was the lord of Brähmanas. Hearing those words of Budha, Ilä accompanied him to his residence. She was overjoyed to see the house of Budha with its golden pillars studded with precious stones and erected through divine magic, and greatly admired the character, the appearance, the riches and the family of her husband. Ilä, for a long time, thus enjoyed herself in the house of Budha that looked to her like the house of Indra—62-66

CHAPTER XII

Sītā said that sometime after Kâwang, &c., the brothers of Ilä, set out in quest of him. In their wanderings they chanced to pass by the Śaravana, where they came across the mare, on which was the saddle, glittering with jewels. On seeing the mare with that jewelled saddle, they all recognised it to be Chandraprabhā, the famous charger of the Monarch Ilä. They were highly astonished to find the charger transformed into a mare, and questioned the priest Maṇtrā-Varuna (Vasiṣṭha) about it. The sage began to explain to them the mystery, through his powers of Yoga. The sage Vasiṣṭha said that Śiva and Parvati had determined that any one entering the limits of their pleasure-garden would instantly be transformed into a female figure. Unfortunately, both the king and the horse happened to do so, and they were transformed accordingly. The brothers of the transformed monarch then besought the great sage to devise some means by which Ilā could be restored to manhood — I-7

Vasishtha said that, by devoutly worshiping Śiva, the monarch could be restored to manhood. Hearing that, the brothers of Ilā (Sons of Manu) repaired to the abode of Śiva, where they pleased Him by their devotion. The God then said that He could not go against His determination, but that if Ikṣvāku performed the ādvedha sacrifice, then Ilā would become a Kimpuruṣa (Mongolian type?), though it would be impossible for him to assume his previous (Aryan?) form. After that, the brothers of Ilā performed the ādvedha sacrifice, and the latter became a Kimpuruṣa — II-11

On becoming a Kimpuruṣa, Ilā used to remain in the form of a man for one month and the next month he used to become a woman again. Ilā, in the form of Ilā, conceived in the house of Budha, and gave birth to a notable son, Budha, after the birth of that son, went to heaven — II-12-13

That region where this happened, came to be known as Ilāvṛtavarsa (Mongolia?), and Ilā in that way appeared at the inception of the Solar and the Lunar races, in other words, Purūravā, the son of Budha, from Ilā, was the founder of the lunar race, and Ikṣvāku of the solar clan — II-14-15

Ilā, after becoming Kimpuruṣa, came to be known as Sudyumna. Sudyumna became the father of Utkal, Gayā, Haritāśva. Utkal became the king of Utkala, Gayā of Gayā, Haritāśva of Purvakuru country. Purūravā became the monarch of Pātisthāna and Ikṣvāku of Madhyadeśa — II-16-19

Note — Utkala is modern Orissa. Pātisthāna, the country situated opposite to Allahabad, the modern Jhus. Madhyadeśa, the country lying between the Himalaya and Vindhaya mountains. Kuru, about the site of modern Delhi

Nāśiyanta was the father of Sucha, Nābhaga of Ambarīsa, Dhrīṣṭa of 3 sons, named Dhṛūtaketu, Chitranātha and Ranadhrusā, Saryāti of Ānarta and of a good girl, named Dārikā — II-20-21

Rochamanā was the son of Ānarta. He was very valiant, and was the sovereign of Ānarta country which had Kuśasthali for its capital — II-22

Note — Ānartadeśa is the same as Dwārikā. Kuśasthali is the country situated in the desiles of the Vindhyā

Rochamanā was the father of Keva, who became the father of a hundred children, the eldest of whom was Raivalta, also named

* Professor H H Wilson considered it "not improbably, a gratuitous perversion" of a passage in the Harivamsā (See his translation of Viṣṇu Purāṇa Vol. III p 280, Second Edition)
Kakudmi He had also a daughter, named Revati, who was the wife of Balarama Kausa begot innumerable progeny, who were known by the name of Kausa. Prasadhra became Sudra by the curse of his preceptor for killing a cow —23-24

Rigs! now listen, I am going to relate to you the family of Ikswaku —

Of the hundred sons of Ikswaku, Vikukṣa was the eldest whose fifteen sons reigned in the country to the north of Mount Meru, and one hundred and fourteen to the south of it. The eldest of the kings who reigned south of of Meru was Kakutsu, whose son was Suyodhana, the father of Prithu. The latter was the father of Vivasva, Vivasva of Indu and Indu of Yuvanāṣva.

Sravasta, the son of Yuvanāṣva was the founder of the town of Sravasti, in the country of Gauda —25-30

Note —Sravasti, a town in northern Kosala, where Lava reigned. It is also called Sravasti in Raghuvarma. It is identified with Sabha Mahot, north of Ayodhya. Gauda = Gour in northern Bengal.

Sravasti was the father of Buhadasva, and the latter of Kuvalīva, who was also called Dhundhumāra, on account of his having killed [a demon named] Dhundhu. The valiant Dhundhumāra had three sons; viz. —Dridhāśva, Danda and Kapiśāva —31-32

Dridhāśva was the father of Pranāda, the latter of Haryaśva, Haryaśva of Nikumbha and Nikumbha of Samhatāśva —33

Samhatāśva had two sons, Akritīśva and Ranāśva. Ranāśva was the father of Yuvanāṣva, and the latter of Māndhātā —34

Māndhātā’s sons were —Purukutsa, Dharmasena, Muchakunda and Satrujit —35

Purukutsa who had a son, named Vasuda, was the lord of Narmada Vasuda became the father of Samblīnu, and the latter of Tridhanvā. Tridhanvā was the father of Trayāruna, the latter of Satyavrata and Satyarthaha was the son of Satyaśīla. Satyarthaha was the father of Hamsabhrumba, the latter of Rūhita, Rūhita of Vrika and Vrika of Bāhu. Sagara was the son of Bāhu, and Prabhā and Bhānumati were the two wives of Sagara the pious —36-39

Both the queens of Sagara, desirous of [begetting] sons, propitiated the sage, Aūśva Agni, who became pleased and said that he would bless one to beget sixty thousand sons and the other he would bless to beget only one son, who would continue the line of the Solar race. They were welcome to make a choice for themselves. Prabhā wished to be the mother of sixty thousand sons —39-41
CHAPTER XIII

Bhānumati begot a son, named Asamañjasa, and Prabhā of the family of Yādu, became the mother of sixty thousand sons—42

Once upon a time, the sixty thousand sons of Prabhā were reduced to ashes by the Sage Kapila—an incarnation of Viṣṇu—while they were digging the earth in search of the Aśvamedha house. The wife of Asamañjasa gave birth to Amāu. Dilipa was the son of Amāu, and Bhagiratha, who brought the mother Ganges to the earth after practising great penances, was the son of Dilipa—43-44.

The queen of Bhagiratha gave birth to Nābhāga and the latter was the father of Ambarīsa. Ambarīsa became the father of Sindhudīpa. Sindhudīpa was the father of Ayutāyu, the latter of Rītaparna. Kalmaśpāda was the son of Rītaparna and the father of Sarvakarma. Sarvakarma was the father of Anaranya, and the latter of Nīghna. Nīghna became the father of Anamūtra and Raghu—45-47.

Anamūtra went to the forest to practise penances, and Raghu became the father of Dilipa, and the latter of Aja—48.

Diśghabāhu was the son of Aja, Ajapāla of Diśghabāhu and Daśaratha of Ajapāla. Daśaratha became the father of four sons, who were the incarnations of Nārāyana, and Rāma, who killed Rāvana, was the eldest, and whose biography was written by the great poet Vālmikī. Rāma was the father of Lava and Kuśa—49-51.

Kuśa was the father of Atithi whose son was Nisadha, the latter was the father of Nala, and Nala was the father of Nabhā. Pundatika was the son of Nabhā and father of Kṣemadhanā. Kṣemadhanā was the father of Devānīka. Devānīka was the father of Alināgu, and the latter of Sahasrāśa. Chandrāvalōka was the son of Sahasrāśa and father of Tārāpida. Chandragupt was the son of Tārāpida and father of Bhānu Chandra. The latter was the father of Śrutāyu, who was killed in the great war of Bhārata. In the family of Kāśyapa there were two Nalas, viz—one, the son of Vīrasena and the other of Nisadha.

Sūta said "I have related to you the names of the chief kings of in the dynasty of Vaivasvata and of Ikṣvāku race"—57.

Here ends the twelfth Chapter, describing the Solar race.

CHAPTER XIII

Mānu said "Lord! I am very eager to hear something about the important family of the Pitās of the Sun and the Moon"—(1).

The God Fish replied that, out of the seven groups of the Pitās residing in Heaven, the Pitās belonging to three particular groups are without form, (that is composed of intellectual, not elemental, substance), while the Pitris of the remaining four groups have form (i.e., corporeal) The formless ones are the Pitris of Prajapati Vairaja —(2-3)

The celebrated Vairaja devas, disturbed in their yoga practices having attained to ancient regions, worship there —(4)

These Brahmanavâdins are re-born at the end of Brahma's day, and by their previous practice of yoga, they acquire the memory of their past lives and the knowledge of Sâńkhya Yoga, which begets in them supernatural faculties and enables them to attain to Nirvana. It is therefore very fruitful to feed the yogis at the time of performing a funeral ceremony in honour of the departed spirits —(5-6)

Menâ, the queen of Himalayas was the manas a daughter of the Pitris. She was the mother of Menakâ and Kraunîcha of whom the latter was the elder. The continent, surrounded by the ghîta ocean and adorned with the range of Kraunîcha hills, came to be known as Kraunîcha continent. Menâ also became the mother of the following three daughters — Umâ, Ekaparnâ, and Aparnâ, who were devoted to the practices of yoga and rigorous penances. Himalaya gave Umâ to Sîva, Ekaparnâ to Sîta, and Aparnâ to Jaigisavya. All these were given to performances of great penances —(7-9)

The Rishi said "O Sage Sûta! tell us why Sati, the daughter of Daksa, consumed herself, and how again she took birth as the daughter of Himalaya. "Also tell us in detail, O Sûta, what Daksa, the son of Brahma, told her, the mother of Lokas, at the time of her consuming her body."—(10 11)

Sûta said that when Daksa invited all the Devas to take part in the great sacrifice that he performed, Sati asked him the reason of his having excluded her husband, Sîva. Daksa answered that Sîva was not invited, because he was not considered worthy, since he always remained besmeared with the ashes of the funeral pyre and armed with his trident. He, being the destroyer of the universe also, it would have been utterly insuspicious to invite Sîva on the occasion of that big sacrifice. Hearing those words of Daksa, Sati was enraged, and said she would give up the body begotten of him. Sati continuing, added that, in the course of the performance of his sacrifice, Daksa would be killed by Her Lord—Mahâdeva—and he would again have to take birth as the son of the ten Pitris. After that, Sati produced a blazing fire by Her yogic power in the sacrificial pool, and began to consume Herself into it, seeing which all the Devas, Asuras, Kinnaras and Gandharvas present there, asked what was it due to? Dakṣa became very sad and saluting, said—12-17.

"Devi! Thou art the mother of the universe and the giver of happiness to all. Only through sheer kindness thou tookest birth as my daughter. None of the moveables and immovable can thrive in the universe without thee, be pleased, do not forsake me, O pious one!"—18-19

Hearing the above words of Dakṣa, Sati said "I shall accomplish what I wish. Hear! you should practise penances after your sacrifice is destroyed by Śiva, and then you will be born of the ten Prajāpatis; you shall then have sixty daughters, and I shall give you yoga after becoming pleased with your austerities."—20-22

Dakṣa then asked the Devī to tell him in which sacred places he would find her abode and under what epithets he should worship her in course of his penances—23

Sati replied that she was to be found at every time, in every region, in every being. There was nothing in the universe in which she was not to be found. She was omnipresent. Even then she would name the particular places where penances should be practised to obtain his desires early—24-25

She was known under the following different names, at the following different places, where by practising penances one would attain the fruits of his austerities early—

Vidālākṣi in Kāśi, Lingadhārini in Naimiṣāranya, Lalitā in Prayāga; Kāmākṣi in the Gandhamadana hills, Kumudā at the Mānasa lake; Viśvakāyā in Ambara, Gomati in Gomanta, Kāmacherīni at the Mandar hills, Madotkata in the Chatraratha forest, Jayantī in Hastināpura; Gaurī in Kānyakubja, Rambha on the Mount Malayā, Kirttvati in Ekāmbhaka, Viśvā in Viśvedvara, Purūhutā in Puskara, Mārgadāyini in Kedār, Nandā in the Himālayas, Bhadrakarmikā in Gokarna, Bhavāni in Śthānśēvāra, Bilvapatikā in Bilval, Mādhava in Śrīsaila, Bhadrā in Bhadrēvāra, Jayā in Varāhakṣetra, Kamalā in Kamalālaya; Rudrānt in Rudrāṅkū, Kāli in Kalanjar hills, Kapilā in Mahāṅgī, Mukutēvārti in Markotā, Mahādevi on the banks of the Śalagrāmi river, Jalapriyā in Śivalinga, Kumārtī in Mayāpurī, Lalitā in Santāna, Utpalakṣi in Sahasrākṣa, Mahotpala in Kamalākṣa, Mangala in Gangātirtha, Vimalā in Puruṣottama, Amoghākṣi on the banks of the Vipāḍa river; Pātalā in Pundardhana; Nārayanti in Supārśva, Bhadrasundari in Vīkūṭa; Vipulā in Vipula, Kalyāntī in Malayāchala, Kāśiti in Kōti tirtha, Sugandhā in Mādhavāvana, Trisandhyā in Gōḍārma, Ratnipriyā names before Śiva, on Tritiyā and Aṣṭami, is blessed with many children. One who repeats these names at the time of giving away a cow in charity, or on the occasion of performing a funerl ceremony in honour of the departed spirits, or at the time of worship, goes to Brahma.” After uttering these words, the goddess Satt consumed herself —54-59

Again, after sometime, Dakṣa was born as the son of Prachetā, and Pārvatī after being born as the daughter of Himaḷaya, became the better-half of Śiva. Aunadhāti, after worshipping Pārvatī, the daughter of Menā, obtained the highest yoga. By worshipping the same Pārvatī, Puruśavā became Rājarṣi, Yayāti begot progeny and Parasurāma obtained wealth. Similarly, many Devas, Daityas, Brāhmaṇas, Ksatriyas, Vaiṣṇavas and Śāstras obtained supernatural faculties. Wherever there is a book containing the names of Pārvatī which is worshipped along with the Gods, no calamity befalls there —60-64

Here ends the thirteenth Chapter dealing with the genealogy of the Pitris and the 108 names of Gauri

CHAPTER XIV

Sūta said The group of Maruchinandana Pitris, whom the Devas, constantly meditate upon, live in Somapatha regions. Those known as Agniśvātta pitris (because they performed great sacrifices to fire, i.e., Agni), reside there where these sacrificers dwell, and the river Achchhodā is their Mānasa daughter. In days of yore, the stream Achchhodā was brought into existence by Pitris. Achchhodā practised penance for one thousand years.—1-3

After which, the young and handsome Pitris, wearing beautiful garlands and having sweet scents on their person, appeared before Achchhodā to grant her a boon. She was overcome with passion and expressed the desire of marrying Amāvasu Pitri, on account of which sinful desire she lost the power she had obtained from practising asceticism.—4-6

She used to live in heaven, owing to her supernatural powers, but the moment she had such a base desire she fell to the earth. The date on which she expressed such a desire and Amāvasu Pitri did not give way to passion, came to be known as Amāvāsyā Tithi. Amāvāsyā is, consequently, very dear to the Pitris, and offerings made to them on that Tithi are very heartily accepted by them.—7-8

Achchhodâ, after losing the powers acquired by penances, became ashamed and crest-fallen. She cast her head down and besought the Pitris for her salvation. —9

The Pitris, seeing her weeping, pondered over the destiny and the work of the future Devas, and addressed her very gently. —10

"In heaven, a celestial being has to reap the fruit of his deeds, in the same celestial form. Celestial beings instantly reap the harvest of their actions, only the beings residing on the earth reap the fruits of some of their actions in other forms after death. Daughter, on account of your ignoble wish, you will be born from the womb of a fish in the 28th Dwâpara, and will become the daughter of Vasu. After that, you will return to your region. In an island covered with a number of jujube trees (Badarikâśrama) you will beget, through Parâśara, a son, named Bâdarâyana, who will be a particle of Viṣṇu and will divide the Veda into several parts. You will beget two sons, Chitrâṅgada and Vichitravirya, by becoming the queen of king Sântanu a portion of sea, and having begotten these two Ksetraja sons to that wise one, you will again return to the region of the Pitris, in the form of Praustha aṣṭakā. You will be known as Satyavati on earth, and as Astakâ in Pitriloka. You will be the giver of longevity, of health and fruits of all desires. After some time, you will become the holy and celebrated Achchhodâ river in the world." —11-20

Note—Dwâpara is the third age of the world.

After addressing her thus, the Pitris vanished, and Achchhodâ also began to reap the harvest of her actions, as told by the Pitris. —21

Here ends the fourteenth Chapter describing the dynasty of Agnivâtta.

Pitris and birth of the river Achchhodâ.

CHAPTER XV

Sûta said: "In heaven, there are other illustrious regions called Vibhārajas where dwell the pious Barhiṣada Pitris so named because their Vîmânas are carried by peacocks (barhi) and where people making offerings to the manes of their deceased ancestors go and find happiness. These Pitris are venerated by the Devas, Asuras, Apsaras, Gandharvas, Râkshasas and Yakṣas. The Barhiṣada Pitris, possessed of great Yogic powers, are the sons of the sage Pulastya. They are the givers of safety and freedom from fear to their devotees. These very Barhiṣada Pitris had a mānasa daughter, named Pivari. She was well-versed in, and mother of, Yoga and practised severe penances for a long time, when Lord Viṣṇu pleased with her devotion appeared before her and directed her to ask for a boon; she prayed for a husband who would be beautiful, possessed of Yogic powers and able to curb his passions. The Lord, in granting her that boon, said:

"Thou shalt be the wife of Sūka, the teacher of Yoga, the son of Vyāsa. And thou shalt be blessed with a daughter, named Kṛiti, who will be well versed in Yoga and will be married to the manly Rajah of Panchāla Kṛiti, after practising Yoga, will also be known as Gō, and she will beget a son, named Brahmadatta."

"Thou shalt also become the mother of Kṛiṣna Gaura Prabhu, and Sambhū, who will be great Mahātmās and will ultimately depart to felicity. Thou shalt also attain Mokṣa, after giving birth to such illustrious sons."—11

Note — Mahātmā — magnanimous

Sūta said: "The group of Mānasa Pitrīs, who are most handsome and virtuous and known as Sumūrtimantas (Vasiṣṭha's sons,) reside in the region called Jyotirbhāsas where stars and planets light up their surroundings by their rays. This region is a high one where people making offerings to the manes of their deceased ancestors go and have various enjoyments. Even the Śādras performing śrāddha go to that region in a vimāna, what to say of a Brähmana who performs śrāddha devoutly. Gō was the mānasa daughter of those Pitrīs, and was married to Śukra and who enhanced the reputation of Śādhyās."

"In the Solar world, there are regions called Marichi-garbhas, where Havīsmāna Pitrīs, the sons of Angirā, reside. Kṣatriyas performing śrāddha in a holy place go to the same region, and that is why Havīsmāna Pitrīs are worshipped by Kṣatriyas. Yasoda was the mānasa daughter of Havīsmāna Pitrīs. She was married to King Amāumāna and was the daughter-in-law of Pānchajāna, mother of Dilipa, and grandmother of Bhagiratha."—12-15

"There are other regions known as Kāmadughās, where reside the pious Pitrīs, called Susvada as well as Ājayā in the region of Prajāpati Kardarman. They are the sons of Pulaha and are worshipped by the Vaisyās. The worshippers of these Pitrīs, by performing śrāddha, go to the same region where they see the manes of their deceased ancestors, mother, father, sister, friends, relations, etc." Virajā was the mānasa daughter of Ājayā Pitrīs and was the queen of King Nahuṣa and the mother of Yayati. She was afterwards known as Ekaṣṭakā in Brahmaloka. —20-24

Something has been said about the three groups of Pitrīs who are worshipped by men and have forms, now follows the description of the fourth set of Pitrīs. —25
There is a mānasā region in the upper Brahmāṇḍa which is the abode of Sōmapa Pitrī. They are eternal, the very incarnation of Dharma, and are as venerable as Brahmā. They are born of Swadhā, and having attained Brahmahood, by their power of yoga, they carried on the work of past creations and now rest in Mānasā regions Narmadā, which flows in the southern part, is the mānasā daughter of the Sōmapa Pitrī that purifies the people by her sacred waters —26-28

The Manus have sprung from these Pitrī, and their progeny perform śrāddha even when there is an absence of Dharma in the world. It was they who at the beginning of the Creation started the system of śrāddha, after acquiring yoga and begetting children —29-30

The Pitrī mentioned above, like vessels of silver or of any metal having some admixture of silver. By performing śrāddha in such vessels and by giving them away to a deserving priest one makes them feel very happy —31

Offerings should be made to the Pitrī in the name of Agniṣoma, and Yama. Where fire is not available, then they should be made in water or in the hand of a Brāhmā. It is excellent to make offerings in the ear of a goat or a horse, and, similarly, it is very nice to perform śrāddha near the place where cows are kept or near a good stream of water. Pitrī live in heaven, and offerings should also be made to them by facing towards the south —32-33

At the time of making offerings, one should put his sacred thread on his right shoulder and offer, water, sesame, kūṣa grass, flesh, Pāthīna, cow’s milk, sweet things, the flesh of rhinoceros, honey, śyāmāka, rice, barley, wild rice, kidney-bean, sugarcane, white flowers, clarified butter —34-35

Note.—Pāthīna is a kind of fish. Madhu-sweet, honey, nectar of flowers, wine, water, sōmajuice, milk, vernal season Śyāmāka is a kind of corn

The things mentioned already are appreciable to the Pitrī and should be offered to them, the things not liked by them and which should be discarded at the time of śrāddha are enumerated now, viz — Masār, hemp, ripe black mustard, māsa, safflower, lotus, wood-apple, sunflower, the white thorn-apple, the fruit of Nīma tree, the fruit of Adhatoda vasaka, the milk of she-goat, codiava, split chick pea, liquorice, linseed, should never be offered in śrāddha to the Pitrī by one who wishes to win their favour. One who pleases the Pitrī by devotion, is blessed by them in return —36-39

Pitrī, when they are pleased, give robust health, heaven, and children to their devotees. The worship of Pitrī is more important than that of the Gods. The Pitrī should be satisfied first. They are soon pleased and are devoid of anger. They are harmless and of steady affection. They are of peaceful soul, lovers of purity, always soft speaking, and givers of happiness and prosperity to their devotees. The Sun is their Lord. I have narrated to you the family of Pitris by listening to which one gains life and virtue, therefore everyone should read and listen to it—40-43

Here ends the fifteenth Chapter describing the birth and dynasties of the Pitris.

The following important note on Pitris is reproduced from Wilson's Viṣṇu Purāṇa edited by Fitzedward Hall:

We may here take the opportunity of inquiring who are meant by the Pitris and, generally speaking, they may be called a race of divine beings, inhabiting celestial regions of their own, and receiving into their society the spirits of those mortals for whom the rite of fellowship in obsequial cakes with them, the Sapindikarana, has been duly performed. The Pitris collectively, therefore, include a man’s ancestors; but the principal members of this order of beings are of a different origin. The Vāyu, Matsya, and Padma Purānas, and Hari Vamsa, profess to give an account of the original Pitris. The account is much the same, and, for the most part, in the same words, in all. They agree in distinguishing the Pitris into seven classes, three of which are without form Amūrtayath or composed of intellectual, not elementary, substance, and assuming what forms they please, and four are corporeal Samūrtayath. When they come to the enumeration of the particular classes, they somewhat differ, and the accounts, in all the works, are singularly imperfect. According to a legend given by the Vāyu and the Hari Vamsa, the first Pitris were the sons of the gods. The gods, having offended Brahmā, by neglecting to worship him, were cursed, by him, to become fools, but, upon their repentance, he directed them to apply to their sons, for instruction. Being taught, accordingly, the rites of expiation and penance, by their sons, they addressed them as fathers, whence the sons of the gods were the first Pitris.

The Matsya has

The Pitris are born, in the Manwantaras, as the sons of the gods. The Hari Vamsa makes the sons assume the character of fathers, addressing them, ‘Depart, children’.

Again, the Vāyu Purāṇa declares the seven orders of Pitris to have been, originally, the first gods, the Vairājas, whom Brahmā, with the eye of Yoga, beheld in the eternal spheres, and who are the gods of the gods.

The following is the text in Sanskrit:

॥ ते पुज्रानुप्रेरिता जन्मसंघर्ष विश्रामन् ॥
॥ पूर्व नै पितरांमुक्त वैहेवन प्रतिपोषिता:॥
॥ सोमे नमः प्रजा विरास्ते देवसुनवः:॥
॥ ‘The Pitris are born, in the Manwantaras, as the sons of the gods’ The Hari Vamsa makes the sons assume the character of fathers, addressing them, ‘Depart, children’.

॥ नामस्य तुष्का एव दुहृदताप ते सदा:॥
॥ ते वैराजा इति क्यतं ध्वनयं दितिष्ठत:॥
॥ प्राविशेष इति क्य्तं महासत्त्व नाथस्य:॥
॥ तेषां सत समासमतं गवास्ते ब्रह्मविनिता:॥
॥ यदुर्वातस्तदेवने क्षतात्तु स्मृता:॥
Again, in the same work, we have the incorporeal Pitris called Vairājas, from being the sons of the Prajāpati Virāja.

The Matsya agrees with this latter statement, and adds, that the gods worship them.

The Hari Vamsa has the same statement, but more precisely distinguishes the Vairājas as one class only of the incorporeal Pitris. The commentator states the same, calling the three incorporeal Pitris, Vairājas, Agnishwattas, and Barhashads, and the four corporeal orders, Sukrālas Angirasas, Suswadhas, and Somapas. The Vairājas are described as the fathers of Menā, the mother of Umā. Their abode is variously termed the Sānādka, Sanātana, and Soma loka. As the posterity of Virāja, they are the Somasads of Manu. The other classes of Pitris the three Pūrānas agree with Manu in representing as the sons of the patriarchs, and, in general, assign to them the same offices and posterity. They are the following:

- Agnishwattas—sons of Marichi, and Pitris of the gods (Manu, Matsya, Padma).
- Barhashads—sons of Atri, and Pitris of the demons (Manu) sons of Pulastya, Pitris of the demons, residents in Vaibhraja fathers of Pivari (Matsya, Padma, Hari Vamsa).
- Soma loka and parents of Achchhadā (Matsya, Padma, Hari Vamsa). The Vāyu makes them residents of Yiraja-loka, sons of Pulastya. Pitris of the deities or demons, and parents of Pivari, omitting the next order of Pitris, to whom these circumstances more accurately refer. The commentator on the Hari Vamsa derives the name from Agnī's 'in or by oblations to brahman' and Ātika 'obtained', 'invoked'.
- The three are the formless or incorporeal Pitris.

These three are the incorporeal Pitris: sons of Vaniṣtha, and Pitris of the Brahmana. The Padma calls them Ushmapas. The Hari Vamsa calls the Somapās — to whom it ascribes the same descent as the Vāyu, the Pitris of the Sudra, and the Sukrālas, the Pitris of the Brahmana.

- Havishmatsa — in the solar sphere, sons of Angiras, and Pitris of the Kadātasyas
- Ályapas—sons of Kadāma, Pitris of the Viśūyās, in the Kāmada-loka (Manu, &c.), but the lawgiver calls them the sons of Pulastya. The Pitris of the Vaisāyas are called Kāvyas, in the Nandi-Uparājana, and, in the Hari Vamsa and its comment, are termed Suswadhas, sons of Kardama, descendents from Pulaha.
- Sukrālas—sons of Vaniṣtha, and Pitris of the Sudra (Manu and Vāyu Purāṇa). They are not mentioned in the Padma. The Matsya inserts the name and descent, but specifies them as amongst the incorporeal Pitris.

It may be suspected that the passage is corrupt. The Hari Vamsa makes the Sukrālas sons of Vaniṣtha, the Pitris of the Brahmana, and gives the title of Somapas to the Pitris of the Sudra. In general, this work follows the Vāyu, but with omissions and transpositions, as if it had carelessly mutilated its original.

The Matsya-purāṇa, by evident corruption, gives the Sukrālas — as it calls them — the synonym Vānaśas.
CHAPTER XVI

Besides these Pitris or progenitors, other heavenly beings are, sometimes, made to adopt a similar character. Thus, Manu says, "The wise call our fathers Visnu, our paternal grandfathers, Rudras, our paternal great grandfathers, Adityas, agreeably to a text of the Vedas. That is these divine beings are to be meditated upon, along with, and are not distinct from, progenitors. Hemālī quotes the Nandi Upanishad for a different practice, and directs Visnu to be identified with the father, Brahmad, with the grandfather, and Siva, with the great grandfather. Thus, however, in Sāṇa innovation, the Vaisnavas direct Amrūdha to be regarded as one self, and Pradyumna, Sankarshana, and Vāsudeva, as the three ancestors. Again, they are identified with Varuna, Priyāpatya, and Agni, or, again, with months, seasons, and years." Manu Sūtra, p. 284. It may be doubted how far any of these correctly represent the original notions enunciated by the texts of the Vedas, from which, in the most essential particulars, they are derived.

CHAPTER XVI

Sūta said, after hearing this, King Manu again inquired from the Lord Kṛṣṇa, about the period for the performance of śāḍdiha, the different kinds of śāḍdiha, the twice-born worthy of being fed on that occasion and those who ought to be discarded from the feast, the time of the day when śāḍdiha should be performed, the vessels that should be used in performing the ceremony, the ways of performing the rite and the mode of giving satisfaction to the Pitris—1-3.

The Lord replied that śāḍdiha should be performed daily and the Pitris should be satisfied by offering any of the following things—Grain, water, milk, roots, fruits—4.

The śāḍdiha are of three kinds, viz., Nitya (Daily), Naimittika (Occasional), Kānya (Optional). In performing Nitya śāḍdiha, no oblation (ārghya), invocation or Viṣṇu worship is necessary. Naimittika śāḍdiha is that which is performed on the fourth and the eighth day of each half-month and on the days of the full and the new moon (pārvana days). Parvanas are of three different kinds, hear it O Lord of the world. First, it should be noted what class of people ought to be invited to the feast of Naimittika (Pārvana) śāḍdiha. One who is acquainted with the doctrine of the five mystic fires (Pañcāagna), a Snātaka Brāhmachāri, one who is well versed in the Vedas with their six aṅgas, the Śrutiya Brāhmaṇa, the son of such a Śrutiya Brāhmaṇa, one highly proficient in the rules of Vidyā (or Laws), one who is thoroughly acquainted with the sacred hymns, the minister, one who belongs to a well-known family, one who has a sound knowledge of the Purāṇas, one who knows the dharma, a regular reader of the Vedas, and performer of japa, a devotee of Śiva, Pitri, Sun, Visṇu, and Brāhmaṇa, a Yogi, one who is peaceful, one who can control his passions, one who is virtuous, especially a daughter's son, a friend, a preceptor, a typical sanyāśi, or the head of the Vanśas, a maternal uncle, a member of the community (kinsman), a Ātītijaya priest, a teacher, a Soma-sacrificer, a grammarian, a knower of the Mimamsa doctrine about Sacrifices, one who performs Vedic sacrifices, one who knows the Śāmaveda and how to chant it, one who is so learned, respectable or eminent that his very presence may be considered to elevate and purify the people who sit to feast with him in the same row, the chanter of the Śāmaveda, a Brahmachāri, a professor of Vedas, one who knows Brahma, are the sort of people worthy of being invited to the śāddha feast. Where such people are feasted, the śāddha is real and earnest — 5-13

Note—Dviśa means twice-born. Everyone is born as a Śādra and becomes twice born on being invested with the sacred thread.

Now it should be noted what class of people are to be discarded from such a feast.

The fallen, the cursed, eunuchs, backbiters, those deformed by disease, those having deformed nails, those having yellow teeth, bastards, bastards of widows, horse-tamers, offspring of a younger brother married before an elder brother, those who offer themselves for service, those addicted to drunkenness, mad men, the hard hearted, cheats, swindlers, the conceited, temple priests, the ungrateful, the atheist, inhabitants of a Mlechcha country (Non aryans), Trisankus, of Barbata, and of Dravavita, Dvārā, of Kośkana, and the Ṣāṅgīs (having prominent sectarian marks), should, under no circumstances, be invited to śāddha feast — 14-17

The guests to the śāddha feast should be courteously invited the same day or a day previous to the feast. The Pitrīs accompany the invited twice-born, in the form of air, and sit along with them at the time of the feast. The host should go and invite his twice-born guest by touching his right knee and address him thus: “Thou hast been invited by me, accept my invitation.” After thus addressing, he should remind the guest as well as his paternal kinsman in these words — “You should be without anger, observe purity and rules of conduct the whole of this day,” and I the performer of śūrdha would also observe the same along with you.” — 18-20

One who maintains the sacrificial fire, should perform the śūrdha after offering oblations of water called Tarpana to the Pitrīs, as well as after offering of pindas to them, on every Amāvasya — 21

Śūrdha should be performed near a cow-pen or by a pool of water, after plastering the floor, which should be sloping towards the south, with cowdung. One who consecrates and maintains the sacred fire, should cook rice (charu), and after offering with equal handfuls and saying ("I am offering to the Pitris"), should place everything toward the south — 22-23
CHAPTER XVI

Then he should sprinkle with ghee in front of the three navāpa plates. They should be of the same size, that is, four fingers broad, and place on them balls of rice — 24

Three silver-mounted, smooth ladles, of acau catechu, measuring one hand in length with closed fist, and having the form of the palm of hand at the end, should be made. After putting the sacred thread over the right shoulder, the person performing Śuddhā should put a water goblet, and a vessel of bell-metal, and mekyana (name of a sacrificial vessel), sacrificial wood, Kusa, sesamum, leaf plates, sandal, new cloth and scent, incense, and sandal paste towards the south. After thus putting together the articles for worship, the worshipper should draw a circle by the urine of cow on the floor plastered with cow dung, and there he should worship the circle with unhusked rice and flowers. The worshipper should then wash the feet of his Brāhmaṇa guests with great respect and courtesy, and after offering them water for rinsing their mouth, should seat them on the kusa matting — 25-29

Two Brāhmaṇas should be fed at the time of offering oblations to Gods and three at the time of Pitri worship, or one Brāhmaṇa may be fed on each occasion — 30

Even the rich man should not feast more than this number on this occasion. Water should first be offered to the Brāhmaṇa invited to take part in the rite of offering oblations to the Devas, and his feet should be washed first — 31

By the permission of the Brāhmaṇas, the worshipper, according to the rules of his Gṛhya Sūtras, should take the boiled rice (Charu), in a vessel of bell-metal and offer it to fire, the Moon, and Yama, in the Daśāṅgu, or Ekāṅgu if he does not keep all the fires. He should perform Paryuksana with the sacred thread on the left shoulder, and one who knows all the rites should perform it with the sacred thread thrown on the right shoulder — 32-34

Note — Paryuksana = sprinkling round water silently and without uttering any ritual formula.

After that, six balls should be made of the remaining boiled rice and water mixed with sesamum, and offered with the left hand. Then the worshipper should sit on his left knee, with concentrated attention, and draw a line on the sacrificial altar with kusa blade, and turning his face towards the south he should sprinkle water on the darbha grass with a ladle
After that, he should offer the balls of rice by putting a kusa on the line drawn on the altar and by uttering the name and clan of the ancestor. Then he should wipe his hands with the kusa and thus satisfy the Lepabhāgīs (A paternal ancestor in the 4th, 5th and 6th degree) —35—38

Then water should again be sprinkled on the darbbha grass and the six Pitrīs should be saluted and worshipped with incense, &c —39

After thus invoking them by Vedic hymns, one, who is Ekāgmi, should offer only one ball of rice with a ladle —40

Note —Ekāgmi = one who performs agnihotra

After satisfying the male ancestors, offerings should be made to the female ancestors by means of the kusa grass, who should also be invoked and dismissed in the same way —41

Then he should take a little out of the balls of rice and offer it to the invited guests, according to precedence, making the first offer to the Brāhmaṇas —42

Because the twice born eat the particles from the rice-balls on the occasion of the Amāvaśya feast, it is called Anvahānya —43

First of all, the twice-born invited to the feast, should be given rings of kusa grass to wear on their finger-tips, and then a portion of the ball of rice should be presented to them, after putting a little water and sesameum in their hand by uttering Swadhaśāmastu —44

Note —Swadhaśāmastu = Here is the food to the manes personified

At the time of feasting the invited guests, the host should enquire whether they relish the food. He should in no account be in angry mood. He should concentrate his mind on Nārāyana Han —45

After the invited (Brāhmaṇa) guests are satisfied, the host should, on unsanctified earth, place food with water and rice for the acceptance of all classes. This is called Viśnu (scattering) —46

After the invited guests have washed their hands and mouths, the host should place water, flowers and unhusked rice in their hands, and ask them to sprinkle it on the balls of rice offered to the Pitrīs, pronouncing Swastu (Be comfortable) —47

The Gods should also be satisfied on the occasion of the performance of Suddhā, for otherwise Suddhā is not complete. The Brāhmaṇa guests invited, should be circumambulated before being respectfully dismissed 48

Facing south, the following boon should be sought from the Pitrīs
"You may continue to be our donors. The Vedas may exist, and our progeny may prosper. Let our devotion not diminish, we may have ample wealth to give to the needy, we may have plenty of grain, we may be visited by many guests. People may ask for help from us, we may not have to seek anything from others." This is the Anvāhārya Śrāddha, which is also called Pārvana — 49–51

The Kānya or the third kind of Śrāddha should be performed also in the same manner as the Pārvana Śrāddha described above. It should be performed on Amāvasyā. The balls of rice should afterwards be given to cows, goats, Brāhmaṇas, or should be thrown into fire or water, or they should be made over to birds — 52–53

The ball of rice in the middle should be given to the wife of the host (this is the peculiarity in this Śrāddha). It begets progeny. She should eat the ball of rice after pronouncing the following words: "Adhatta pitara qathāmatra santāna vadhānam." (Pitās grant to me progeny that would continue the line of the house). The host should remain standing till the Brāhmaṇas depart. He should then perform the remaining rites — 51

After the Śrāddha rites are over, the host should make an offering to Varāhadevas by presenting oblations to fire, and then he should enjoy a hearty repast in company of his friends, concentrating his mind on the Pitās — 55

That day one who performs Śrāddha, as well as those who partake in the Śrāddha feast, should not take their food twice. They should not go out of the village when the Śrāddha is performed. They should neither use any conveyance nor approach their wives — 56

The Veda should not be read on that day; the worshipper should not quarrel with anyone, nor should he sleep in course of the day. This is how Śrāddha should be performed — 57

In this way, an Agnihotra should perform Śrāddha in the dark fortnights of the months when the sun is in the sign of Virgo, Aquarius, and Taurus. Whenever the Sapindha kārana Śrāddha is to be performed, there also the above ceremonial should be observed by one who keeps the sacred fire — 58

Here ends the sixteenth Chapter dealing with the ritual of śrāddhas in the case of those who maintain the sacred fire.

NOTE

The following note on Śrāddhas is from Professor Wilson's Vīṣṇu Purāṇa.

The offerings of the Hindus to the Pitās partake of the character of those of the Romans to the lares and manes, but bear a more conspicuous part in their ritual. They are said, indeed, by Manu (III. 208), in words repeated in the Váyu and Matsya Puránas, and Harí Vámsa, to be of more moment than the worship of the gods.

These ceremonies are not to be regarded as merely obsequial, for, independently of the rites addressed to a recently deceased relative,—and, in connexion with him, to remote ancestors, and to the progenitors of all beings,—which are of a strictly obsequial or funeral description, offering to deceased ancestors, and the Pitris in general, form an essential ceremony, on a great variety of festive and domestic occasions. The Nirnaya Sindhù, in a passage referred to by Mr Colebrooke (Asiatic Researches, Vol. VII.) specifies the following Stāddhas: 1 The Nitya, or perpetual, daily offerings to ancestors in general; 2 The Naimittika, or occasional, as the Ekadasi, or obsequial offerings on account of a kinsman recently deceased; 3 The Kamyà, voluntary, performed for the accomplishment of a special desire, such as for the birth of a son; 4 The Vriddham, performed on occasions of rejoicing or prosperity; 5 The Sapindana, offerings to all individual and to general ancestors; 6 The Parvassā Śraddha, offerings to the manes, on certain lunar days called Parvanas, or day of full moon and new moon, and the eighth and fourteenth days of the lunar fortnight; 7 The Goshthi, for the advantage of a number of learned persons, or of an assembly of Brahmans, invited for the purpose; 8 The Sthūdic, one performed to purify a person from some defilement,—an expiatory Stāddha; 9 The Karmāṇa, one forming part of the initiatory ceremonies, of Sūskaras observed at conception, birth, marriage, &c.; 10 The Dānaika, to which the gods are invited; 11 The Yātrā Śraddha, held by a person going on a journey, and 12 The Puṣhti Śraddha, one performed to promote health and wealth. Of these, the four which are considered the most solemn are the rites performed for a parent, on near relative, lately deceased, that which is performed for kindred, collectively, that observed on certain lunar days, and that celebrated on occasions of rejoicing.

Nirnaya Sindhù, p. 172.

CHAPTER XVII

Sūta said: I shall now relate to you what Lord Visnu said about the general ritual of Śraddha (applicable to all whether they keep sacred fire or not), that gives prosperity and emancipation.

Summer solstice, winter solstice the period when the sun is in the equinoctial points, the period when the sun passes from one zodiacal sign into another, the period when any planetary body passes from one zodiacal sign into another, on the Amāvasyā and the asṭaka of the dark fortnight and on the fifteenth day of the moon, the period of the 'Ardrā' sixth, the (Magha) tenth and the (Roha) fourth lunarnoons, the presence of materials and Brāhmaṇas, the time of a gayačchādhyāy, the day of full moon on a Monday, the days called Vṛttis and Vardhāṇa, the third day of the bright fortnight of the month Vāsākha which is the anniversary day of the Śatya Yuga, the 9th day of the bright fortnight the month Kartika the anniversary day of the 'Treta Yuga', the 15th day (full moon) of Māgha, the anniversary day of the Kali Yuga, the thirteenth day of the dark fortnight of the month Bhādra, corresponding to August-September, which is the anniversary day of the Drapara Yuga, are the periods and occasions when, by performing Śrāddha, one gets bliss and exhaustless merits. So also on the anniversary days of the beginning of a Manvantara, as detailed below—2-5

The ninth day of the bright fortnight of the month Āśvin, the twelfth tithi of the month Kārtika, the third lunar day of the month Chaitra, the third lunar tithi of Bhādra, the Amāvasya of the month Phālguna, the 11th lunar tithi of the month Pauṣa, the 10th lunar tithi of the month Āśādha, the 7th tithi of the month Māgha, the 8th of dark fortnight in the month Śrāvana, the full moon days of the months Āśādha, the full moon days of the months Kārtika, Phālguna, Chaitra and Jyeṣṭha, these fourteen days are anniversary days of the beginning of fourteen Manvantaras respectively. These are the periods in which, if the Śrāddha is performed, it gives unbounded satisfaction to the Pitris and brings exhaustless merit to the worshipper—6-8

The seventh day of the month of Māgha is called Ratha Saptami day, named after the Sun's ascending the chariot already mentioned above as the anniversary day of the beginning of a Manvantara—9

The Pitris say that one who offers them a libation of even water and sesamum on the Ratha-Saptami day, gets the same benefit as he would by performing Śrāddha regularly for a thousand years—10

Śrāddha should be performed on the full moon day, in the month of Vaiśākha, at the time of an eclipse, on the occasion of the sacred-thread ceremony and Mahāśāta festival, in a holy city (tirtha), near a place where cows are kept, in gardens illuminated with lamps and in villas after plastering the floor with cowdung, and the Brāhmaṇa guests should be invited to the feast the same day or a day previous in the manner mentioned before—11-12

The Brāhmaṇas invited to the feast should be well behaved, of good deeds and habits, young and good-looking. Two Brāhmaṇas should be invited at Daiva-Śrāddha and three at the Pitrīya Śrāddhā feast, or only one may be invited on each occasion—13

A large number need not be invited, even if the host has great resources at his command. First, the Brāhmaṇa invited to Daiva-Śrāddha should be attended. He should be seated and offered barley and flowers—14

Two vessels should be placed with kusa rings, and water should be poured in one, after uttering, "Om Śaṁnā Deś," etc., and barley should be put in the other, after uttering, "Om yato n" etc. Flowers and sandal should also be put in the vessels offered to the Vasādeva devas with the mantra, "Om Viṣṇudeva," etc., who should be thus invoked and barley should be thrown. After offering flowers and sandal, the host should offer Arghva water to them with the mantra "Vādirya" etc. When the Vasādeva worship is finished, the Pitr worship should be commenced—15-17

First, three kuśa should be placed for the Pitrīs to take their seats on, and then kuśa rings should be placed in three vessels in which water should be poured after reciting, "Om Śannya Dhetu" etc. Sesamum should be offered by reciting, "Om Tila n," etc after which sandal and flowers should be offered. The vessels for the Pitrīs should be made of any of the following materials, viz.—Lotus leaves, wood, conch-shell, gold and silver—18-20

If a silver vessel may not be available, then the worshipper may give away a little silver, if he cannot afford that, then he may simply look at it or merely mention its name. By devoutly offering even water, out of silver or vessels made of alloyed silver, the worshipper gains everlasting bliss. The silver vessels are the best to be used at the time of offering libation and of prāṇas and of food to the pitrīs of water. Silver has come out of the eyes of Śiva, and consequently it is so much appreciated by the Pitrīs, but it should not be employed at the time of Deva worship, for it is auspicious there—21-23

According to his means the worshipper should give away the vessels, and perform Sañkalpa by taking a kuśa in his hand and by reciting, "Om Vā Devya," etc and the name, etc of his father and gota—24

Then the worshipper should say, "Pitrivādavasya,"[I shall now invoke the pitrīs] when the assembled priests [Pitrīs] permit him by saying "Kuru." Afterwards, the worshipper should say, "Uṣantastu," "Ājentawah Putarai," and thus invoke the Pitrīs with these two Rig Vais—25

After saying, "Vā dirya" etc., the worshipper should offer ārghya, that is, some water in a pot, along with flowers and sandal, and should put kuśa rings in the dishes and pour on them the offered water out of the pot, and, after saying "Pitrabhya sthitamasi," should place the pot downwards, to the left of the Pitrī’s seat—26-27

Afterwards the homa "Āgni Karana" etc should be performed, as explained before, and then the worshipper should fetch the pot of food with both hands and put it in the dishes. At the time of putting the food in the dishes, kúa should be held in the hand with serene mind. Several kinds of pulses, vegetables, and other victuals should also be arranged in the dishes. In offering food, curds, milk, clarified butter of cow's milk and sugar should also be put in the dishes. Pitris are exceedingly fond of flesh, so Lord Kéśava has said —28-30.

The Pitris say that the offering of fish keeps them satisfied for two months, the flesh of deer for three months, mutton for four months, the flesh of birds for five months, goat's flesh for six months, Pársat's flesh for seven months, sau's flesh for eight months, ham and buffalo's flesh for ten months, hare and turtle's flesh for eleven months, cow's (fresh and?) milk and rice cooked in cow's milk for a year, the flesh of Ruru for 15 months, lion's flesh for twelve years, Kílasíka (pot herb) and flesh of the rhinoceros for a great number of years, the cow's milk mixed with honey and rice cooked in cow's milk, clarified butter made of cow's milk offered even in a small measure satisfies the Pitris —the Párvadevatás to an extreme degree —31-36.

Note —Pársat, Ruru, Eka specics of deer.

The worshipper should read some of the following —the Vedic mantras relating to Pitrumedha, Párvnas of all kinds, Brahma Súkta, Viṣṇu Súkta, Sátya Súkta, Rudra Súkta, Indrā Súkta, Agni Súkta, Soma Súkta, Párvaná Súkta, according to one's capacity, as well as Viśhahra-thántar Sáma, Jayestha Sáma, Ráhu Sáma, Sántákádhíyáya, Madhu Brahmánas, Mandala Brahmánas any other thing that may appeal to the worshipper and the Brahmánas —37-39.

When the Brahmánas are about to finish their meal, then Viṣhna rite should be performed for all the classes. The food should be put in one plate and scattered in front of the Brahmánas along with some water —40-41.

At the time of performing Viṣhna rite, the following mantras should be read. These mean — Those beings that have been burnt in the fire,

*Professor H. H. Wilson writes —

"The expression gánya implies all that is derived from a cow, but, in the text it is associated with 'flesh', and, as the commentator observes some consider the flesh of the cow to be here intended. But then, he adds, relates to other ages. In the Kali or present age, it implies milk and preparations of milk. The sacrifice of a cow or calf formed part of the ancient raśáhila. It then became typical, or, as a bull was turned loose instead of being strung up, and this is still practised, on some occasions. In Manu, the term Gánya is coupled with others, which limit its application —

क्षम सु महान पवना क्षमिन ।

'A whole year with the milk of cows, and food made of that milk.'"

(Viṣṇu Purána Vol. III p. 199)
those beings that have not been cremated in my family, may feel satisfied by the Vikna rite and attain emancipation. Those who have no father or mother, no brother, no clansman to offer them food, may feel satisfied with the food offered in the Vikna rite and attain peace. Those who were not invested with the sacred thread, those women discarded by their kinsmen, may feel satisfied with the food offered in Vikna—42-44

When the Brāhmaṇas have finished their meal and are satisfied, then water should be poured out on their hands and on the floor plastered with cowdung. Kūśa should be strewn towards the south, and on them the balls of various eatables should be offered—45-46

The balls should be offered after sprinkling water and reciting the name and the gotra of the worshippers as mentioned before in anuvejana rite, then incense, sandal, &c., should be offered, and then water should be sprinkled again. This sprinkling is called pratyavejana. By putting the left knee down on the floor and by holding water along with kūśa in the left hand, the Pitris should be invoked and circumambulated—47-48

Similarly, sandal and dipa should also be offered. After the Brāhmaṇas have washed their hands and mouth, the worshippers should himself rinse his mouth with water and offer water to his guests—49

Note—Dipa—waving a light before the object of worship

Then flowers, rice (unhusked), sesamum, should be offered to the Brāhmaṇas, after which they should be given some Dakṣinā, according to the means of the worshippers, who should offer it to each Brāhmaṇa by calling out his name and lineage—50

Note—Dakṣinā is money offered to Brāhmaṇas

The worshippers should give away cows, land, gold, clothes liked by the Brāhmaṇas, appreciated by the Pitris and appealing to the worshipper’s own fancy—51

There should be no haggardness in the giving of Dakṣinā, and to please the Pitris the worshippers should ask the Brāhmaṇas to do Swadhā-Vachana. Water should be put in the hands of the Brāhmaṇas after viva deva ceremony and the worshipper should receive the blessings of the Brāhmaṇas by facing himself towards the East. He should first say “Aghorāh Pitarrāh Santa,” (“let the pitris be auspicious”), in reply to which the Brāhmaṇas should say “Santa” “(let it be so)”—52-53

The host should again say, “Gotram tathā Vardhatāmnah,” to which the Brāhmaṇas should reply, “Vardhatām (let similarly our clan be increased),” the worshipper should say, “Dātārōbhīvārāhantām (let
The giver of presents increase in our family," the Brāhmaṇas should say, "Vardhantam (may they increase)" the worshipper "Etuṣatyaśvah santu (let these blessings be true)," the Brāhmaṇas "Santu (may it be so)"

After finishing svadhāvāchāna like this, the worshipper should perform "uchchhāsana" at the time of dismissing his invited guests, and, after, that he should perform "griha bali"—54-55

Uchchhasana = is defined below
Urūhabali = domestic oblation Offering of the remnants of meal to all creatures, such as animals, supernatural beings and particularly household Deities

"Uchchhasana" is to leave some food scattered on the floor, for the acceptance of the attendants of the Pitris known as Āstika and Akutika. The Pitris themselves started this rite for the satisfaction of their attendants which should be performed by all—those who have children and those who are childless—55-68

Afterwards, the worshipper should stand before the Brāhmaṇas, made of kusa, with a pot of water, and after reciting "Vājë, Vājë," etc should dismiss them with the kusa end. The worshipper should then move eight steps out of the house, and along with his wife, son and kinmen should complete the rite of śraddha—59-60

Then he should, after sprinkling water silently round the fire, without uttering any ritual formulae, perform Vaśvadeva and Nityabali—61

Note: Vaśvadeva = an offering to all the Deities (made by presenting oblations to fire before meals) Nityabali = daily offering

After the Vaśvadeva ceremony he may partake of the food with his servants, sons, kith and kin and other guests—62

This form of Śādhiranā śraddha can be performed even by those, who have not been invested with the sacred thread, those who are in a foreign country and have not their wives with them. The Śūdas may also perform it without reciting any sacred formulae—63-64

The third śraddha is called Ābhyutaka, which is also known as Vṛddhi śraddha. It is performed on auspicious occasions such as a big sacrifice, marriage, etc—65

In Vṛddhi śraddha, offerings are made in the following order—Mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, father, grandfather, great-grandfather, maternal-grandfather, maternal great-grandfather, maternal-great-grandfather, Vaśvadeva—66

The worshipper, after circumambulating, turn his face towards the East and should then remove the balls made of curds, uncooked rice, fruits, water, and laden with kusa and dūrva grass—67
The Brāhmaṇas should be offered water (āhya) twice, with the words, 'Sampunnam, (accomplished)’ and should be worshipped and offered clothes, gold, &c., by the twice-born — 68

Barley should be offered in lieu of sesamum, this is also called Nādumukha śāḍḍha, and propitious mantras in performing it should be uttered — 69

A Śūdra can also perform the ordinary as well as the Vridhi śāḍḍha with uncooked grain, by uttering the formula of namah instead of Vedic mantras — 70

For thus said the Lord Bhagavān — Charity is the best thing for a Śūdra, by performing which he gains all his ends — 71

Here ends the seventeenth chapter describing the Śudhārana and Ahmyadayā Śāḍḍhas

CHAPTER XVIII

Śūta said: I shall now relate to you the Ekoddhata śāḍḍha, as explained by the Lord, and will also tell you what period a son should consider himself defiled after the death of his father. By the death of a kinsman (Sapinda), a Brāhmaṇa remains defiled for ten days, a Kṣatriya for 12 days, a Vaiśya for 15 days, a Śūdra for a month. By the demise of one whose tonsure ceremony was not performed, one remains defiled for 3 nights. Similarly, people of all classes are defiled for a period when there is a child-birth in the house. At the time of a death till the corpse is burnt and the ashes are collected, the person in whose family the death occurs should not be considered contaminated. Commenting from the day of the demise of the person, a lump of food should be offered to the departed spirit, for a period of twelve days. That offering is Pathyā (that is viaticum) and is consequently most agreeable. — 1-5

In case of offering Pinda to the deceased on the 12th day after his death, the attendants of Yama do not carry the spirit to the city of the God of Death, and during this period the departed spirit sees his sons, wife or any other member of the family, and observes whether they provide it with something for its comfort on its long journey or not. It is for this reason that a pitcher full of water is suspended from a tree, for a period of ten days. Its water soothes the heat of cremation and also refreshes the spirit when it gets weary on the great journey — 6-7

A Brāhmaṇa on the 11th day after death should feast 11 Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas, &c., should feast an uneven number of Brāhmaṇas. On the day following the completion of the period of defilement, one should perform the Ekodripta śrādhdha in which all the ceremonies previously described, barring invocation and homa ceremony of Viśvadeva, should be performed In this Śrādhdha, only one kūṣa ring should be put on, and only one offering of water (ārghya) and ball of food (pinda) should be made After reciting “Upaṭṭhatām,” sesamum and a handful of water should be offered – 8-10

Note — Upaṭṭhatām = It is offered to thee

Śvāhitām should be recited at the time of performing the Viṅgara rite, and Abhūvamyaśātām should be uttered at the time of dismissing the departed spirit The rest of the rite should be performed, as explained before Similarly, Śrāddha should be performed each month, and, on the second day of the completion of the period of defilement, a well-bedecked bed should be given away At the same time, an image made of gold and well dressed, should also be given away and the Brāhmana as well as his consort should be worshipped, after being well dressed and made to wear good ornaments A bull should be set free, and a really good cow and a pitcher full of water, along with nice eatables, should also be given away The pitcher should be filled with sesamum along with water After a year, the Sapind-karana śrādhdha should be performed After the performance of Sapind-karana śrādhdha the deceased (pieta) becomes entitled to receive a share out of the Pārvana śrādhdha and become eligible for worship at Vṛddhi śrāddha, and the householder also becomes entitled to perform Nindumukha śrādhdha, &c Viśvadeva rite is performed in sapind-karana śrādhdha, and the ancestors and the fresh departed spirits are offered separate seats Water, mixed with sandal and sesamum, should be put in four different vessels for offering The vessels meant for the Pitrās and the departed spirit should be mixed together —11-18

Similarly, four balls of food should be offered, and, after reciting yē samāviti samannik, the balls meant for the departed spirit should be divided into three parts and mixed with the balls of food meant for the Pitrās Excepting in Sapind-karana śrādhdha, there is no separate rite for the deceased in any other ceremony The departed spirit becomes delighted by the performance of sapind-karana, for it then joins the Pitrās (and ceases to be a pieta) The departed spirit joins the Agnīyuddā group of Pitrās and drinks with them nectar, and it is for this reason that no Pindidāna is performed for the departed spirit after the sapind-karana The ball of food (pinda) should only be offered to those who join the group of Pitrās After sapind-karana, three balls are offered on the occasion of an eclipse or when the sun or any planetary body passes from one zodiacal sign into another, and on the date of demise only one ball is offered. If on the date of death one leaves the Ekoddhata śrāddha and performs the Pārāvritta, he commits a sin equal to that of murder of father, mother and brother, and goes to hell —19-25

The deceased, after living with the Pretas (spirits) for a long time, begins to feel uncomfortable. It is therefore necessary that Ekoddhata should be performed every year. One who, being devoid of jealousy, gives away a jar full of water along with grain for one full year, for the benefit of the departed spirit, has the same reward as is obtained by performing the Āsvamedha sacrifice —25-26

When a śrāddha is performed with uncooked grain, then Agni-karana and Pindadāna should also be performed with the same. By the performance of sapind-karana, the deceased soul joins the first three groups of Pitris, and then it finds emancipation in process of time. Even after attaining emancipation they get their share of (lepa) śrāddha by the hands being wiped with a kūta. From the 4th to the 6th generation, the forefathers get their share of śrāddha from the Kūta wiping (lepa) and not pindas, and three generations, father, grandfather and great grandfather, they are entitled to the ball of food (pinda), the seventh being the given of the Pinda. These seven are known as sapindas for the sapinda hood includes these seven counting the performer of the sacrifice —27-29

Here ends the eighteenth chapter dealing with the ceremony of sapind-karana

CHAPTER XIX

The Rīsas asked —How the offerings to the ancestors and the Devas are to be made here by men. They also requested him to explain to them in what way the offerings made in this world reach the Pitris in the Pitṛlokā and who is the medium between the Pitris and the man who makes offerings. We see that men eat and offerings are made in the fire, how do they then reach the deceased? —1-2

Sūta said —It is written in the Veda that the eight Vasus are the Pitris, the eleven Rudras are the Pitāmāhas, and the twelve Ādityas are the Prapātāmāhas. The recitation of name and clan of the Pitris by means of the sacred formula with devotion, carries the offerings made to the Pitris —3-4

Agni-vatā, &c., are appointed as rulers of deceased ancestors. They transport the offerings made to the ancestors even though they have been reborn in the meanwhile under another name, clan, place and time. The Pitris carry the ball of food offered in the form of nectar if the deceased ancestor has become a Deva through his good kāmā. If he is reborn as a Daitya, the offering reaches him in the form of worldly enjoyment. If taking birth as a beast, he gets it in the form of grass, those in the body of serpents get it in the form of an, those in form of Yaksas get it as wine, those in the body of the Rākṣasas get it in the form of flesh, those in the body of dānavaś get it in the form of māyā (delusion or glamour), those in the form of ghosts get it as blood and water, and those who are born as human beings get it in the form of grain and water and other multifarious objects of enjoyments—5-9

The faculty of sensuous enjoyment, beautiful women, delicious vihnals and the power of enjoying them, wealth, the power of charity, handsome form, health are the flowers offered in Śiddhā performed with devotion. The attainment of Bījāna, good age, sons, wealth, knowledge, heaven, bliss of emancipation are the fruits offered in Śiddhā—10—11

The Pitris confer kingdoms on their devotees when they are pleased and it is also said that the sons of Kauśika Rishi attained Nivāna through the glory of the Pitris, in their fifth cycle of birth—12

Here ends the nineteenth chapter dealing with the ritual of Śiddhā

CHAPTER XX

The Rishis asked the sage Sūta to relate to them how the sons of Kauśika in their fifth cycle of birth, putting an end to their desires, attained emancipation by their power of Yoga—1

Sūta said, once upon a time there lived in Kuruksetra a virtuous Rishi named Kauśika. He had seven sons. Every one of whom did the deeds as connoted by their respective names. They were—Svaśripa, Krodhana, Himsra, Piśuma, Kavi, Vāgdustha, Pitrīvarti. They were pupils of Garga—2-3

Note—Svaśripa=Moving at pleasure or will, Krodhana=Irascible, Himsra=Savage, Piśuma=Backbiting, Kavi=Poet, Vāgdustha=Scurilous, Pitrīvarti=Devotee of the Pitris

After the death of their father the land was visited with a terrible famine when a large number of people were ruined owing to the cessation of rain and many died of starvation. In those days the seven sons of Kauśika used to look after the cow of Garga and were residing in a forest. One day not getting anything to eat they felt fearfully oppressed with the pangs of hunger. In those circumstances they resolved saying we shall eat the cow to appease our hunger. At that stage the youngest of them all, said to his brothers — "If this cow must be killed, let us sacrifice her to our pitris in śāddha for the cow sacrificed with that view would decidedly save us from all sin." "Do so," said the other brothers to Pitrivarti. The cow was sacrificed and Pitrivarti performed the śāddha with great devotion. Two brothers officiated for the Brāhmaṇas invited to Vīśvedeva site, the rest three similarly officiated for the Brāhmaṇas, invited to take part in the Pitrī-karma and the seventh one represented the Atithi. In this way they all after performing the śāddha with due Mantras and Meditating on Pitrīs feasted on the sacrificed cow — 4-9

Note — Atithi = guest According to Manu

After that they repaired to their preceptor — Garga and delivering the calf to him said "Guru! the cow has been devoured by the lion, this calf was saved, which take back" — 10

In that way the seven ascetics committed fearlessly a cruel act on the strength of the Vedic injunction and ate the cow — 11

In process of time they were all gathered to their fathers and were re-born in the house of a hunter, but as they performed the śāddha with great devotion they had a recollection of their previous life through the glory of the Pitrīs. They were however born in the family of a hunter on account of their having committed a cruel deed, but as they had a recollection of their previous life, they in a fit of asceticism spurned at all mundane luxuries and put an end to their existence by fasting — 12-14

Afterwards they were re-born as deei on the Kālaṇijjā hill and through the glory of the Pitrīs maintained their recollection of their previous lives. They then devoted themselves to the Pitrīs and the God Śiva — 15.

They again gave up the ghost by carrying on the penance of fasting, and were re-born in the form of Chakravāka bird on the banks of the Māna Sarovara lake, under the following names — Sumanā, Kumuda, Śuddha, Chhirdarāśi, Sunetra, Sunetra, and Āmśumān. They were endowed with the attributes connoted by their respective names and did similar deeds — 16-18

Note — Sumanā = Pleasing to the mind Beautiful Kumuda = lotus Īuddha = Pure Chhirdarāśi = Captious, Critical Sunetra = Having good eyes Sunetra = Having beautiful eyes Āmśumān = Illustrious

Out of those seven, the three fallen from yoga began to roam about hither and thither. One day they came across Vibhṛāja the valiant king of Pâñchala who was enjoying himself in his pleasure garden and had a large retinue of followers and conveyances—19-20

Pitravati the youngest of all the brothers and who had performed the Śāḍḍha, became desirous of becoming a king, the other two brothers wished to become the courtiers of a king, the remaining four did not cherish any wish and they were consequently born as Brāhmaṇas. One of them (Pitravati) was born as Brāhmadatta, the son of King Vibhṛāja, two brothers were born as Kandarika and Subālaka the sons of the king’s minister, and sometime after that, Brāhmadatta was anointed and proclaimed as king—21-24

Brāhmadatta was the most illustrious sovereign of Pâñchala. He ruled the country with great piety and even-handed justice. He was well-versed in all the Sūtras, yoga and understood the languages of all animals—25

The cow that was sacrificed and feasted upon by them as the sons of Kaúśika was born as Saññati the daughter of Devala and was eventually married to Brāhmadatta. Because she had served as an offering of the Pitrīs, she became learned in the Brahma lore, and the king ruled the country to the satisfaction and prosperity of his subjects in conjunction with his noble consort Saññati—26-27

On one occasion the king in company of his queen in his pleasure garden saw an ant attempting to please his better-half. Being overpowered with the arrows of Cupid, the ant crawled behind its help-mate and said “Ah! my love! I have not seen a prettier and sweeter form than thine in any of the three regions. See how delicate thy waist is? Both thy thighs resemble the plantain trunk, thy swelling breasts, thy strut of an elephant, thy golden complexion, thy melodious voice resembling that of the cuckoo, thy enchanting smile, thy eyes like lotus, thy tongue that loves the taste of pure sugar, are indeed matchless. Thou art an ardent devotee of thy husband so much so that thou wilt never breakfast before me, thou wilt always bathe after me, thou art always gloomy during my absence, thou always shiverest when I am in an angry mood, what is the reason of thy turning your face away from me in anger today?” Hearing such a speech of the ant his wife said “Do not talk like that, you are false to me; I know all thy tricks, yesterday thou feasted another with the particles of sweet.” 28-34.

The ant said “Dear! I mistook her for you as she resembled you so minutely and through this oversight I feasted her with sweets. This is however my first fault which you should forget and forgive. I shall never repeat such a blunder, I promise this sincerely, be pleased, I fall at your feet"—35-36

Sūta said that on hearing the flattering words of her lord, the ant dismissed all her rage and offered herself to him—37

The King Brahmādatta who knew the language of all creatures by the grace of Viṣṇu, was highly astonished to hear what transpired on the couple—38

Here ends the twentieth chapter dealing with the derision of the she—

CHAPTER XXI

The Rṣis asked—How did the King Brahmādatta acquire the faculty of understanding the language of all creatures and in what family were the other four cranes born?—1

Sūta replied—They were born in the family of a poor and old Brahmā in the kingdom of Brahmādatta and they had a recollection of their previous lives—2

Dhritumāna, Tattvadāri, Vidyāchanda and Tapotsuka were the four sons of the poor Brahmā—Sudarśana—and they all had the attributes connotated by their respective names—3

Note—Dhritumāna=Steadfast Tattvadāri=Philosopher Vidyāchanda=Very learned Tapotsuka=eager to practise asceticism

They all determined to acquire emancipation by practising asceticism—4

Sudarśana felt very miserable when he came to know of the resolution of his sons and in a very plaintive tone asked them the reason of their doing so. He tried his best to dissuade his sons from doing that and said that to repent to forest leaving an aged father behind in a helpless condition was no virtue, and what would be their fate for doing that act. Hearing those words of their old and infirm father they said that he should not stand in their way and that God had made ample provision for his subsistence. By reading the following sloka before his king he would get plenty of money and villages—5-8

"The seven sons of the Brahmā in Kurujāṅgala were re-born as the sons of a hunter in Dāsapura, again they were re-born as deer on the Kāliṣṭhā hills and then again as cranes on the banks of the Mānasā lake, we are those very same who have now attained final beatitude"—9

Thus addressing their father they departed from him to practise penances in the forest. The father crawled towards the King’s palace in order to get some money from him—10
Anagha, the son of Vibhrāja the valiant sovereign of Pāñcāla adored the God Visnu with the object of getting an heir. Sometime after, the Lord being pleased with the king’s devotion appeared before him and asked him to seek a boon. On hearing those words of the Lord, the king sought the following boon — 11-13

“Increase grant me a son who may be powerful, illustrious, dutiful, very conversant in all the śāstras and yoga, and who may be conversant in the languages of all the creatures.” The Lord said “Be it so” and vanished then and there. Consequently his son Brahmadatta was so illustrious. He was sympathetic, valiant, conversant in the languages of all the creatures, the ruler of all the beings — 14-17

Brahmadatta understanding what transpired between the ant and his helpmate, laughed — 18

The Queen Saunati seeing his lord laughing apparently without any rhyme or reason asked him the cause of his doing so. She said “Sir, why are you laughing without any reason, will you please explain it to me?” — 19-20

Sūta said that after hearing those words of his consort the king said that the conversation between the ant and his better half made him laugh so much and so suddenly. There was no other reason for his doing so. The queen said that the explanation was not true, and that he laughed at her. She would give up her life. How could a mortal understand the language of lower beings without being a God? — 21-23

“What more disgrace can there be than this.” Hearing those words of the queen the king became speechless. In order to please the queen, the king observed a penance and began to worship Lord Visnu without tasting any food for a week. The God appeared to him in a dream and said “you will come across an old Brāhmaṇa tomorrow in course of your rambles in the town and you must acquaint yourself with everything from him.” Saying that the Lord vanished — 24-26

In the morning the king in the company of his queen and courtiers came across the old Brāhmaṇa in the suburbs of the town. The Brāhmaṇa recited the same śloka which his sons had taught him at the time of their departure to the forest — 27-28

The king along with two of his ministers instantly got the recollection of their previous lives on hearing the śloka and the sovereign fainted and fell on the ground. Subālaka the son of Vabhru and the author of the erotic science and the scholar of all the śāstras, Kandarika the propagator of the Veda's, getting a recollection of their previous lives fell on the ground in a swoon —29-31

Recovering from their fainting fit, they all three repented of their fate and said "Oh! we have become devoid of Yoga by falling into the snare of desires" —32

Afterwards they extolled the blessings of śrāddhā and dismissed the Brahmaṇa with presents of money and villages —33

On the departure of the Brahmaṇa, the king handed over the reins of the Government to his son Viśvakṣena and afterwards left the empire along with his two ministers. They all seven joined one another at the Manasa lake —34-35

Brahmadatta and his brothers the great devotee of the Pitṛis were very pleased, but Sannati was very sad on the idea of her being the cause of her husband's abdication and said "Dear! It is owing to me that you have abandoned your mundane empire" —36-37

The king said "Darling! Indeed it is through thee that we all have liberated ourselves from the bonds of the world." Thus praising the queen they all after practicing Yoga attained final beatitude after letting the Jīva-atma escape from their body through the Brahmarandhra —38-39

Note —Brahmarandhra an aperture in the crown of the head through which the soul is said to escape on its leaving the body. See the Sacred Books of the Hindus — Vol XV — The Yoga Sūtra

The Pitṛis on becoming pleased thus bestow on their devotees, long life, knowledge, heaven, emancipation, comfort, and empire —40

One who relates, reads or listens to the history of the Pitṛis and king Brahmadatta enjoys pleasures for ages and ages in the Brahmaloka —41

Here ends the twenty-first chapter narrating the story of Brahmadatta and the power of Pitṛis

CHAPTER XXII

The Rājas said —"When does that śrāddhā give everlasting benefit? In what parts of the day and at what sacred places should it be performed?" —1

Sūta said —Charity performed a little after midafter in the third part of the day in Abhijit or Rohini gives everlasting benefit. I shall enumerate to you in a nutshell the chief holy places that are dear to the Pitṛis —2-3

Note —Abhijit is the name of asterism

Gayā is the principal Pitṛitīthā Lord Brahmā Himself resides there and the Pitris anxious for a share in the offerings have sung this story there --4-5

It is well to wish for a number of sons, but if even one son goes and performs śādha there at Gayā, or performs the Āśvamedha sacrifice or sets free a black bull, it is more than ample for the satisfaction of the Pitris. The sacred Vārānasi (Benares) which is the abode of Viṣṇu, the giver of Prosperity and Emancipation, is also dear to the Pitris — 6-7

Prayāga is another Pitūtitha that fulfils the desires of the worshipper. It is the abode of Vatesvar who was located there by Viṣṇu and Lord Keśava always is lost there in His reveries of yogi — 8-9

Dāsāvamedha, Gangādvāra, Nandā, Lalitā, Mayāpuri, Mitrapada, Keśāra, Gangā-sāgara, are also the sacred places where śādha should be performed — 10-11

So is Brahmāsara a pool in the Satadṛa river and Naimiṇa the trysting place of all the tithas, are also very dear to the Pitris — 12

Gangodbheda, in the Gomati, Varāha-kṣetra which is the abode of Mahadeva and the eighteen handed Siva, the place where the quot (chakra) of Viṣṇu fell is Naimiṇiānya which is the most sacred of all the tithas and where Lord Varāha is worshipped are all sacred places. One who goes there is liberated from all his sins and attains Emancipation — 13-16

Iksumati tīrtha where resides the God Nrisinha is held very dear to the Pitris, it is on the confluence of the Ganges — 17

Kuruksetra is another most sacred place where all the Pitris are always present — 18

The river Śaśāyā venerates by all the Devas is holy and so is the sacred Irawati, the rivers Yamunā, Devikā, Kāli, Chandrābhāgā, Druḍadvatī, Venumati, Vetravatī are sacred and dear to the Pitris, and śādha performed on their banks confers great benefits on the worshipper — 19-20

Jambūmārga whence the path of the Pitris is visible is a Pitūtitha unto this day. The pitūtitha Nilakunda, Radrasarvara, Mānsarvara, Mandākini, Achchhindā, Vipāśa, Sarasvati are also sacred tīrthas — 21-23

Ptvaṃtṛtāpadā, Vadiyamātha, the river Keśprā, Mahākāla, Kālinjaram-hill are also very sacred places — 24

Vanīodbheda, Hariodbheda, Gangodbheda, are among the sacred places and so are Bhadravāra, Viṣṇupāda, Narmadādwara. Offering Piṇḍa there is equivalent to offering it in Gayā. These are the Pitūtithas that wash off all the sins of man — 25-26
The mere recollection of these sacred places gives great benefit, what to say of those who perform śrāddha there Omkāra, Kāveśi, Kapilodaka, the confluence of the river Chandavegā, Amarkantaka are also sacred places where by bathing one gets hundred times more benefit than by bathing at Kuruksetra Śukratirtha, Pindārī, Someswara are the sacred places that dispel all impediments and it is very pious to perform śrāddha or give charity there. Kāyāvalokana, Chāmanvatī river, Gomati, Varanā, auñas, Bhairavaksetra, Bhṛguṭṭa, Gaurītirtha, are also holy places. Vamāyaka, Bhadresvāna are the holy places that release one from sins and so also Tapti river is sacred. Mālatāpi, Payosni, and her confluence Mahābodhi, Pātalā, Nāgaśeśa, Avanti, Mahāvāla, Nīrāvalī, Venā, Mahāśeśa, Mahālinga, Nīrāvalī, Daśārā, Sāturā, Sātālā, Vīśvāmbara, the river Nāgārājā, Sona river, Gāgharā river, Kālīka river, Vīśvāmbara, Drumā river, Vātā river, Dārā, Kesā river, are also the places where śrāddha being performed gives great satisfaction to the Pitris Gokarna, Gaṇakarna, Pūrusottama, Dwārakā, Arvinda, Sarasvatī river are among the holy places. The rivers Manimati, Girikarnikā, Bhutapānap, the southern ocean, Megahkaraā tīrtha which is the abode of Janāīlana and Visnu, Mandodari tīrtha, the river Champā, Sāmalnātha, Mahāśeśa river, Chakravāka, Chārakotā tīrtha, Janmēśvāra, Ajāṃaksetra, Tripuratīrtha, Sīdhesvāra, Śrīśaila Nārāsinha, are also the places fit for performing śrāddha for the satisfaction of the Pitris Mahēśvāra, Śrīrāta are the places where śrāddha should be performed. They are so sacred as to free one from sins merely by going there. The rivers Tungabhādrama and Bhumaśthū, Bhumeśvāra, Kusānē Venā, the rivers Kāveśi, Kudmalā and Godāvari, Tisāndhyā tīrtha, Trāyāvākā the abode of Śiva and which is universally venerated, are very holy places. A mere recollection of these holy places dispels all sins and the performance of śrāddha there gives unbounded satisfaction to the Pitris.

The rivers Śrīparṇi and Tāmraparni, Jayātīrtha, the sacred river Matsya, Śvadhārā tīrtha, Bhādha, the river Pampā, Rāmeśvāra, Elāpurā, Alampura, Anagatabīta, Anandākamalā, Budhā, Amāšākeśvāra, Ekāmbhākā, Govardhanā, Harīchandira, Kṛūpachandra, Prithudakā, Sahajākṣa, Hiranyākṣa, the river Kadali the abode of Rāma, Sāumitra Śatāgama, Indrakīla Mahānāḍa, Elakṣetra, are very sacred places owing to the abode of gods and śrāddha performed there highly satisfies the Pitris. The sacred Bihū river, Siddhāvāna, Padupāta, the river Pārvatikā, are the places where the performance of śrāddha is many times more beneficial. Pitṛitīrtha near the Godāvari river which teems with myriad of images of Śiva is an exceedingly sacred place. It is also known as Jāmadāgni tīrtha. It is there that the river Godāvari has become ruptured through the fear of Pratika Rishi. It is both Deva as well as Pitṛ tīrtha and is also known under the name of Aparayọyuga. There the performance of śrāddha, Agnihotra and charity is held millions of times more sacred. Sahasralīṅga, Rāghavesvara, the river Indrapañcā, where India had His downfall and where He after destroying the demon Namuci went to Heaven by the practice of penances, are the places where the performance of śrāddha by men bears everlasting fruit. Puskara, Śāligñāma, so also Somapāna, the home of Vasūvānara are Sacred tīrthas — 49-81

Sārasvatī, Swāmī, the river Malandarā, Jālandhara, Mount Lohadanda, Kauśikī river, the river Chandikā, the river Varambhā, Vatrā, the river Payosni, Pāṅgumukhā river, the Kāvernī, Chitrakūṭa, Vindhīchala, Kubjābhra, the banks of the Uvaśī river, Samsāramochana, Rīnamochana, Attahāsā Gautameśvara, Vasistha, Hīrīta, Bālmāvītā, Kusāvarta, Haya, Pindāraka, Satkhodhāra, Ghaoteśvara, Vilvakeśvara, Nilkeśvara, Dhanarindhara, Rāmūtthī, Āśvya, Vedaśī, Aughavatī river, Vasupradha, Chāgliānta, Badari, Gana, Jayant, Vijayaśakra tīrtha, Śripati, Raivata, Śrādā, Hhadakāleśvara, Vaikuntha, Bhimeśvara, Mahādeva, Mātrigrāhā, Karavitapura, Kuseśhara, Gaurīkīhara, Nokulesa, Kaimināla, Dindi, Pundarikapura, Godāvari the abode of Tirthesvara, are the places where by performing śrāddha one gives complete satisfaction to the Pitris and paves the way for the attainment of final beatitude — 62-78

I have enumerated to you the names of the Tirthas very briefly. Even Bṛhaspati cannot adequately describe their glory what to say of a man — 79

Satya tīrtha (observance of truth), Dayā tīrtha (performance of charity), Indriyaṅgīra (control of passions) should be considered as tīrthas even by those who cannot leave their homes for purposes of pilgrimage — 80

Śrāddha performed at these places is millions of times more sacred. One should therefore perform śrāddha with devotion and according to the rules laid down, at these holy places — 81

The three morning mūhūrtas are called saṅgava, the three mūhūrtas in the midday and afternoon are uttama, the evening mūhūrta which should be avoided, or śrāddha is Rākṣasi. There are fifteen mūhūrtas in the day and the 8th of them is called the kutṣapa — 82-84

Note—Muhūrta—A period of 48 minutes
In the noon the movement of the sun becomes slow therefore it is best to perform śrāddha at that time —85

The hour of midday, a vessel of rhinoceros horn, a Nepal blanket, silver, Darbhā grass, sesamum, kine, and a daughter’s son, are the eight essentials of a śrāddha. Kutapā is another synonym of Pāpa (sin) and the eight things enumerated above consume (tapā) all sin (ku), therefore they are known as kutupās —86-87

The nine muhūrtas after the kutupa muhūrta are known as Svadhiḥ —88

Kuṭa and black sesamum were produced from the body of Viṣṇu, that is why they are necessarily employed in the performance of śrāddha. The devas have also said that a handful of water mixed with sesamum and offered by the residents of a sacred place by holding kuṭa in one hand, is also a kind of śrāddha —89-90

Śrāddha should be performed with one hand only but Tarpana with both hands —91

Sūta said that the performance of śrāddha in a holy place gives long life and washes off all sins, this has been said by the Lord Mātsya. —92

One should recite it at the time of śrāddha one who reads it or hears it becomes wealthy, consequently the residents of a holy place should recite it to dispel all their sins —93

This śrāddha mahātmya is the dispeller of all sins and it is venerated by Śiva, Brahmā and the God sun —94

Here ends the twenty-second chapter enumerating the Sacred tithas for Śrāddhas

CHAPTER XXIII

The Rishi said —How did the moon O scholar of all the Śastras, become the sovereign of the Pātris and how did the Rājas of the lunar dynasty become so illustrious? —1

Sūta said —At the time of the first creation, the sage Atri as desired by Brahmā practiced austerities for the purpose of creation —2

The Blissful Brahmā, the dispeller of all troubles of the world and who is enshrined within Viṣṇu, Śiva, and the sun Rudra and who is supersensuous and is the giver of all peace and who is enthroned in the eyes of peaceful beings, the same Brahmā becoming pleased with the austerities of Atri was the cause of his happiness, in other words. He caused the moon to be produced from the eyes of Atri. At that time Lord Śiva with His Consort the goddess Parvati became highly pleased to see the moon and decorated His head with it, and the power produced from the water and emitted from the eyes of Atri illumined the universe with its lustre — 3-6

All the directions anxious to beget progeny absorbed that lustre in the form of damsels and then it remained in their womb for three hundred years. After that period the directions could not bear the power in their womb and so they ejected it. Brahmā collected it together and created an illusory Being bedecked with all the arms. He then gave him Vedic powers and seated Him on a chariot drawn by a thousand horses and thus took Him to His region where seeing Him all the Brahma-Rishis acknowledged Him as their Sovereign Lord — 7-10

Afterwards the Pitrás, Devas, Gandharvas, herds along with the God India began to adore Brahmā by reciting the Somedeva mantras — 11

Then by the Yogic glory of the Lord Brahmā, that, became still more illustrious and merged into the moon. By its lustre the herds in the world profusely thrived and the moon became much more radiant in the night and consequently it (the moon) came to be the sovereign of the herds and the Brahmans — 12-13

This disc of the moon is the resort of the Vedas and the nectar. It waxes in the bright fortnight and wanes in the dark fortnight — 14

In the days gone by Daksā Prajāpati son of Prachetas gave his twenty seven beautiful daughters to the moon. The moon to please Lord Viṣṇu practised austerities for a considerable length of time. The Lord became pleased with his devotion and directed Him to ask for a boon. The moon wished, that he might conquer the realm of Indra, the Devas might go to His region and officiate as Brahmā as in His Rājasūya sacrifice, and Lord Śiva might protect it (sacrifice) with his trident standing at his door — 15-19

On Viṣṇu’s granting this boon, the moon performed the Rājasūya sacrifice in which the sage Atri became the Hota priest, Bhṛigu officiated as Ṛadhyāyī, Brahmā was the Udgaṭa, Lord Hari officiated as Brahmān priest, and the Sages Śaunaka, &c were the Sadasayus in that Rājasūya sacrifice — 20-21

Note — Ṛadhyāyī — An officiating priest whose duty is to measure the ground, build the altar, prepare sacrificial vessels, fetch wood and water, light the fire, bring the animal and immolate it and while doing this to repeat the Yajurveda

Udgaṭa — one of the priests at the sacrifice who chants the Sāmaveda.
Hota's function was to recite Rigveda and he was also the Chief priest, while Brahma priest superintended the others and was in charge of the Atharvaveda.

The ten Viśvadevas officiated as chaṃsā-ahāryā. In that sacrifice the moon gave the three lokas as Dakṣinā to the sacrificial priests — 22

Note — Chaṃsā — A vessel used at sacrifices for drinking the Soma Juice

On the conclusion of that sacrificial bath, the nine goddesses fixed with love went to have a look at the moon — 23

Lakṣmī went after leaving Nāiṇīyam, Sīnivāli went after leaving Kardana, Dvīṇī went after forsaking Viśvāsana, Tūṣī went after leaving Dhiṭāra, Prahlā went after leaving the Sun, Kuḥā went after leaving Hāvismān, Khāṇi went after leaving Jayantu, Vasu went after leaving Mānti Kanāyā, Dīrghī went after leaving her husband Nandi. All those goddesses went and adorned the Moon. The Moon also looked upon them as His own wives. Thus Lords even seeing them go astray like that did not use their missile of curse against the Moon. The luminous Moon shed its light on all directions and became the sole Monarch of the seven worlds owing to His Yogic powers, even after attaining such a store of happiness which is envied by sages — 24-28

Once upon a time the Moon came across Tārā, the wife of Bṛhaspati whilst she was roaming in the garden. On seeing Tārā adorned with flowers, having projected breasts and too delicate to call a flower even, the Moon was fired with passion. He approached that figure of exquisite beauty whose eyes were so lovely, and caught her by the hand. Tārā also seeing the enchanting form of the moon was fired with passion and enjoyed herself in his company. The Moon enjoyed in her company for a very long time and then took her to his realm. The Moon became so enamoured of her that he did not feel sufficiently satisfied even after enjoying himself in her company for such a long time. Bṛhaspati was pining away for Tārā during her absence. He came to know all about her through meditation, but could not overcome the Moon by curses, incantations, airs, fire, poison. Then Bṛhaspati burning with passion went to the Moon and very humbly besought him to restore him his wife. The Moon who was much attached to Tārā refused to do so — 29-34

Afterwards the moon refused the similar request even of Śiva, Brahmā, Śadnya Devas, the Manuṣa, &c., which threw Lord Śiva in a fearful rage and befriending Bṛhaspati, Vāmadeva aimed with His Ajgava bow and followed by His attendants and the Bhūteśvar Siddhas, started to fight with the Moon. At that time Śiva emitting fire from His third eye looked awfully fearful by the reflection of the dazzle cast on Him by the Moon — 35-37

Seeing Śiva going out on a fight, His other attendants, Ganeśa, &c., armed with various weapons, and Kuvera also with His innumerable army followed Him. — 38

Seeing his foe marching against him, the Moon, seething with wrath, started along with his vast retinue of Vetalas, Yakṣas, Serpents, and a train of a million and a half of chariots, to measure swords with Him. — 39

When the Moon in his martial array surrounded by his followers—the demons, stars, planets, Saturn, Mars, &c., appeared before Śiva to meet Him in fight, the seven worlds became terrified and the Earth with the ocean and mountains began to tremble. — 40

Śiva approached His adversary armed to the teeth, glittering like fire. A dreadful battle ensued between the two armies. Various kinds of weapons were used and the onslaught was so terrible that both the armies were destroyed. — 41-42

Afterwards the Mightiest of the glittering and barbed arms that consume the heaven, the earth and the lower regions were employed which made Śiva still more furious and He hurled His formidable Brahmastra at the Moon and the latter made use of his fearful Somastra. — 43

By the clash and fall of those two mighty weapons the heaven and the earth shivered with consternation. Finding the universe in peril Lord Brahma realized the gravity of the situation. Somehow or other He put Himself between the two dreadful missiles and saved the Moon along with other Devas from that impending calamity. Afterwards He thus addressed the Moon—"You have indulged yourself in this gory onslaught for such an ignoble object on account of which even after ceasing to carry on the warfare, you will become a planet of malignant aspect at the end of the white fortnight. Give away the wife of Brihaspati, there is no disgrace in retreating from war which is conducted for the retention of ill-gotten booty."— 44-46

Sūta said that on being thus reprimanded by Brahma, the Moon retired from the battle and Brihaspati also returned home completely satisfied in the company of his wife Tātā. — 47

Note—May it not mean that the terrestrial Moon went out of its orbit and attracted one of the Moons of the Jupiter and thus disturbed the solar Equilibrium which was brought to harmony again by the birth of Mercury (Gadha)? Moon must have had a bigger mass in those pre-terrestrial days.

Here ends the twenty-third chapter of dealing with the war between the Devas and Soma for the return of the wife of Brihaspati.
CHAPTER XXIV

Sūta said —After a year a handsome cherub-boy shining like the twelve suns, wearing yellow raiments and resembling the Moon, was born from the womb of Tārā. He was a master of all the śāstras and was the author of a treatise on elephants. He was known as Rajputra, the doctor of elephants, and was afterwards named Budha owing to his being the son of the Moon — 1-3.

He conquered all the powers since the time of his birth. Brahmā and other deities in company with the sages assembled at the house of Bīhaspāti to take part in the ceremony in connection with the birth of the child Budha, and asked Tārā from whom the babe was born — 4-5.

Hearing that Tārā at first held her peace out of shyness, but on being questioned repeatedly she said bashfully after a long silence that the child was born from the Moon, hearing which the latter accepted him as his son and naming him Budha (Mercury) gave him a region below the Earth — 6-7.

Then Brahmā along with the Brahmarisās anointed him as a Planetary Lord and placed him on a pair with other planets. Afterwards he vanished from the sight of the Devas then and there, and Budha beget his pious son from his wife Ilā — 8-9.

That progeny performed many a śaṁyamāṇa sacrifice by his glory and was universally venerated under the name of Pururavā who afterwards became the sovereign Lord of the seven worlds by practising asceticism on the glorious snowclad peaks of the Himalayas — 10.

It was he who annihilated the demons Kesī, &c., and whose wife the celestial nymph Urvāśi became on being enamoured of him. It was he who ruled the seven worlds with even-handed justice and sympathy and thus benefited his empire — 11-13.

Above all that, he attained divine fame and through the grace of Viṣṇu, India used to offer him a seat by His side. He guarded Dharma, Artha and Kāma dutifully. All the three, i.e., Dharma, Artha and Kāma went to that King to see whether the latter viewed them with equality. The king seeing them come accorded them greetings and offered them argha and pāḍya — 14-16.

Note —Dharma, Duty. Artha, Riches. Kāma, Desire. Argha respectful offering to venerable men consisting of Dūrva grass, &c., with or without water. Pāḍya, water for washing the feet of revered persons.

Then he seated them on three different golden seats and worshipped.
them devoutly, but maintained greater devotion for Dharma. At that Kama and Artha became displeased with the King and Artha cursed him to get destroyed by avance. Kama cursed him to the effect that he would turn mad from the separation of Urvashi in the Kumaraavana on the Gandhamađana hill. On hearing the curses of the two, Dharma blessed him with long life and said that he would have his lineage till the sun and the moon exist. He would flourish thousands of years and his progeny would never become extinct. Saying so, they all three disappeared instantly and the king afterwards occupied himself with the affairs of the state—17-21.

That king used to go to see the god India every day. One day seated in his Dakṣiṇāmurtachari chariot he was on his way to the realm of Indra when he accidentally saw the Daitya Kesi carrying away Chitra-tekha and Urvashi forcibly—22-23.

Seeing that the king, anxious for his glory, made use of several weapons, and then ultimately subdued him by Vāyavasthitā by which he had overpowered India. After thus subjugating the demon, the king delivered the rescued Urvashi to India and became his fast friend. Indra thus becoming his friend and getting highly pleased with him, made him most valiant, heroic, illustrious, wealthy, and famous in all the worlds, and that nymph also becoming highly delighted sang the glories of the Pururava family—24-27.

The celestial dramatist Bharata had composed a drama, called the svayamvara of Laksmī to which he had asked Menakā, Rambhā and Urvashi to play several parts—28.

Note—Svayamvara—self election by the bride of her husband, self marriage.

Then Urvashi who was playing the part of Laksmī and was dancing and singing melodiously in unison with the music, saw Pururava and being fired with passion forgot the part which Bharata had taught her. Bharata in a rage cursed Urvashi saying that she would become a subtle creeper on the earth for 55 years on account of the separation from Pururava and the latter would lapse into a Piśācha—29-31.

After that Urvashi made Pururava her lord and on the conclusion of the effects of curses she brought forth the following eight valiant sons—Ayu, Dridhāyu, Āsvāyu, Dhanāyu, Dhritimān, Vasu, Suchi Vidyā, and Satāyu. Ayu the eldest of them all became the father of Nahusa, Vṛiddhāpara, Raju, Dambha and Vipāpīnā. These five were all heroes—32-34.

Raju became the father of one hundred children who came to be known as Rājeva. He devoutly practised penances and was granted a boon by Visnu, on account of which he was powerful enough to conquer the Devas, demons and men—35-36.
Once upon a time a pitched battle ensued between the Devas and the Asuras for three centuries, in which there was a tremendous fight between Prahlāda and India. The battle was indecisive. At that both the Devas and the Asuras asked Brahmā, as to who was likely to bear away the palm of victory. Brahmā said that the party headed by Raßi would be victorious. Hearing that, the Devas urged their victory and requested the King Raßi to take their part in the great war — 37-39.

The Asuras also approached him with a similar request, but Raßi had accepted the invitation of the Devas so he refused the proposal of the Asuras. The Devas then entreated him to lead their army and destroy the Asuras. The king then killed those Asuras who could not be conquered even by India — 40-41.

Indra was highly delighted at that valourous feat of the king, so much so that he took birth as his son. When Indra was born as his son, the king making over the charge of his vast dominions to him went to devote himself to contemplation and meditation — 42.

The other valiant sons of Raßi forcibly dethroned India and usurped all the kingdom and share of sacrifices from him. India thus bereft of his position went and laid himself at the mercy of Brihaspati. He said to Brihaspati that he had been deprived of his realm as well as of the right of a share in sacrifices and appealed to him to advise him to get back his kingdom — 43-44.

Brihaspati then restored India to power by performing a rite called Graha Śantī or pacifying the malignant influence of the planets — 45-16.

Brihaspati then went and deluded the other sons of Raßi with false philosophy and established the Jina religion opposed to the Vedas, though himself a knower of the Vedas and India on finding the sons of Brihaspati propagating a religion different from the Vedas based on a show of reason only killed them with his mighty thunderbolt — 47-49.

Now hear something about the seven pious sons of Nahusa. They were — Yati, Yayāti, Samyati, Udhhava, Pāchi, Saryāti, Meghayāti — 50.

Yati turned an anchorite since his very early days and Yayāti began to rule his kingdom with piety — 51.

Yayāti had two queens, viz., Devayantí the daughter of Śukra and Sarmitah the daughter of Vrisaparvana — 52.

Yayāti had five sons, Yadu and Tuivasu from Devayantí, and three sons Druhya, Anu and Puru from Sarmitah. Of them Yadu and Puru were the promoters of the dynasty. King Yayāti was the protector of the realm.
with truth and heroism and was also the performer of many sacrifices. He was a great lover of sacrifices and worshipped the Pitris with great devotion. He won over his subjects and protected them dutifully—53-56

Once upon a time the king grew aged and was deprived of the vigour of youth. Finding himself infirm, he summoned his sons Yadu, Anu, Tuirasa, Dribhya, and Puru and said to them, "Sons! I wish to become young again and carry on amorous frolics with damsels, you come to my succour."—57-59

Hearing those words of the king, Yadu the eldest son from Devayanti said "In what way can I help you with my youth?"—60

Then Yayati asked his sons to exchange their youth with his old age and thus make him fit for carnal enjoyments—61

"Sons! after performing great many sacrifices, I have become old by the curse of Sukra, but my thirst for enjoyments has not yet been quenched. You, therefore, give me your vigour, and thus enable me to fulfil my desires."—62-63

Yadu and his three brothers did not agree to the proposal of his father which enraged the latter and he cursed them saying that none from then family would ever succeed to the throne—64

Then the younger Puru said "Sire! Give me your old age and take my vigour and satisfy yourself. With your permission I will succeed you as an old monarch."—65

Then Yayati transferred his old age to him and taking his vigour became young again—66

Puru began to rule the vast empire with the old age of the king—67

The king not satisfied with his mundane pleasures, even after a period of a thousand years, addressed his son Puru thus—"You are the promoter of my dynasty, by your having a son, I am not heirless, in this world my dynasty will be named Paurava, after you."—68-69

Afterwards Yayati got Puru mounted and then sometime afterwards died—70

Now something will be related about that dynasty of Puru in which Kings Bharata, &c., the promoters of the Bharata dynasty were born. Hear, O! Sages, this relation with attention—71

Here ends the twenty-fourth chapter dealing with the history of Yayati of the solar race.
CHAPTER XXV

The Rishis asked —Why Paurava dynasty became so illustrious and why Yudh the eldest of Yayati’s sons became the founder of an inferior and poor dynasty Besides this O Suta, relate to us at length other things connected with the history of Yayati, because his virtues which is the giver of long life is held in high esteem even by the Devas —1-2

Suta said —Rishis, the same question was put by Satinika who asked Saunaka about the sacred history of Yayati — 3

Satinika asked —“Saunaka, how my ancestor Yayati who was tenth in descent from Prajapati married the daughter of Sukra. O, Sage! I am anxious to hear about it. I am still more anxious to hear the history of the Paurava kings serially. Be gracious enough to relate all that in detail.”—4-5

Saunaka answered —“King Yayati was as handsome as Indra and was blessed both by Sukra and Viraparvana. I shall relate to you all about that and will also explain to you how Yayati the son of Nahusa married Devayani.”—6-7

Once upon a time the Devas and the Asuras fell out with each other for the kingdom of the three worlds. Then the Devas anxious to have the best of the contest made Brihaspati their sacrificial priest and similarly the Asuras made Sukra their priest. Both the sages—Brihaspati and Sukra—were at daggers drawn with each other. Sukra by his lore brought into life all the Asuras that were killed by the devas and they again appeared to face them on the battle field. Brihaspati could not similarly restore to life the Devas killed by the Asuras, because he did not possess the same knowledge, at which the Devas were greatly dismayed. The Devas getting fearfully alarmed went to the son of Brihaspati named Kacha —8-14

The Devas said —“Kacha, we are at your mercy, do come to our rescue. We beseech you to somehow acquire the sanjivani (Resuscitation) knowledge from Sukra, by doing that you will become entitled to receive a share of the offerings made to us. You should try to meet Sukra in the court of Viraparvana. Who guards the Asuras and not the Devas. You alone can propitiate him, none else can do it. None excepting you can also please Devayani, the daughter of Sukra. By pleasing her with tact, shrewdness, and sweetness you will be able to acquire that wonderful sanjivani knowledge.”—15-19

With those words the Devas after worshipping Kacha sent him to CHAPTER XXV.

Vrjasparvan Kacha, after being worshipped by the Devas went straight to Sukra and after saluting him said —20-21

"O, Preceptor, accept me named Kacha, the grandson of Angrasa and son of Bhraspati as your pupil. Preceptor, I shall lead a typical disciple's life, keep me as your pupil for thousands of years."—22 23.

Sukra said —"Kacha, you are welcome and so also your words You are worthy of being adored and so also Bhraspati."—24

Saunaka said that afterwards Kacha followed all the injunctions of Sukra and observed the fasts at the proper periods according to the prescribed rites, and began to serve Sukra and Devayanti —25-26

He pleased Devayanti who had attained puberty by singing, dancing, playing music and offering of flowers and other presents —27-28

Devayanti also interested herself in that pious Brihmanas and took every care of him —29

In that way Kacha went on for a period of five hundred years. The Asuras, knowing the piety of Kacha and out of their spite for Bhraspati, took him to a secluded place in the forest where he was grazing the cows, and slaughtered him for the sake of their own protection. After that they divided his corpse into many parts and then got it devoured by wolves and jackals. Then the cows bereft of their keeper returned to their abode —30-32

Devayanti seeing the cows returning home without Kacha addressed Sukra thus —

"Sure, you have finished your Agni Hortra, the sun has descended below the horizon, these cows are without their keeper, and Kacha is nowhere visible to day. Undoubtedly Kacha has been either killed or captured and if this be the case I say truly I cannot live without him."—33-35

Sukra said —"I am just going to recall Kacha," so he called Kacha back to life by means of his Sanjivani knowledge —36

Then the murdered Kacha came running to Sukra and saluted him from a distance and told him all about his being killed by the Asuras —37

Once again Kacha went reciting the Vedas to fetch flowers for Devayanti from the forest. The demons seeing him gathering flowers in the forest powdered him to death and mingling his remains in the wine gave it to Sukra to drink —38-39

Devayanti on not seeing Kacha return again spoke to his father "He was sent by me to gather flowers for me but he has not returned. Assuredly he has been killed again and I tell you honestly that I cannot live without him.” — 40-41

Sukra said — Devayáni, that son of Bhraspati was restored to life after being murdered, what can I do when he has been killed again? You should not lament. It does not befit persons like you to mourn in this world. You, who through my power of asceticism are being courted by Brahmá, Ádvínakumára, Indra and other Gods, and Asuras, sée, every one in the universe, should by no means mourn like this. The Bráhma who has been killed again after being restored to life once is beyond my power to be recalled to life again.” — 42-44

Devayáni said — “The grandson of Angirasa, the son of Bhraspati, Kacha, who is a scion of such an illustrious family, who is so clever and chaste is very dear to me. Why shall I not weep for him? I shall not take my meals and will set out in quest of him.” — 46

Saunaka said — Hearing those words of Devayáni, Kávyá Sukra said in his mind that “undoubtedly, the Asuras hate me, because they constantly destroy my disciples. The Asuras perhaps wish to annihilate the Bráhma. I am worshipped by the Dínava as their preceptor in vain; for the Bráhmágni can destroy Indra even, who then can escape the consequences of the foul deed perpetrated by them in killing the Bráhma Kacha.” Sukra again revived Kacha by means of his sañjivani knowledge. At that Kacha began to speak slowly in the stomach of Sukra. Then Sukra asked him — “By whom killed, thou art inside my stomach, tell me that, O child.” — 47-49

Kacha said — “Through your grace I remember everything. Under these circumstances, I am not losing my power of asceticism, but I feel a great discomfort. The Asuras, after powdering me to death mixed my remains with the wine and made you drink it, but through the glory of your Bráhmánism, I am not oppressed by the diabolical freaks of the Asuras.” — 50-51

Sukra said — “Devayáni, how am I to satisfy you? It seems difficult to save Kacha whilst I am living, because how can he come out without tearing my stomach.” — 52

Devayáni said — “The double pains that I am undergoing are consuming me like fire, e.g., the destruction of Kacha and the prospect of your not living in the event of his escaping death. I can have no comfort on the death of Kacha nor can I live if you are destroyed.” — 53.

Sukra said — “O, son of Bhraspati! who is prized by Devayáni. become a seer and acquire my sañjivañ knowledge for I am assured now that you are not Indra in the disguise of Kacha. Because none excepting a Brāhmaṇa can live in my stomach, and Indra being a Kṣatriya would have been digested by me. Therefore learn this science from me. Come out of my stomach as my son, i.e., first acquire the sañjivañ knowledge and then come out of my stomach after ripping it open and restore me to life and then satisfy the expectation of this dutiful daughter of mine, after having mastered this science from me, thy guru.” —54-56

Saunaka said that the Brāhmaṇa then acquired that knowledge from his preceptor, and, after opening the stomach of Sukra, emerged from it as does the full moon at the approach of night by bursting open through the eastern horizon —57

On finding his preceptor lying dead, Kacha by means of that sañjivañ knowledge recalled him to life, and then addressed him thus — “Worthy one, you are bounteous like an ocean and the most generous among the givers of boons. Those who do not show due regard to such a preceptor, are sinners doomed to hell after being wrecked.” —58-59

Saunaka said that Sukra (Udānt), who was deluded through drinking, on getting back his lost disciple, and seeing his graceful form and powers of asceticism, desirous of doing a good turn to the Brāhmaṇas, taking the wine, uttered the following words against drinking and its evil consequences —61

“Henceforth the foolish Brāhmaṇa who drinks wine shall become devoid of Dharma and commit the sin of murdering a Brāhmaṇa and be despised in this world as well as in the next. I have laid down this Law for the Brāhmaṇas in the whole universe, and let the pious Brahmaṇas know the injunctions of the preceptor and let the Devas and Daityas also listen to these words.” —62-63

Saunaka said that the illustrious seer Sukra, after saying that, called all the Dānavas of clouded intellect and said:—“Hear, you foolish Dānavas! My disciple, Kacha, after acquiring sañjivañ knowledge from me, has become equally powerful like myself, and has become a true Brahmaṇa and one with Brahma.” —64-65

Saunaka said that Kacha, after residing with his preceptor for another century, took leave of him to go to heaven.” —66

Here ends the twenty-fifth chapter relating the story of Kacha and Devayānī.
CHAPTER XXVI

Śrīnaka said — On the fulfilment of his vow when Kacha after taking leave of Sukra, was about to start for heaven, Devayāni addressed the following words to him — 1

Devayāni said — "O, grandson of Abhirūp! You shine on account of your wealth, family status, learning, pious conduct, asceticism, and sobriety. As the sage Abhirūp, of great renown, is respected by my father, so is Bṛhaspati respected and revered by me. Knowing this, O seer, consider what I say unto you. You know how I behaved towards you, while you were observing the vow with its restrictions. Your learning is now accomplished. You should not forsake me, who am devoted to you, therefore accept my hand in marriage according to due rites and Mantras." — 2-5

Kacha said — "Your father, being my preceptor, is just like my own father and commands my respect and honour. Similarly you, too, being the daughter of my preceptor and the beloved of Bhrigava, Sukra, are worthy of being venerated and adored by me. Your father, the sage Sukra, is my venerable preceptor, consequently it does not behove you to make any such proposal to me because you are to be honored as a daughter of my guru and therefore should be honored as my guru." — 6-8

Devayāni said — "You are the son of Bṛhaspati and not of my father, and consequently you are worthy of being respected and honored by me. You must recall to your mind my unceasing warm love for you ever since you were killed by the Asuras again and again. Is not this a sufficient proof of my unbounded love, attachment and devotion towards you? I, therefore, O You, who know the law, your devotee, do not deserve being discarded by you." — 9-11

Kacha said — "O, Pious one! You ask me to enter into an engagement which is so improper. You are greater even than the preceptor. Be pleased, O moon-faced! I have also lived in the stomach of Sukra where you had also lived, in this way you are lawfully my sister. I passed my days in comfort here. I have committed no fault, am not angry with you at your illegal proposal. Now I take leave of you, wish me a happy journey. You may think of me in connection with anything which may be in conformity with Dharma. You should always adore my preceptor with constant attention." — 12-16

Devayāni said — "I rescued you, with the idea of making you my husband, when you were killed by the Asuras. Now as you are abandoning me who makes a lawful request, you will not be able to successfully apply this sañjivani knowledge"—17

Kacha said —"Why are you pronouncing such a curse on me? I am going away with the permission of my preceptor and have not accepted you, on account of your being the daughter of my preceptor, and not in consideration of there being any fault in you Devayani! You ought not to curse me who has only expounded the Law of the Rishi to you [for according to that Law, our marriage would be illegal] Because you have cursed me, you will never be able to gain your desire. No son of a Rishi will ever accept you as his wife. My sañjivani knowledge will, of course, not be fruitful to me on account of your curse, but it will most decidedly bear fruit to one to whom I shall impart it"—18-21

Saunaka said —Kacha, after thus addressing Devayanti, instantly went to heaven, where Indra and other Devas finding him returned said to him —

"Kacha! You have done a great deed for our sake, consequently your fame will never diminish, it will diffuse all round"—22-24

Here ends the twenty-sixth chapter describing the curses of Devayanti and Kacha

CHAPTER XXVII

Saunaka said —The Devas, on seeing Kacha back with sañjivani knowledge, accorded him a most cordial welcome, and after acquiring that supreme knowledge from him, became highly satisfied, and then having approached Indra, said thus—"To-day is the time to show valor, kill thy enemies, O Pundarika!" Accepting the request of the Devas, the Maghavan, along with them, set out on his mission and, in the way, he came across a group of women in the forest. He saw those damsels bathing and enjoying themselves, as they do in the pleasure-garden of Kuvera. Then Indra, in the form of a gust of wind, blew away and mixed up their garments—1-4.

At that, all the maidens, hastily coming out of water, dressed themselves with the clothes as they found them. In that hurry-scurry, Sarmishtha, the daughter of Vrisaparvan put on the clothes of Devayanti through oversight, at which, there ensued a quarrel between the two—Sarmishtha and Devayanti—5 6

Devayanti, in a fit of rage, said "O daughter of an Asura! You being my father’s disciple, how dare you put on my garments. You will never prosper on account of your ignorance of laws of good conduct"—7
Sarnishta said: "Your father sits and sleeps at the command of my father, he praises him and asks and answers questions put by my father from his throne, while your father sits humbly on a lower seat. You are the daughter of a father who always begs, sings panegyrics and receives gifts from my father, whilst I am the daughter of one who is always praised, is the giver of gifts, but accept no gifts from any one. You beggar! I do not care a straw for you. How dare you unarmed, show your wrath to me who is armed?"—8-11

Saunaka said:—Saying so, Sarmishta put on her garments. Afterwards she threw the astonished and bewildered Devayanti into a well and then returned to her palace—12

Thus Sarmishta, after committing such a sinful act and taking Devayanti to be killed, and not waiting for her, returned home full of wrath—13

After that, Yayati, the son of Nahusa, getting tired and thirsty in course of his shoot, went to drink water at the same well. As soon as that thirsty monarch peeped into the well, he saw a beauty, gleaming like the flame of fire, inside it. On seeing that girl of Divine form and consoling her, that best of kings, said in words full of sweetness—' O young beauty, adorned with ornaments, how and for what reason, have you fallen into this well covered with grass? Whose daughter are you? Tell me all this'—14-18

Devayanti replied: "I am the daughter of that Sakra who, through his science, restores the Daityyas to life, when they are killed by the Gods. You do not know me full well. King! Catch hold of my right hand with its fingers decked with copper coloured nails and pull me out of this well. I know you are of noble birth. I know you to be self-controlled, strong, and illustrious, therefore I know you are capable of delivering me from this well."—19-21

Saunaka said:—King Yayati, knowing her to be of the Brâhmana caste and also a woman, caught hold of her right hand, and by his force pulled her out of the well. After that, the king saluted and welcomed Devayanti and returned to his metropolis—22-23

Devayanti, thus abused and full of sorrow, commanded her maid, Ghurnika, who had returned in search of her, thus—' Go quickly, O Ghurnika, and acquaint my father with all that has happened, and also tell him that I have made up my mind not to enter the King Vrisaparvan's city."—24-25
CHAPTER XXVIII

Saunaka said—Ghurnikâ instantly repaired to the palace of the Asura and seeing the high priest Sukra there, said to him trembling and confusedly—

"Sage! Sarmisthâ, the daughter of King Vriâparvan, has injured Devayânti."—26-27

Sukra, on getting the ill tidings of his daughter being injured at the hands of Sarmisthâ, was overwhelmed with grief and immediately started in quest of Devayânti in the forest—28

On meeting Devayânti face to face in that forest, Sukra embraced her with open arms and sorrowfully said, "Every being reaps the harvest of pain and pleasure in this world, according to his actions, consequently, I look upon this affair, as Sarmisthâ taking revenge upon you for some evil deed of yours."—29-30

Devayânti said, "There may or may not have been a revenge, but listen to what the daughter of Vriâparvan said—31

Is it true, that I am merely a singer in the palace of the Dâityas, for Sarmisthâ, the daughter of Vriâparvan tells me so. She, with harsh and sharp words and eyes red with anger, spoke—"I am the daughter of a king, who is praised by thy father and who gives gifts to him, but accepts nothing from any body and whilst thou art the daughter of him who sings the praises of my father and begs and accepts gifts from him. Thus said Sarmisthâ, the daughter Vriâparvan, with eyes red with anger and face flushed with pride. Father, I then said to Sarmisthâ that if I were the daughter of a panegyrist, and a beggar, I would also please her similarly."—31-35

Sukra said, "O child! thou art not the daughter of a panegyrist or of a beggar, on the other hand, thou art the daughter of one who is always praised by others, O Devayânti! King Vriâparvan knows that my pure, matchless and inconceivable spirituality is my power, so also know Indra and King Yayâti."—36-37

Here ends the twenty-seventh chapter describing the history of King Yayâti.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Sukra said—"Devayânti! hear, one who calmly and patiently endures the hard speech of others, conquers all. One, who curbs his rising anger, like a fiery steed, is called the real driver by the wise, and not he who merely holds the reins. One who conquers another's arising anger by not getting angry himself, conquers the universe. Know this, O Devayānī. One who throws aside the outbursting of his wrath by forgiveness, as a serpent discards its worn-out skin, is said to be truly a man. One whobankers after virtue, always shows forbearance to all, and does not cause pain to others even after suffering great pain, is the receptacle of high and sublime merits. Between the one who performs many Āśvamedha sacrifices each month for hundreds of years, and the other who does not get angry with any one, the latter is decidedly superior. As in childhood, boys and girls, through their folly, become enemies, not do so the sensible, and after considering their power and the weakness of their foes, never entertain any feeling of enmity.”—1-7

Devayānī said—“Father! In spite of my girlhood, I know the causes and consequences of actions in the matter of anger, reproof and relative strength or weakness of acts. A sensible man should not tolerate an unbecoming action of his disciple. I have therefore no desire to live among people whose conscience is loaded with vice. A person dear to his welfare and prosperity should not live among those vicious men who are not well spoken of, by men of character and position. People who are considered high, by men of character and position, are worthy of company. Consequently, the harsh words of Vṛṣaparvan’s daughter are rubbing against my mind like Arāni (the two pieces of wood used in kindling the sacred fire). Father! I do not think there is anything baser in the world than the adoration of an enemy, howsoever majestic he may be, by one who is in the humblest walk of life and is devoid of riches.”—8-13

Here ends the twenty-eighth chapter describing the history of the King Yāyāti and the dialogue of Devayānī and Śukra.

CHAPTER XXIX

Śaunaka said—On hearing those words of Devayānī, Śukra the best of the Bharata also got angry and going to the King Vṛṣaparvan who was sitting on his throne spoke to him without caring for the consequences.

“King! A sinful act does not instantly fructify, but is like a cow which does not give birth at once after (conception). A sin is sure to produce its fruit, just like a heavy meal to produce colic in the stomach, not at once but after sometime. In process of time it entirely roots out the sinner. He who overlooks his own faults or those of his sons, and grandsons, etc., loses his Trivāga, the three objects of worldly existence, viz., Artha (riches or worldly prosperity), Dharma (religion), Kāma, (enjoyments) You are sure to reap the fruit of your sin of killing the grandson of Ángiras and son of Brihaspati, and then causing his remains to be deposited in my stomach by mixing them with my wine. King I on account of your having killed my disciple, who was sinless, chaste, submissive and unworthy of being slain, as well as for the injury done to my daughter, I leave you along with your kinsmen. I do not consider it proper to stay in your empire any more. As you do not heed the actions of your vicious and proud daughter, I consider you from today a Dāitya who talks much but does not think of keeping his promises, thou thinkest me, O Dāitya censurable and a talker of falsehood”—1-6

Vṛṣaparvan said—"Bhārgava! I do not consider you as censurable or a talker of falsehood because I am so well aware of your truth and asceticism, therefore be pleased with me. Excepting you, none can protect me, and if you are going to leave me today, I will drown myself in the ocean, for there is no other refuge for me"—7-9

Śukra said—"You may either drown yourself in the ocean or roam about in the world; my daughter is very dear to me, and I cannot make her feel hurt. You should please Devayāni. I shall settle down with her wherever she goes. If you will please her, I shall guard you as Brihaspati does Indra and other Devas"—10-11

Vṛṣaparvan said—"Bhārgava! you are the master of elephants, chariots, horses and all the riches of the Asuras, and, similarly, you are the master of all my wealth and belongings"—12

Śukra said—"King of Asuras! I will consider myself the master of the Dāityas then only when you please Devayāni and not otherwise"—13

Śaunaka said—Hearing that, Śukra went to Devayāni along with Vṛṣaparvan and said to her—"Now thy words are realized, for I am considered as lord of all"—14

Devayāni said—"If, O Father! thou art the lord of the king's wealth then I will believe it if the king himself says so to me"—15

Vṛṣaparvan said—"Devayāni! I shall fulfil your desires, however difficult they may be"—16

Devayāni said—"When you promise to fulfil my desires, I wish Śarmiśṭhā to be my maid, with a thousand damsels, and she should go with me wherever my father may please to marry me"—17

Vṛṣaparvan said—"O Nurse, get up, go and bring Śarmiśṭhā at once in my presence. I shall do exactly as Devayāni desires"—18
Saunaka said —On being thus commanded by the king, the nurse at once went to Sarmantha and told her O Sarmantha! get up and save your kinsmen from impending calamity, because incited by his daughter, Sukra is forsaking his disciples and the fulfilment of Devayani's desires rests on you. You have become the maid of Devayani."—19-20

Sarmantha said —"I shall do what she wants, let Sukra not go away in a fit of anger nor Devayani get offended at what I have done."—21

Saunaka said —Then at the behest of her father Sarmantha in a palanquin went to Devayani along with a thousand maids, and said, "Devayani! I have come with a thousand maids to serve you and shall accompany you wherever you go, after being married by your father."—22-23

Devayani said —"I am the daughter of a panegyrist, one who begs and receives, how then do you, who are the daughter of one praised, serve me as my maid?" —24

Sarmantha said —"It is my bounden duty to do that which may bring relief to my distressed kinsmen, consequently I shall follow you as your maid, and will also accompany you after your marriage wherever your father may wed you."—25

Saunaka said —"After the daughter of Vrihasaparvan made up her mind to serve Devayani as her maid, the latter said to her father —

"Father! I am satisfied. Indeed, the power of thy knowledge and wisdom is infallible and fruitful. I shall now enter the city."—26-27

Hearing those words of his daughter, Sukra, worshipped by the Dānavas, cheerfully entered the town.—28

Here ends the twenty-ninth chapter in the history of Yayati dealing with the pacification of Devayani.

CHAPTER XXX

Saunaka said —O king! Long after that, Devayani again went to amuse herself in the same forest in the company of Sarmantha and a thousand maids. Whilst she, along with her companions was thus amusing herself there by drinking wine and eating various victuals and fruits, King Yayati, also chanced to visit the same forest with the object of enjoying a shoot, and, feeling thirsty whilst he was in search of water, he saw Devayani and Sarmantha along with other women folk drinking. Among them he marked Devayani, the beautiful, who, wearing lovely ornaments, was sitting, attended by Sarmantha and other maids. Then King Yayāti said "Two of you are charming beauties horazoned by two thousand women. I request you to please tell me your names and clan."—1-8

Devayāni replied — "King! Hear what I say. I am the daughter of the Sage Śukra who is preceptor of the Asuras and she is my maid-in-chief, Sarmīthā, the daughter of Vrisaparvan, the mighty king of the Dānavas. She always accompanies me wherever I go."—9-10

Yayāti, who was astonishe to hear that, enquired how that daughter of the king of the Asuras came to be her maid-in-chief.—11

Devayāni said — "Do not be astonished. All this has been ordained by Brahmā. You look like a king from your bearing and sweet and dignified speech. Tell me your name and parentage."—12-13

Yayāti said — "I have studied all the Vedas after leading a student's life, and I am King Yayāti, the son of King Nabuṣa."—14

Devayāni said — "King! What for have you come here—to drink water or to enjoy a shoot?"—15

Yayāti said — "In course of my shoot I have happened to come to this spot to satisfy my thirst and am ready to obey your commands."—16

Devayāni said — "Friend! I am at your disposal with Sarmīthā and my retinue of maids, be my lord."—17

Yayāti said — "Lady! You are the daughter of Śukra, who is a Brāhmaṇa, and consequently you cannot be wedded by a Kṣatriya sovereign."—18

Devayāni said — "King! The race of the Kṣatriyas has been created by Brahmā and is supported by him. O, son of Nabuṣa! you are a sage, and also the son of a sage, by all means marry me."—19

Yayāti said — "O, Lady! Though all the four castes have sprung from one and the same body of Brahmā, yet their duties and rules of life are entirely different from one another, and a Brāhmaṇa is superior to all."—20

Devayāni said — "O, son of Nabuṣa! this hand of mine has not been touched by any other person and you have once grasped it. I therefore choose you to be my partner in life. Who else can take my hand? You took me by the hand, because you are the son of a sage or because you are a sage yourself."—21-22

Yayāti said — "The sages of hoary lore have said that a Brāhmaṇa is more formidable than the mouth of an angry venomous serpent and the raging fire."—23.
Devayāni said —“O, Blessed one! How do you describe a Brāhmaṇa to be more formidable than an angry venomous snake and the raging fire?”—24

Yayāti said —“By the bite of a poisonous serpent and by the blow of a weapon only one life is lost, but by the anger of a Brāhmaṇa the whole realm and country is devastated, this is my reason for having described a Brāhmaṇa as such, and I therefore cannot accept you in marriage without your father’s consent.—25-26

Devayāni said —“King! When my father gives me away to you of his own accord, you will then accept me as yours. You cannot beg, I know, and consequently I have accepted you as my lord, now there is no question of receiving on your part.”—27

Saunaka said —After that, the nurse, deputed by Devayāni, went and explained all that to Śukra. Śukra on hearing that went to the king, and both of them were pleased to meet each other.—28-29

The king, seeing Śukra, saluted him with folded hands, and the latter also spoke to him mildly and sweetly.—30

Devayāni said to her father that the king Yayāti had once grasped her hand, when she was in great difficulty and he should, therefore, dedicate her to him, and that she would marry no one excepting him.—31

Śukra then said to Yayāti, that he had been chosen by her daughter before, whom he should accept as his queen after being willingly made over to him by her father.—32

Yayāti said —“Bhārgava! By such deeds, I fear, I will commit a sin, I therefore beseech you to put off the sin of creating a confusion of castes by such intermarriage.”—33

Śukra said —“I shall free you from all sins. Accept this gift chosen by her! You will become laudable by this marriage, I free you from the future sin, marry this amiable Devayāni, according to law and have every enjoyment in her company, this Śarmiṣṭhā, the daughter of Viśāparvan, will attend on you, and you should never invite her to your bed.”—34-36

Saunaka said —On hearing those words of the Seer Śukra that king circumambulated the latter, and with his permission entered his city with great rejoicings.—37

Here ends the thirtieth chapter describing the marriage of Yayāti with Devayāni.
CHAPTER XXXI

Śaunaka said —Yāṣṭi entered his capital, which was as beautiful as the city of Indra. He then ushered Devayānī into his palace and, according to the advice of the queen, located Sarmisthā, the daughter of King Vriśaparvan, in a separate house in Aśokavana. Thus Sarmisthā, along with her retinue of a thousand maids, was separated after being provided with clothes, provisions, and ornaments. Then that son of King Nahusa enjoyed himself like the Devas, in the company of Devayānī, for a great number of years. In the fullness of time Devayānī conceived, and after ten months gave birth to a child —1-5.

After a thousand years, Sarmisthā, the daughter of Vriśaparvan, when she was in her full bloom of youth, felt very sad on not having a husband. She said in her mind: "What will be meet for me to do? How am I to get happiness? Devayānī has given birth to a son, but my youth is declining for nothing. I will also make the king my husband, as she has done. I will request the king to give me a similar fruit in the shape of a son." With these thoughts, she longed to see the king privately. Now, at that time the King, coming out at pleasure, was astonished to meet Sarmisthā, outside the Aśokavana. Sarmisthā meeting the king in private, addressed him with folded hands —

"King! Even Soma, India, Varuna and the wind are incapable of seeing the women in your palace. You know me to be a beauty, full of modesty and coming of good parents. I beseech you to enjoy my company." —6-13

Yāṣṭi replied —"I know all thy qualifications. I know thou art the chaste daughter of the valiant king of the Dāityas. Thou art modest, but I cannot look at thee with any feeling of lust, because at the time of Devayānī's marriage, Śukra enjoined on me not to invite thee to my bed." —14-15

Sarmisthā said —"King! there is no sin in speaking untruth at the time of indulging in sexual pleasures, on the occasion of marriage, when life is in danger, wealth is at stake, and in joke. Lying on these five occasions is venal. It is only a sin to speak an untruth at the time of being summoned as a witness, or when one is entrusted to dispose of a thing, or when one is asked his advice on any point." —16-17

Yāṣṭi said —"A king, being the authority for his people, should abstain from untruth, even at the time of danger." —18

panion are equal, and as you are the lord of my companion, you must also take me as wedded to you."—19

Yayati said—"One should give away according to one's means to one's suppliants, and it is also my vow not to have any matrimonial connections with you, now you yourself tell me what am I to do of these two things."—20

Śarmiṣṭhā said—"King! Save me from immorality by your righteousness! I shall lead the life of highest virtue after getting a child through you. King! a woman, a servant and a son—all these three have been said to be poor, for the wealth acquired by them belongs to their master. I also take my meals with Devayāni and live as a maid, dependant on her, therefore receive me also. I am worthy of your support."—21-23

Saunaka said—Hearing those words of Śarmiṣṭhā, the king accepted her and guarded her virtue. They then enjoyed themselves in each other's company and were immensely pleased. Through that conjunction, the daughter of Vrisaparvan, conceived and gave birth to illustrious sons gleaning with the radiancy of the sun.—24-27

Here ends the thirty-first chapter describing the secret marriage of Yayati with Śarmiṣṭhā

CHAPTER XXXII

Saunaka said—On hearing the news of Śarmiṣṭhā giving birth to a child, Devayāni became deeply afflicted and went and asked her, why she committed that sin by being a slave to Cupid.—1-2

Śarmiṣṭhā said—"A seer, well-versed in the Vedas, came to me whom I pleased, taking him as my lord, and this son has been born of him. O blessed one! I have not basefully been a slave to passions. This child has been born of a Rishi, believe this without doubt."—3-4.

Devayāni said—"Śarmiṣṭhā! If this is true, I am no more angry with you, but how can it be made certain that you have got this progeny from a high class Brāhmana? I wish to know his clan and lineage."—5-6

Śarmiṣṭhā said—"Lady! I felt myself overpowered by his glory. He was so valiant and illustrious, I could not therefore ask him anything."—7
CHAPTER XXXII

Saunaka said —After that mutual conversation, Devayāṇī believed what Sarmiṣṭhā told her, and then she returned to her mansion — 8

Then King Yayāti begot two sons—Yadu and Turvasu—as glorious as Indra and Visuṣu, from Devayāṇī — 9

Druhya, Anu and Puru, those three sons were born from Sarmiṣṭhā. After that, Devayāṇī went with King Yayāti to the Harit forest — 10-11

There she saw the three boys of divine elegance, as beautiful as Sanat Kumāras, playing, at which she amazingly said — “King! whose sons these boys of divine lusture, and bearing such a close affinity to you are?” — 12-13

After putting that question to the king, she then approached the boys and asked them to tell her frankly and sincerely whose sons they were and what was their clan. The boys in reply to her query pointed with their finger to Yayāti as their father and Sarmiṣṭhā as their mother. Saunaka said, that, on ascertaining that from the boys, she, along with the boys, hurried back to the king. The king, afraid of the presence of Devayāṇī, did not fondle those boys, as usual, at which they went weeping to Sarmiṣṭhā — 14-17

Devayāṇī, knowing them to be the sons of the king, went and spoke to Sarmiṣṭhā — “You har! why do you incur my displeasure, in spite of being my dependent? Do you not fear me, and dare you continue to follow your Asurik ways?” — 18-19

Sarmiṣṭhā said — “O Sweet smiling lady! What I told you before about the Rishis is truth and nothing but truth. I am leading a life, as dictated by religion and morality. Why should then I be afraid of you? O Beautiful one! the moment you made this king your husband, he became my lord as well, on account of his being the husband of my companion. You are honored by me on account of being a Brāhmaṇī and my elder in age, and consequently this Rājaṛṣi, who is your husband, is worthy of being shown more honor and respect by me. Do you not know it?” — 20-22

Saunaka said — On hearing those words of Sarmiṣṭhā, Devayāṇī said to the king that she would no longer stay with him, because he had done what was extremely hateful to her. Saying that, she went to her father, the sage Śukra, with her eyes full of tears — 23-24

The king also followed her and did his best to pacify her, but Devayāṇī, whose eyes were red with anger, did not heed him, and shedding tears and mumbling something to the king, she hastened to her father. The king also followed her there — 25-26
After taking a little pause, Devayāni saluted her father and Yayāti also showed his reverence to the sage — 27

Then Devayāni said — "Father! righteousness has been conquered by unrighteousness, because this king has begotten three sons from Sarmitthā, that discarded daughter of Viśapaivan, whilst he has begotten only two from my unfortunate self. Father! this king is called righteous, but he is the transgressor of the bounds of virtue."—28-30

Śukra said — "King! as you have committed a sin, in spite of your being virtuous, you will be visited soon with invincible old age."—31

Yayāti said — "O Brāhmaṇ! One who does not satisfy the desire of a damsel, after the termination of her menstruation, commits the sin of slaying a Brāhmaṇa, and one who does not grant the desire of a damsel, even on her making such a request, he is said to commit a sin equal to the sin of slaughtering a great Brāhmaṇa. O Preceptor! for fear of such sins, I tremulously offered myself to Sarmitthā."—32-34

Śukra said — "King! you depend on me, you ought to have taken my advice, therefore, your doing such an act without my permission, even on the score of righteousness, is nothing short of theft."—35

Ṣaunaka said — Then the King Yayāti, after being thus cursed by the wrathful sage Śukra, instantly turned old — 36

Yayāti then said to the sage that he had not had enough of enjoyment with the young Devayāni therefore he might mercifully ward off his old age from him — 37

Śukra said — "King! My words cannot prove false. You are therefore bound to be old, but you can exchange it with the youth of some young man."—38

Yayāti said — "Brāhmaṇ! Be pleased to grant this favour that one who exchanges his youth with my old age will inherit my kingdom and will get fame and honor."—39

Śukra said — "By my favour, O King! You will exchange your old age with youth without committing any sin, and any of your sons, willingly giving you his youth in exchange for your old age, will certainly be blessed with many children and will be illustrious and long-lived."— 40-41

Here ends the thirty-second chapter dealing with the curse of Śukra on Yayāti
CHAPTER XXXIII

Saunaka said—On being visited with old age, King Yayati went to his capital and said to his eldest son, Yadu, that owing to the curse of Sukra he had become old, though he had not had ample satisfaction of his desires in his youth, that he might therefore exchange his youth with his old age and thus enable him to satisfy his cravings, and that after a thousand years he would return his youth to him and take back his old age—1-4

Yadu refused to exchange his youth with the old age of the king, who, on account of it, looked lean, decrepit and furrowed and incapable of indulging in enjoyments, and said that the king had other sons dearer than him to whom he might transfer his old age—5-7

At that Yayati got vexed and cursed Yadu that, as he being his son, refused to give him his youth, his sons would be wicked like his maternal uncle, and afterwards he made a similar request to his son Turvasu, making the same promise to him of restoring back to him his youth after a thousand years. Turvasu also refused to accept the proposal of the king, saying that he would not accept the old age which made one devoid of potency, power, enjoyment, beauty, intellect and honour—8-11

Yayati cursed him for his refusing to accommodate his father with his youth, and said that his clan would become extinct, and that he would be the king of the vilest of the Mlechcha races who would be thieves, the doers of unnatural deeds, flesh-eaters, indulging in immorality with the wife of their preceptor and lower animals—12-14

After cursing them thus, he asked his son, Druhya, from Sarmiśṭhā, to accede to his wishes on the same condition of getting back his youth after one thousand years. Druhya also refused to do that, and said that he did not feel inclined to put himself in the old age in which he would be incapable of enjoying his kingdom, chariot drive, riding, the company of women and feeling love. Yayati cursed him, and said that in consequence of his refusal to meet with his wishes, in spite of his being his son, he would never enjoy the things he wished for. Thou and thy children will go to that place where there will be no enjoyment of kingdom, nor enjoyment of beauty and youth—15-20

The king then put the same proposition before his son, Anu, who also, like his other brothers, discarded it, saying that he could not force the old age upon him, in course, of which a man, like an infant, takes his meals in spite of his remaining defiled all the time, and is not able to perform a sacrifice at any moment. The king pronounced a curse on him, as well, saying, that being his son, he did not accede to his proposal and that he would, also sooner or later, he visited with the old age, which he deemed and his progeny, born in his youth, would not survive — 21-24.

Yayati then put the same proposal to his son, Puru, and said that by carrying it out he would be the dearest of all his sons. He had been visited with that untimely and formidable old age, and had not been able to satisfy his desires. He would therefore restore him his bloom of youth after ten centuries — 25-27.

Hearing that, Puru said that he would do exactly what his father wished and asked him to do. Let him satisfy all his cravings, and that he would, most willingly, accept his old age and would do what appeared to him best — 28-30.

Note — This chapter has not been translated literally.

Here ends the thirty-third chapter dealing with the acceptance by Puru of the old age of Yayati.

CHAPTER XXXIV

Saunaka said — On hearing those words of the prince Puru, king Yayati, after mentally reciting the name of Sukra, transferred his old age to his son, and then king Yayati, the son of Nahusa, cheerfully indulged himself in the enjoyment of pleasures. He, however, did not do that at the sacrifice of his royal duties, for, according to the times, with earnestness, and in conjunction with the prescribed rules, he performed the libations to the Deities, and the manes of the ancestors, was regular in the performance of Śādha and sacrifices, was merciful to the poor and satisfied the wishes of the Brāhmaṇas, entertained his guests by ministering to their comforts and supported the Vaisyas by protecting them, was not cruel to the Sudras and kept thieves down by inflicting proper punishment on them. In that way, the king was alert in his duties and was thus supplied all the wants of his subjects, like the God Indra. That king, valiant like the lion, never deviating from the path of virtue and continuing his pursuits of enjoyment, led a life of sublime comfort and happiness — 1-7.

On getting satisfied, after enjoying himself for a thousand years, he recalled to his mind the bygone days, and, finding that his cherished days were complete, he spoke to his son, the prince Puru —

"Son! a man never feels satisfied with pleasures, the lust for pleasures waxes by daily indulgence, as the fire flames all the more by ghee being poured into it. I have become sober, on the consideration that the mundane boons in the form of grain, gold, domestic animals, (horses, cattle, etc.) women, are not meant for any single individual.

Son! I have had enough of pleasures according to my potency by acquiring your vigour of youth, I am consequently very much pleased with you, now you take back your bloom of youth from me and also receive charge of this vast realm. You are my dearest son."—8-13

Saunaka—After that, King Yayati turned old, and Puru became young again—14

Then the king appointed a day for Puru being anointed and proclaimed king, when the Brāhmanas and others assembled, said—

"King! how do you confer this vast kingdom on Puru, overlooking prince Yadu, who is the grandson of Sakra and the eldest son from the queen Devayanti! Yadu is your eldest son, next to him is Turvasu, your third son is Druhyu from the Queen Sauminthi, younger to him is Anu, whilst Puru is the youngest of all. How then are you making Puru a king, overlooking the claims of his elder brothers? O king! you should not forsake justice."—15-18

Yayati—Brāhmanas and others! Hearken. My eldest son did not obey my commands. I therefore do not give him the empire, for a disobedient son ought not to be recognised. This is what the great men have said, and Turvasu, Druhyu and Anu also disobeyed me. Puru stood firm and obeyed my behests, therefore, he alone is entitled to my monarchy. It is he who exchanged his full flourish of youth with my infirmity, and it is through him that I have fulfilled all my desires. The sage Sakra had also blessed that one who would carry out my orders would be the Emperor. For these reasons, you should all consider Puru to be fit for the Empire."—19-25

Then the Commons (Prakriti) all assembled there cried out in a chorus: "Indeed, the son, endowed with all the good qualities and who obeys the mandates of his parents, deserves being proclaimed a sovereign, in spite of him being the youngest. O king! Puru, who has done you a good turn, appropriately deserves the kingdom and the sage Sakra has also said so. Therefore nothing need now be said about this."—26-27.

Saunaka—When the assemblage pronounced that verdict, the king seated the prince Puru on the throne, after which he quitted the metropolis and went to the forest in company of many Brāhmanas and ascetics.—28-29
Yadu begot Yādavas, Turvasu begot Yavanas, Druhya begot Bhojas and Apu became the father of the Mlechchhas—30

Puru became the founder of the Paurava dynasty in which you are born a king, which afterwards came to be known as the Kuru clan and in which the kingdom is to last for one-thousand years—31

Here ends the thirty-four chapter of the Purāna dealing with the coronation of Puru

CHAPTER XXXV

Saunaka—Thus King Yayāti, making over his Empire to his son, Puru, turned an anchorite, and living on fruits, passed a number of days in that forest and afterwards went to heaven, where he began to pass his days in happiness. Sometime after, India hurled him to the earth, but he managed to gain his footing on the celestial soil and again rose to heaven owing to his being in touch with the Kings, Astaka, &c. It is said that Yayāti returned to heaven from the firmament in company of the Kings Astaka, Śibi Vasumat and Pratardana—1-5

Sātanika—"Sage! Tell us in detail how Yayāti was hurled down to the earth and how he again went to heaven. King Yayāti was powerful like Indra, radiant like the Sun, and was the promoter of the Kuru clan. O Sage! I am eager to hear the story of his celestial and mundane glory"—6-9

Saunaka—"Hear you all the sacred history of Yayāti which is the dispeller of all sins. Hear it with attention, I am going to relate it to you"—10

King Yayāti, after putting his son on the throne, went to the forest as an anchorite, in other words, he made over his vast dominions to Puru and put his other sons, Yadu, &c., to discharge the various offices of the state, after doing which he passed a great number of days in the forest, living on fruits and herbs. By subduing his mind and conquering his anger he regularly performed agnihotra and offered libations to the Deities and the manes of ancestors, according to the rules prescribed for anchorites. He entertained his guests by offering them the jungle fruits and ate what he could get by picking up the gleanings of harvest (Śiloṣchha-vṛtti). Thus he passed a thousand years. Then he lived only on water for three years and kept up his vow of silence. Afterwards he warmed himself with the heat of fire around him, and for six months he practised penance by standing on one leg only. The glory of the king's asceticism went up to heaven from the earth — 11-17

Here ends the thirty-fifth chapter, dealing with the forest life of Yayāti.

CHAPTER XXXVI

Saunaka — That king, on reaching heaven, was venerated by Sādhyas, Marutganās, Vasus and the Devas. Afterwards, on account of his virtue, he went to Brahmāloka, where he resided for a long number of years. Once upon a time that sacred king Yayāti chanced to go to the region of Indra, when the latter asked him — 1-3

Indra — "King! tell me plainly what you said to your son, Puru (who taking your old age roamed about the world), at the time of his coronation?" — 4

Yayāti — "After making over charge of my realm, with the approval and advice of my ministers, and the people (Prakṛti) to Puru, I told him, 'You will be the sovereign of the country lying between the Ganges and the Yamunā. Your other brothers will be under you and ruling over the lands bordering on your kingdom.' At the same time, the following piece of advice was also given to him — "Man devoid of anger is superior to one full of it, man with forbearance is superior to one who is bereft of it, as man is superior to non-human beings, so a learned man is superior to an illiterate fool. One who shows forgiveness to another who abuses him in anger, consumes that angry being, and gets all his virtue. One should not utter such a harsh word as may cause pain to another. One should not accept anything from a low caste man. One should not use a speech that would grieve others. A harsh speaker, whose words pierce others like nails, should be considered a low creature, who goes to hell. A man should always win the admiration of high class people, and should always be defended by them at his back, should bear their criticism, obey their advice, and lead a good life. Harsh words penetrate a man like arrows and cause grief; they should therefore be avoided by sensible men. In the three worlds there is nothing superior to friendship, charity and sweet speech; consequently one should always be gentle in his speech and should show obedience to high class men and not curse any one." — 5-13

Here ends the thirty-sixth chapter, dealing with the advice given by Yayāti to his son Puru at the latter's coronation.
CHAPTER XXXVII

Indra—"King! I ask you to please tell me, how you practised austerities after renouncing your kingdom and entering to the forest as an anchorite."—1

Yayati—"I do not consider the austerities of the Devas, men, Gandharvas and Maharis as equal to my own."—2

Indra—"King! you do not know the glory of high souls and you decry other beings who are as good, or, better, than you; consequently, you are not fit to reside in these regions, because by this sin, you have lost your virtue and the privilege of living here. You must fall to-day, O King."—3

Yayati—Indra! If I have lost my virtue and the privilege of living here by running down the glory of the Devas, Rishis, Gandharvas, and men, I wish to fall from this heaven, among good people.—4

Indra—"You will fall now among good people, where you will regain your lost position. From this experience, you should no more despise those who are your equal or better than you."—5

Saunaka—After that, Yayati was thrown from the heaven. Astaka, residing in the central region and knower of the highest virtue, seeing him fall, said—

Astaka—"O, young soul, beautiful like Indra, shining like fire, and brilliant like the sun among the planets! Who are you? O, being, shining like the fire and the sun and falling from the path of the sun, on seeing you going down, we are confused and are in doubt whether the time has not come for all of us to fall. We have come to make enquiries about you, but we are bewildered by your power. You do not seem to heed us and make enquiries about us; consequently, we make ourselves bold to ask you the reason of your fall from the heavens. O Soul, beautiful like Indra, cast away your fears, grief and delusion. Nobody can view you with disrespect when you are standing face to face with high souls. The good ones are empowered to support the fallen. Here are the good, the lord of the moveable and the immoveable creations, and you are now in this holy company. Fire is lord in imparting heat, the Earth is lord with regard to those things which fecundate, the Sun is lord of all objects that shine, so a guest is lord to all good men."—6-13

Here ends the thirty-seventh chapter, describing the fall of Yayati and his meeting with Astaka.
CHAPTER XXXVIII

Yāyāti—"I am King Yāyāti, son of Nabhaga and father of Puru. India has hurled me down from the world of Sūtras and Siddhas for despising all creatures, and, now devoid of virtue, I am falling. I do not salute you, for I am your senior in age, because among the twice-born, one who is greater in learning, or, asceticism or senior in age, is a respected."—1-2

Aṣṭaka—"King! You say you are senior in age which is also a degree of superiority, but among the twice-born, one, who is greater in wisdom and asceticism, is alone reckoned superior, and not one who is merely senior in age."—3

Yāyāti—"They say, it is a sin to act against the rules of courtesy, and the doer of such a thing goes to the region of sinners, consequently, the good never follow the example of the wicked, when the latter speak against the rules of courtesy. I had vast riches which I had earned by my exertions,—considering this, who devotes himself to the good of the self, that man is truly wise. A wise man should take everything in the world to be subordinate to Fate, but taking the dominance of his fate into consideration, he should not give way to despair under adverse circumstances. One should always look upon prosperity and adversity to be subordinate to the Supreme Being, and should never consider them to be within his own power. Taking, therefore, fate to be predominant, one should not be influenced by grief or happiness. Aṣṭaka, thus taking fate to be all powerful, I am never overcome with delusion in fear, and never keep my mind loaded with grief. I believe that I shall go wherever my fate may take me. Andaja, Svedaja, Jāyayuja, Udbhija, snakes, reptiles, fish, stones, grass, wood, &c., assume them forms through fate. Aṣṭaka! Regarding prosperity and adversity to be trail, I do not worry myself about them. In other words, what was I? what I have become? what I shall do?—I never bother myself with thoughts like these."—4-11

Saṃkha—Then that Aṣṭaka, on hearing those words of his maternal grandfather—Yāyāti—asked him again—12

Aṣṭaka—"King! Tell me all about the chief regions where you have been to, because you lecture on Dharma like a learned man."—13

Yāyāti—"First, I became a king of an extensive Empire, afterwards, through my virtue, I lived in the region of Mahat, for a thousand years, and from that place I passed to higher spheres where I lived for another ten centuries in the enchanting realm of Indra, which is four hundred koda in extent and has a thousand gateways, whence I went to still higher regions. Then I passed one thousand years in the divine and ageless realm of Prajapati, which is inaccessible [even to the Devas and Lokapalas]. Afterwards, according to the will of the God of Gods and conquering several spheres, I lived there, according to my choice, venerated by the handsome and illustrious Devas equal in glory and lustre to the gods, after which, I went and spent ten thousand years in the pleasure-garden called Nandana the Kama-rupi, where I enjoyed the bloom of the flowers along with the captivating faces of the Gandharvas and the nymphs. Thus I enjoyed there for a considerable length of time, until a ferocious attendant of the God, came and said loudly, 'Throw him down, throw him down.' At that very instant, I fell from the heaven, but as I fell from Nandana, I heard the voice of the Devas who said, 'This pious king Yayati is falling with the loss of his virtue,' at which I requested them to show them clemency by letting me fall amongst the good on a sacred soil, and in this way, I have come to this land of sacrifices of yours, guided thereto by the smell of incense and of the offerings made to the fire'—14-22

Here ends the thirty-eighth chapter describing the dialogue between Yayati and Astaka

CHAPTER XXXIX

Astaka—"After spending ten thousand years in the pleasure garden called Nandana Kamanupa, how did you happen to come to this Earth again?"—1

Yayati—"As a penniless man is forsaken by his companions and relations, so the man deprived of virtues is deserted by the Devas in heaven."—2

Astaka—"In that region how do the people become bereft of virtue, and then to which regions do they go? Do remove my doubts."—3

Yayati—"King! Most of them fall to the earth and many of them fall so low that they are ultimately feasted upon by vultures and jackals. Consequently, it is meet for kings to always keep themselves aloof from forbidden things. I have explained all this to you, what more do you wish to enquire about?"—4-5

Astaka—"King! I now wish you to please explain to me what pain do they suffer when they are eaten by vultures and jackals, and what is the way of saving themselves from that hell torture? Also tell me all about the hell on earth and the means to save one from it."—6
Yayāti — "The people who are not conscious of their duty in course of their existence on earth, and whose corporeal actions are not lofty, go to the mundane hell. First, they hover about in the sky in the form of air, for a period of sixty thousand and eighty terrible years, and then at the time of their fall, they are devoured by terrestrial Rāksasas who have formidable fangs." — 7-8

Aṣṭaka — "How do they escape the torture inflicted upon them by ferocious, terrestrial Rāksasas with formidable fangs and how are they born on the earth?" — 9

Yayāti — "The menstrual flow of a woman suddenly develops conception as soon as it mingles itself with the semen virile of man, through the sap of the flowers of herbs." — 10

Note — पुष्परस्तुन्युक्तम् — lit., endowed with the juice of flowers. It means semen virile, purified and made potent by the properties of the juice of medicinal herbs.

"Medicinal herbs, full of vigour, go to the human and animal embryo, after getting into water, earth, air and the sky." — 11

Note — अपोवायम् प्रथितम् चान्त्रिक्षम् — lit., water, air, earth and the sky. It is said that the body is made of these elements. It therefore means that the vigour of medicinal herbs gets into the womb through the semen-virile, after first getting into the corporeal system.

Aṣṭaka — "Does this soul present itself in the womb with the help of other bodies, or of its own accord? Pray remove this doubt. Also explain, O king, how the body is developed and how the organs like the eyes, ears, etc., are formed. I regard you to be endowed with the supreme wisdom, and I therefore venture to request you to remove all these doubts." — 12-13

Yayāti — "At the time of menstruation, the air draws the semen virile up, from the inside, after which it magnifies itself there, and then it develops into the embryo and assumes human or animal form (according to the kind of the womb where such development occurs). It then hears the sounds through the ears, sees things through the eyes, smells with the nose, tastes with the tongue, feels perception with the skin, meditates with the mind. Similarly, all the limbs are gradually formed." — 14-16

Aṣṭaka — "The body which is consumed in fire, buried or eaten away by the lower animals, how does it again enshrine the soul within it?" — 17

Yayāti — "Just as a sleeping animal maintains life, similarly the soul after vacating the corpse, enters another body according to its virtue or sin. A virtuous soul is reborn (as a sequence of its good actions), in the form of a pious being, and similarly a vicious soul takes its birth as a reptile or insect. It is not, for me, to enumerate the sins, the commitment of which leads the soul to be born as a reptile or an insect. Astaka—"I have explained to you, briefly, the reasons of the soul becoming a quadruped, lower animal and man. Now tell me what more do you wish to ask me?"—18-20

Astaka—"Sure! Through what knowledge or which form of asceticism, does a man attain high name, and through what deeds, does he achieve high regions, please answer these questions."—21

Yayati—"For a man, the following seven things are the gates to heaven, viz. asceticism, charity, self-control, restraint, modesty, honesty, and kindness to all living creatures. Sages also say that even ascetics are ruined by conceit and tamoguna. A student who, thinking too much of his learning, employs his knowledge to belittle others, loses his privilege of finding a place in the higher regions, and that wisdom does not bear him fruit. The following four things, viz., the performance of agnibhotra, the observance of the vow of silence, the acquisition of knowledge and the performance of sacrifices, in spite of them being good deeds, are marred by indulgence in drinks and conceit. It is worthy of a large-minded man not to become elated on being praised by others and not to get angry at their calumnies. High-minded men worship the good, and the wicked never get supreme knowledge in the world. To give alms and to study the Vedas, according to the ways prescribed, should be considered to be the best of all, and the vices mentioned above, should always be discarded, which would enable the learned to go closer to Brahma, through constant contemplation, and then attain final beatitude."—22-28

Here ends the thirty-ninth chapter describing the dialogue between Yayati and Astaka.

CHAPTER XL

Astaka—"O King! Be good enough, to tell me how does a householder go to the Devas in the Heaven world, and how do a Sanyasi and a Brahmacharin reach them? Similarly how does a Vanaprastha attain the heavens?"—1

Yayati—"A student [Brahmacharin] attains his end by diligently studying when called by his teacher to do so, by showing reverence and obedience to his preceptor, by getting up ahead of his preceptor, and by going to bed after him, by being mild, by controlling his passions, by keeping himself steady and not fickle, and by applying himself to his studies. A householder, [Grhastra], is said to be ideal when he earns an honest living, performs sacrifices, entertains his guests, gives alms to the poor, and does not beg from others, nor accepts anything unless given unasked, and constantly studies Upanisads and Puranas. An anchorite, [Vanaprastra], should live in the forest on his daily-earned subsistence, is said to reach his goal when he earns his subsistence by self-sacrifice, keeps himself quite aloof from sins, is entertaining and of good cheer to others, and does not cause injury to any one. Such a muni attains perfection, being regular in his diet and activities. The Sannyasi should subsist on begging, and should not resort to any craft, should have no house of his own to live in, who check his passions, keep himself devout of all company, sleep under a tree, having limited ambitions, travelling in various countries, and having one suit of clothes. He is said to be a true Bhikshuka. At night time, when the rest of the world is indulging in sensual pleasures by being a slave to Cupid, the learned hermit should, peacefully, pass his time in the forest because the man who fixes his abode in the forest after weaning himself from the world, leads his twenty-one generations, including himself, viz., ten ancestors and an equal number of his successors, including himself, to the path of virtue."—2-7

Astaka — "King, I wish to hear who are to be classed among sages who keep the vow of silence (munis), and among observers of the vow of silence how many kinds of vows of silence (Mauna) are there?"—8

Yayati — "One who dwells in the woods and turns his back upon habitations, and also one who lives in town having his back turned upon the forest, are both high-minded munis."—9

Astaka — "How one dwelling in the woods has his back turned on habituation, and how one residing in town, has his back turned on the forest."—10

Yayati — "The muni who, fixing his dwelling in the forest, spurns at all the provisions of the town, and lives only on the produce of the woods, is said to turn his back on habituation. The sage (muni) who has passed the stage of performing ahamkara and has no house of his own, and has transcended the limitations of gotras (clan), and Chaanatas (Vedic Schools), puts on only a kaupina or wears cast off garments, eats only to keep his body and soul together, is the ascetic (muni), living in the village with his back turned towards the forest."—11-13

Note.—Kaupina = A strip of cloth worn as cover.

The seer (muni) who, after forsaking all, curbs his passions and observes the vow of silence, accomplishes his object in the world.—14.
A seer (muni), howsoever shabby he may be, ought to be adored by even such a man, who keeps his teeth clean, pure, white, always trims his finger nails, bathes every day, wears ornaments on his body, and leads a chaste life —15

Note — It means that a seer (muni), howsoever dirty and shabby he may be, is worthy of being venerated and adored without demur even by a good man whose person is comparatively most clean. The latter should, on no account, feel disgusted by the former’s ugly appearance.

One whose plethora of flesh and blood has disappeared by his severe penances and who has thereby become reduced to a mere skeleton, showing all his decayed bones, and devoid of the feeling of prosperity or adversity, sticks to his meditation, is said to be firm in his vow of silence (muni). When such a sage chews his morsel like a cow, and remains silent like the latter, he wins both the worlds and paves his way for the final bliss —16-17

Here ends the fortieth chapter describing the duties of the four stages of life

CHAPTER XLI

Aṣṭaka — "King! Who between the two (orders), viz., the Sanyāsi or the Vānaprastha attains to the region of the Devas first? Both of them are striving after Devahood in the heavenly path like the sun and the moon" — 1

Yayāti — "A Sanyāsi, though living in the village and amongst grīhasthas, but having no house of his own and control over his desires, goes first to Devahood and is better than one living in the forest." — 2

"One who, getting the body of man obtained with difficulty, commits sins, must repent sincerely for them and then practise rigid penances in forest to wash them off. Whatever is cruel, is said by the wise to be unwholesome, the follower of the path of unrighteousness is foolish, and, as an unrighteous man is aimless. Similarly, O King! holy man is truly simple, who is always in meditation, and is really noble." — 2-4

Aṣṭaka — "How have you chanced to come here? You are young, adorned with a beautiful garland (of flowers), and full of lustre. In which direction do you live, and where have you come from?" — 5

Yayāti — "Losing my virtue, and consequently falling from the heaven, I have come here. I shall, after telling you all my experience of the heaven, go to the hell on earth, whilst all of you and these Brāhmanaś will go to heaven. It is through the clemency of Indra that I have had the pleasure of meeting you good men, the lofty and the learned folks of this region."—6-7

Astaka—"King! I reckon you to be pious, and I therefore venture to ask you, whilst you are falling, whether there are any regions for me also in the heaven."—8

Yayati—"Take it for certain, that there are as many regions for you in the heaven, as there are forests in your worldly realm, full of cows, horses, birds, &c."—9

Astaka—"King! I dedicate all those regions of mine in the heaven (Deva plane), as well as in the astral plane, to you, on account of your fall. May you reach there ere long."—10

Yayati—"King! A Non-Brâhmana, versed in the Vedas like myself, cannot accept any charity. I have also given away alms in my former days, as is always given to Brâhmans daily. Excepting a Brâhmana, no one of any other caste, howsoever poor he may be, can accept the offerings of charity. Even, the wife of a Brâhmana, having a valiant husband, does not accept alms. On these considerations, how can I persuade myself to do a thing which I never did before, and accept your gift."—11-12

Note—Mark the magnanimity of Astaka and the firm righteousness of Yayati. The ideal of that high civilization is also remarkable.

King Pratardana—"O beautiful one! I am King Pratardana. Have you also heard anything about there being any regions for me in the Deva or the astral world? I put this question to you, because I consider you to be so holy."—13

Yayati—"King! There are many regions for you, on account of your having poured a stream of ghee and honey, into the fire for full seven hundred days. All these of your regions are devoid of grief and every day incessantly, leaks with honey for seven hundred days at a time. They are, however, measurable."—14

Pratardana—"King! I also dedicate my regions whether in the Devaloka or in the astral plane to you who are falling, and may you instantly attain them in the heaven."—15

Yayati—"King! an equally valiant king does not accept help and support from his compeer. A king, even getting into trouble through accident, should never do anything undignified. The thinker of Dharma, the knowen of Dharma and fame, the learned like myself should never do such a thing as you wish me to do  What has not been done before, I can never do now"—16 17

Then King Vasumān addressed Yayātī who was talking like that—18

Here ends the forty-first chapter describing the offers of Astaka and Prataśdāna to Yayātī.

CHAPTER XLII

Vasumān—0 ruler of men! I, King Vasumān, known as Audasaśvī ask you about that world of mine, whether it is in Heaven or in the middle region, for I consider thee to know the duties pertaining to that world—1

Yayātī—"King! Like the lustre of your world wide fame, your regions in the heaven glitter like the sun and are awaiting for you"—2

Vasumān—"I bestow all those regions on you who are falling, and O King! if you cannot accept them as a present, then be good enough to buy them from me after making a nominal payment"—3

Yayātī—"King! I have never gone in for such a sham purchase even in my boyhood. A conscientious man never resorts to such methods"—4

Vasumān—"King, if you are not willing to accept them on payment of something nominal, then take them as a gift from me. I will not go there, may they be yours."—5

Śibi—"Sire! I Śibi, descendant of Uṣānara, and knowing you to be pious, I also wish to enquire whether there are any quarters for me in the heaven and the middle region"—6

Yayātī—"King! You have never defiled or defamed any one either in your mind or by your words, consequently, you have many regions in the heaven that shine like lightning and always resound with music, and are wide stretching"—7

Śibi—"King! Be pleased to accept those regions after paying me something for them if you do not feel disposed to accept them as a present I shall not go to those regions, you take them for yourself"—8

Yayātī—"Your regions are as illustrious as yourself, who are as glorious as Indra, but I do not feel inclined to go to the regions conferred on me by others, nor do I approve those words of yours"—9

Astaka—"King! Thou dost not accept individually any one of our regions given separately nor do you approve our words, we will all therefore prefer collectively to go to hell, after conferring all our respective worlds on you."—10

Yayāti—"You being the speaker of truth, and noble, should utter proper words I do not accept the fruit of the deeds not done by me in my past life, not because you have expressed your wish like this to one who does not banker after anything, but the words with which you offered them to me will give you manifold benefit for having done so."—11-12

Aṣṭaka—"To whom do these five chariots, visible at a distance and shining like gold and luminous like the flame of blazing fire, belong?"—13

Yayāti—"These chariots, glittering like gold, are meant for you and myself You are worthy of going to heaven after getting yourself seated in them along with me."—14

Aṣṭaka—"King! You get yourself seated in the chariot and go to heaven through the sky We shall also go there when our turn comes."—15

Yayāti—"All of you are even now worthy of going to heaven, because you have won it This seems to be your spotless road to heaven."—16

Śaunaka—At the time of their ascending to heaven, seated in those chariots, they looked as majestic as Heaven and Earth covered by Dharma.—17

Aṣṭaka—"Indra is my companion, and I had thought that I should go the best way, but how is this King Śibi going now, seated in the chariot, drawn by the swiftest of horses?—18

Yayāti—"King Śibi has given away all in charity for the sake of going to heaven, consequently, Śibi, the son of Uṣīnara, is superior to all of you O King! Śibi is charitable, pure, truthful, harmless, modest, wealthy, enduring, gentle, and views every one with equality It is for this reason that he is going in that finest chariot."—19-20

Śaunaka—Aṣṭaka again asked his maternal grandfather, who was like Indra, though curiously, to tell him who he was, how and whence he went there, because there was no other Brāhmaṇa or Kṣatriya who had pursued high actions like him.—21

Yayāti—"I am King Yayāti, the world Emperor, the son of Nahuṣa and the father of Puru, and your maternal grandfather I never speak untruth before any one I conquered all the world and dedicated it to Brāhmaṇas, and also conferred on them many a beautiful steed The Devas seeing me doing such noble deeds acknowledged my virtue After giving away the land, flourishing with all kinds of produce, to the Bāmanas, I also bestowed on them innumerable cows, horses, elephants, and a vast quantity of gold. On account of truthfulness, my glory shines before men and the Devas on Earth and in the Heaven respectively. I have not said anything untrue, because it is only truth that is admired by the high-minded. O Aṣṭaka! I am speaking the truth to you and to Pratardhana, Vasumān and Śūnu. My conviction is that all the Devas, sages and regions deserve being worshipped and venerated only on account of truth. Any one who, after having conquered the Heaven, offers ungrudgingly and without envy to the best of the twice born, will attain the same regions where we are going."—22-27

Śaunaka—"King! That high-souled Yayāti in this way, through his magnificent daughter’s sons, was saved from fall, and after leaving the earth, that doer of great charitable deeds rose to Heaven, filling the Earth with his renown. This history of King Yayāti I have narrated to you in detail. It is in his dynasty, which is famous by the name of Kaūravayas, that you have been born, O, Son of Manu, illustrious like Indra."—28-29

Here ends the forty-second chapter dealing with the story of Yayāti born in the Lunar dynasty.

CHAPTER XLIII

Śūta—King Satānuka was amazed to hear all that from Śaunaka and glowed, like the full moon, with delight. Afterwards, he presented jewels, cows, gold and several kinds of clothes to Śaunaka. Śaunaka also disappeared then and there, after distributing to the Bṛāhmanas all that he had obtained from the king—1-3

The Rsis—"Śūta! Now we are anxious to hear in detail about the sons of King Yayāti, and the dynasty which was established in the world by the sons of Yadu and others.—4

Śūta—"Hearken, O Rsis! I am now going to narrate to you at full length about the family of Yadu, the eldest son of Yayāti. Yadu had five sons of mighty chariots and great bows who looked like the Devas. They were named, Sahasraji, Kriṣṭhū, Nīla, Antika, Laghu. The eldest—Sahasraji—was the father of Śatāji.—5-7

Hahaya, Haya and Venu-haya were the three famous heirs of Śatāji.—8

Dharmanetra was the son of Hahaya and the father of Kunti. Kunti was the father of Sambhata and Sambhata was the father of Mahisamān. Mahisamān begot an illustrious son, Rudrāreniya.—9-10
CHAPTER XLIII

Rudrasrenya was afterwards the famous king of Kāśi and became the father of Durdama — 11.

Kanaka, the intelligent and powerful, was the son of Durdama. Of Kanaka, there were four famous sons, viz., Krtotoxic, Kritāgai, Krtavarmā, Kritoja — 12.

Arjuna, who was the Lord of seven continents through his thousand arms, and the son of Krtavirya, practised difficult penances for ten centuries and worshipped Datta, the son of Atri, who, becoming pleased, granted him four boons — 13-15.

Arjuna sought and got the boons of having a thousand arms, of the power of protecting the virtuous against the doers of evil deeds, the power of ruling the world righteously after conquering it, and his destruction in war at the hands of an adversary more valiant than himself. After thus getting those four boons by his valour, he conquered this world of seven continents by righteous war, conducted, according to the Ksatriya rules, together with the oceans and mountains. At his mere wish he got a thousand arms, and it is also said that, similarly, chariots and banners were also called into being. He performed ten thousand sacrifices and had access to every nook and corner of the universe. He gave enormous presents to the Brāhmānas at those sacrifices. On the occasion of those sacrifices, the pillars and the sacrificial altar were made of gold, and the Devas, seated on their Vimānas, the Gandharvas, men and Apsaras took part in them — 16-22.

Seeing the glory of that sovereign, the sage Nārada, the Gandharvas, and the Apsaras began to sing the praises of his sacrifices. There was no other Ksatrīya king who could rival him in the performance of sacrifices, in the giving of alms, in the practice of asceticism, in prowess and in the learning of the Sūtras. That monarch always toured about his extensive state, and punished the thieves, and he killed with his sword, quiot, and arrows — 23-25.

He ruled the Earth for eighty-five thousand years. He was world Emperor and had a treasury full of gems. He was the protector of cattle of fields, he was the giver of rain like thunder-cloud and the defender of the faith, and through his asceticism became illustrious. He looked as beautiful as the thousand-rayed autumnal sun, at the time of his twanging his bow with his thousands arms. He founded the city of Mahismata, after conquering the Nīga King, son of Kaikotaka. That city was laved by the waves of the ocean during the rains wherein the king played in the waves, as it ebbed and flowed in the beach — 26-30.
When he agitated the waters of the river in his gambols, the Nar-madâ, trembling with fear at his sight and becoming highly astonished, surrendered herself to him. He alone, with his thousand arms, swelled it by putting the water of the sea into it and increased it, as it increases in the monsoon, and the ocean being thus agitated by his thousand arms became subdued by him, and he extended his sea power, so that the residents in Pâtalâ (antipodes) became inoffensive and quiet — 31-33

When he would break the surges and powder the sharks and the fish, &c., by his thousand arms, and remove the foam arising out by contact of the wind, he really looked as if he was annihilating the very ocean. At that time, by the tremou of the Mandara Mount, the mighty serpents clustering round it, trembled with fear, thinking that they might again be employed in the churning of the ocean to get out nectar, they were quiet like the plantain leaf that does not shiver in the evening when there is no wind to shake it — 34-36

That king once tied up the valiant Râvana and stunned him with his five arrows in his own kingdom, Lanka. After conquering him he brought and confined Râvana in his capital—Mihismatipuri when Pulastya went and solicited Arjuna to release his son Râvana which he did — 37-39

The sound of his thousand arms resembled the echo of clouds that arise at the close of Yuga, but it is very strange, that his thundering arms were cut down by Parasurâma, the descendant of Bhrigu — 39-40

Arjuna, who had a thousand arms, that looked like golden palm trees, had burnt the forest of the sage Âpava, at which the latter becoming enraged cursed him that Parasurâma would humble his pride and deprive him of his thousand arms, and that the same powerful ascetic, after cutting down his thousand arms, would also kill him — 41-43

Sûta said — On account of that curse of Âpava, that thousand-armed king was killed by Parasûrâma. He had also himself sought the boon of being killed in battle by some valiant adversary superior to him in prowess — 44

That thousand-armed monarch had one hundred sons, and out of them, five were the most righteous, valiant and illustrious. The first valiant son among them was Sûrasena, next the powerful Sûra, then Krosta, then Jayadhvaja of diverse deeds, and lastly Avantu — 45-46

Tâlajangha was the powerful son of Jayadhvaja who had one hundred sons under the name of Tâlajanghas — 47
CHAPTER XLIV

Afterwards, those sovereigns of the Haishiya clan had these five illustrious clans, viz—Vithotras, Sāryātas, Bhojas, Āvantis and Kupūlikeras. Vithotras begot the powerful Ānarta, who became the father of Durjeya, the conqueror of all enemies—48-49

That Kartavirya Arjuna, of thousand arms, was renowned for his prowess, righteousness and protection of his subjects—50

He conquered the earth up to the sea with his bow and arrow. One who recites the name of the thousand-armed king in the morning, never loses his wealth, on the other hand, he gets back his lost riches. One who would relate the birth of Kārtavirya with a clear conscience will go to heaven—51-52

Here ends the forty-third chapter dealing with the history of Soma dynasty in the family of Yayāti and of Kārtavirya Arjuna

CHAPTER XLIV

The R̄ṣis said—Sāta! Why did the thousand-armed King Kārtavirya, burn the forest of the Sage Āpava? Please tell us fully the reason of his having done so. We have been given to understand that that royal sage was the protector of his subjects, how then did he burn the forest of that ascetic—1-2

Sāta answered—Once upon a time, the Sun went to the king in the form of a Brāhmana, and said, ‘O Lord of men, I am Āditya, grant me one satisfaction’—3

The King said—O Lord, the Day-maker, what will satisfy you? What shall I offer you for your repast? Hearing which I shall make the arrangement for the same—4

The Sun—‘O the best giver amongst all persons! give me all stationary objects (trees, &c.) to feast upon, and that would satisfy me’—5

The King—O God! I have not the power with all my energy or strength to cook the entire stable objects of the world as thy food, so I bow down to thee—6

The Sun—‘King! I am pleased with you, and I present you with the exhaustless quiver of arrows that would have their effect in all directions. These arrows will be endowed with my potency, and the moment you discharge them on the trees they would be consumed. These arrows endowed with my potency will dry up the trees and reduce them to ashes afterwards, and thus I shall get satisfaction, O Lord of men’—7-8, Sūta — Afterwards, the Sun presented him with the arrows, and the latter burnt all the trees with them. He burnt up the villages, hermitages, the population of herdsmen, big cities, forests of ascetics and orchards. In that way, when he consumed the eastern direction it became treeless, grassless, and the land was destroyed along with the south, by that terrible beat — 9-11

The Sage Āpāva, who was practising penances standing in water for ten thousand years, found on his return that his forest had been burnt down by the king—at which he became enraged and cursed him, as stated before. Now listen to the history of the glorious dynasty of King Kṛṣṭu — 12-14

It was in the family of this very Kṛṣṭu that the God Viṣṇu incarnated Himself as Kṛṣṇa, who afterwards promoted the Vṛśni clan, which I am going to relate to you in due order. Kṛṣṭu begot Vṛṣṇi-vāna, and the latter became the father of the powerful Svakha, and Rūṣāngu was the son of Svakha — 15-16

Samśīva was the son of Rūṣāngu and the father of Chitra and Chitrāratha — 17

Śaśāvindu was the son of Chitrāratha, who was renowned for his charity, and became World Emperor — 18

Afterwards, the family of Śaśāvindu became of worldwide fame. He begot one hundred sons who also begot the same number of sons — 19

Out of the hundred grandsons of Śaśāvindu, the following six were the most illustrious, clever, handsome, wealthy, powerful, and all having the title of Pithūrī, — Pithūrtavā, Pithūrvā, Prithuvā, Prithubharā, Prithubhāja, Pithukriti and Pithubhumā. Out of them, the learned in Purāṇas speak very highly of Pithubhāja who performed many sacrifices. He was the father of Suyājña — 20-22

Suyājña became the father of Uṣanā, who was the protector of the world and the performer of one hundred asvamedha sacrifices — 23

Tīrūkaṇu the destroyer of enemies, was the son of Uṣanā and the father of Marutta, best of all royal sages — 24

Marutta begot Kambalbaraḥa, the father of the learned Rukmakavacha, who also conquered his enemies and performed asvamedha sacrifices and gave many presents to the Bhūmanas, when out of the sacrificial fire emerged five valiant sons, armed with bows and arrows. They were — Rukmesu, Prithuvākma, Jvamagha, Pāṅgha, Hari — 25-28
Parigha and Hain were given to rule the Videha country by their father, while Rukmeau succeeded to the throne [of his father] and was a ruler of a protectorate under him — 29

Jyāmaga was turned out by his other brothers, and in disgust he took to Sannyāsa, and was taught by a Brāhmaṇa, and so became of serene mind and again entered the order of house-holders — 30

After that, he armed himself with bow and arrows and seating himself in a chariot with a streaming banner over it, started all by himself to seek his fortune in other lands. He went to some place on the banks of the Narmada, whence he went to the Rikṣavanta hills and settled there along with others. There he married a noble lady, named Chaitrā. He did not marry any other lady, in spite of his not getting any children from his wife Chaitrā. Sometime after, the King Jyāmaga brought a beautiful damsel as a boast of his victory in a war, and said to the queen, through fear of her, that she was a daughter-in-law, whereupon the queen, amazingly enquired whose son's wife she was — 31-34

The king replied, "She shall be the wife of the son born to thee in the future." Hearing which, through the virtue of great austerities of that girl, Chaitrā begot a son, named Vidarbha.

He, Vidarbha, begot out of that princess Kiatha, Kantika and Lompada, who were heroes and well-versed in the art of war — 35-36

Lompada's son was Manu, whose son was Jēati — 37

Kantika was the father of Chindi, who was the founder of Chaidya dynasty of kings. Kiatha, the third son of Vidarbha, was the father of Kunti and the latter of Dhṛṣṭa, who was renowned as most valiant and righteous Dhṛṣṭa became the father of Nṛsiṁha, the valiant and virtuous — 38-39

Nṛsiṁha was the father of Vidūratha, and the latter of Dādāha, the father of Vyoma. The son of Vyoma was Jīmūta — 40

Vimala was the son of Jīmūta and the father of Bhirāratha, who begot Navaratha — 41

Navaratha begot Dridharatha, the father of Śakuni, who begot Kārāmhabha, the father of Devarāta. Devarāta was the father of the very famous Devakṣatra, the father of Madhu, the rejoicer of Devanasakshtra and born as if a Deva. He was father of Puravasas, who begot Purudvān, of Vidarbha clan, the father of Jantu from his wife Bhadiaseni, daughter of Vidhārva clan. Jantu hore from his wife, the lady of the Ikṣvāku clan, Sātvata who diffused the name and fame of the Sātvatas Yādavas through his sattvaguna. One who hears the narration of the lunar race of Jyāmaga is blessed with children — 42-48
The lady, named Kauñšila, begot the progeny known by the epithet of Sātvata, the righteous. The Sātvata kings were Bhañj, Bhañjamāna, Devāvṛṣiṇhā, Andhaka, Mahābhīṣja, Vṛṣṇi and Yadunandana, under four different sub-divisions, which is going to be narrated in detail —47-48

King Śrīṇjayē had two daughters, both of whom became the wives of Bhañjamāna. They were Śrīṇjayē and Vāhyakāś. Then progeny is known under the epithet of Vāhyakāśā. These two sisters, his wives, begot many sons, viz., Nīmī, Krimila, and Vṛṣṇi, the conqueror of enemy's town —49-50

Devāvṛṣiṇhā improved the relations with his kinsmen, but was issueless, and with the intention of having a son he practised devout austerities. With that view, he touched the holy waters of the Parnāsā at which that river brooded over the desirers of Devāvṛṣiṇhā. She decided in her mind that Devāvṛṣiṇhā should beget a handsome child like herself, but could not hit upon any lady who would beget him such an offspring. Therefore, she determined in her mind that she herself, having the power of manifesting herself in thousands of ways, would give birth to a child like that, for him. With that resolution, she appeared before the king in the form of a young beauty and attracted the ascetic king towards her. After which they became enamoured of each other and enjoyed themselves. Nine months after, she gave birth to Vabhru —51-56

The learned in the Purāṇas sing the praises of that virtuous king, Devāvṛṣiṇhā, as follows —"As we heard his praises from a distance, so we find them true when seeing him from near. Vabhru is best amongst men and equal to Devas and his father, Devāvṛṣiṇhā. By the glory of Vabhru, the son of Devāvṛṣiṇhā, 70,000 of his ancestors were liberated and attained final bliss. That King Vabhru was the performer of great sacrifices, the giver of alms, valiant, steady observer of religious rites, handsome, most illustrious, ambitious and fond of listening to the Śāstras"—57-60.

His queen, the daughter of the King Kanka, gave birth to four sons, viz., Kukura, Bhañjamāna, Sāsi, Kambal Varhīśa —61.

Vṛṣṇi was the son of Kukura and the father of Dhriti, who begot Kapotromā, the father of Tātttri. Tātttri was the father of the learned Nala, and is known as Nandanodaradundubhi of worldwide fame —62-63

He performed ātvamedha sacrifice with the desire of getting a son. At the end of Atrāttra ceremony, his son, named Purarvasu, arose in the midst of the assembly from the sacrificial pool. Therefore, he was learned, renowned for his love of sacrifices, charities, &c —64-65

Punarvasu begot a twin, named Ahuka and Ahukt. The following Slokas are recited about Ahuka — 66

"He always lived equipped with an army of armoured chariots, with banners flying over them. His army consisted of ten thousand chariots thundering like the clouds. He was never untruthful, never lustreless, never remained without performing sacrifices and never gave less than a thousand in charity. He was never impure, never ignorant of learning. Such was Ahuka, born in the Bhoja family, and after him Ahuka and other clans came to be known" —67-69

He married his sister, Ahuki, to Avanti, and begot from his queen, the daughter of Kāśya, the two sons, viz., Devaka and Ugrasena, who were born like the Devas. Devaka also begot four sons and seven daughters, viz., Devavāna, Upadeva, Sudeva, and Devarakṣita. Their seven sisters were Devaki, Śrutadevi, Mitradevi, Yasodharā, Sridevi, Satyadevi, and Sutāpi, the seventh, who were married to Vasudeva —70-73

Ugrasena was father of nine sons. Amongst them, Kamsa was the eldest. The others were Nyagrodha, Sunāmā, Kaṅka, Saṅku, Ajabhū, Rāṣṭrapāla, Yudhamusti, Sumusti. Their sisters were five, viz., Kamsā, Kamsavatī, Sutantū, Raṣṭrapālī and Kaṅka Ugrasenā and his descendants all belonged to the Kukura clan —74-76

Bhoja was the father of the famous Vidūratha, who begot the valiant Rājādhīdeva — 77

Rājādhīdeva begot two deva-like, virtuous sons, named Śonāśva and Svetavāhana — 78

Śonāśva had five sons, all heroic and well-versed in war. They were — Samī, Vedārmanā, Nikunta, Śukra and Šatrujīta — 79

Samī was the father of Pratikṣetra, who begot Pratikṣetra, the father of Bhoja, who became the father of Hṛidika — 80

Hṛidika had ten valiant sons — Krutavarmā, was the eldest amongst them. Satadhanavā was the second. The others were Devārha, Nābha, Bhīsana, Mahābala, Jayā, Vanajāta, Kanlyaka, and Kambhakteva. Devārha was the father of the learned Kambalavarihā, who begot Asāmaṇjā, the father of Ta-Moja — 81-83

Jayāta begot the following three illustrious sons, who were known under the name of Andhakas — Sudanāstra, Sunābha, Kṛṣṇa — 84
One who daily recites the family of the Andhakas obtains a large family —85

Here ends the forty-fourth chapter describing the Soma dynasty

CHAPTER XLV

Śuta — Gândhārī and Mādhī were the wives of Vṛṣṇi, and Sumitra, the rejoicer of his friends, was born from Gândhārī. Mādhī begot five sons, named Yudhājīta, Devamithuna, Anamītra, Śibi, Kriṭalakṣaṇa —1-2

Anamītra became the father of Nighva, who begot two sons, viz., the most powerful Prasena and Saktisena, also known as Satrājīta —3

Prasena possessed Syamantaka, which was the best of all gems on the earth, and was known as the king of all gems. Prasena used always to wear his beautiful Syamantaka jewel on his breast and Kṛṣṇa more than once expressed a desire to have it, but was refused by Prasena, and even though Kṛṣṇa was powerful to take it by force, he did not like to do that —4-5

Once upon a time, Prasena wearing his Syamantaka gem went out for a hunt, when hearing the voices of some wild beasts in a cave he entered it and found a bear inside, and they looked at each other. He fought with the animal, but was killed by the latter. After that, the bear took the matchless jewel from the person of the dead king and retired into the deeper cavities of the cave. In the meantime the news of Prasena’s death became public —6-8

Knowing him to be dead, Śrīkṛṣṇa was dismayed. Some one gave currency to the rumour that Prasena was murdered by Kṛṣṇa for the sake of the Syamantaka gem. It was insinuated that Prasena went out wearing his priceless Syamantaka gem and was decidedly killed by Kṛṣṇa, who usurped the jewel from him Satrājīta, the brother of the deceased, also thought the same —9-11

Sometime after Śrīkṛṣṇa, also went out to hunt in the forest and approached the very cave of the bear, when the beast seeing him began to groan and growl, at which he entered the cave with sword in hand. He found the bear to be Jambavanta, the King of all bears. He then hastily, with great valour, made Jambavanta a captive and then turned his eyes full of wrath towards him. The King of the bears then pleased Lord Śrīkṛṣṇa, the manifestation of Viṣṇu, with his devotion —12-15

Kṛṣṇa becoming pleased wanted to grant him some boon. Jambavanta said —I wish that I may be killed by Thee, O Lord, through the striking of Sudardana Chakra, and thus suspicious daughter of mine be accepted by Thee as Thy wife. This gem which I had obtained, O Lord, by killing Prasena, be accepted by Thee—16-17

After that, Krishna killed Jambavanta by his Sudardana Chakra and then returned with the Syamantaka and the daughter of the King of bears, named Jambavati—18

Then Krishna presented Syamantaka to Sarajita in the assemblage of the Sātvatas, and told them how much aggrieved he was by the false accusation levelled by them against him—19-20

Then all the Yādavas thus spoke to Vasudeva—"Our idea was that Prasena was killed by Thee"—21

King Kaikaya had ten daughters, who all were married to Sarajita. The sons born of them were one hundred and one, of worldwide fame and the eldest of them was Bhoagakāra. Then Bhoagakāra begot from his wife Vrataevati three graceful and lotus-eyed daughters named, Satyabhāmā the best amongst women, and Vratini, of strong vows, and Padmāvatī. All three of them were the most virtuous of all women Sarajita, to please Krishna, gave them all in marriage to him—22-24

Anamitra, the youngest of the sons of Vrisi, was the father of Śimi, whose son was Satyaka, whose son was Sātyaka Yuyudhāna, the truthful, was the grandson of Śimi and was powerful. Asaṅga was the son of Yuyudhāna and the father of Dyumna. Yogandhara was the son of Dyumna. This is how the family of Śimi has been described—25-26

The family of Anamitra belonging to the Vṛṣṇi clan, has been thus described. Anamitra was the father of Yudhajīta, the brave, whose brothers were Vṛśabha and Kṣatra, both great heroes. Vṛśabha was married to the daughter of the King of Kāśi. His wife, Jayanti, bore him Jayanta who performed many sacrifices and was renowned for his prowess and hospitality—27-29

Jayanta was the father of Akrūra, who was also famous for the performance of sacrifices and giving of many presents. He was married to Ratnā, the daughter of Savya, from whom he begot eleven sons, viz. Upalambha, Sadalambha, Vrikala, Virya, Śimi (Sāvitrā), Mahāpākaśa, (Sādapaśa), Satrughna, Vārimejaya, Dhamabhīt, Dhrīmarvarma and Dhrīstamāra. Those sons of Ratnā were all very pious—31-33

Akrūra was also the father of two sons, named Devavāna and Upadeva, from his other wife, Ugrasena. Both of them were handsome like the Devas—34
Besides them, Akrūra had the following sons from his wife, Aśvinī—Prithu, Viśrābha, Advāthāmā, Subāhū, Supārśa, Gavaśana, Vṛṣṭinemi, Sudharmas, Saryā, Abhūmi, Vaijāhūmi, Śramistha and Śravana—35-36

Śrīkriṣṇa saved Himself from the calumny of stealing the Syamantaka jewel, by killing Jámbavāna. One who hears or recites to others this piece, will never be liable to be falsely defamed a thief—37

Here ends the forty-fifth chapter describing the Vṛṣṇi branch of the Lunar dynasty

CHAPTER XLVI

Śūta said—Aikvākī, the daughter of King Ikṣvāku bore Śūra, a heroic son, named and renowned as Adhītāmidhūsas, to her lord, Puruṣa. Śūra, the son of Puruṣa, begot from Bhujā ten sons, named, the famous and mighty-armed Vasudeva, known also as Ánakadundubhi, Devamārga, Devādīvā, Ánādhīrā, Śī, Nanda, Śrīnā, Śyāma, Śamika, Śamījā, and the following five daughters, viz.—Śrutakrītī, Prithā, Śrutadevi, Śrutasravā, Rājadhūdevi. All these five girls were mothers of heroes—1-4

Kṛta begot from Śrutadevi his son, Sugrīva, Kākaikaya begot Anuvrata from Śrutakrītī, the King Chādīya became the father of Suniṣṭha, from his wife, Śrutasravā, who was the conqueror of his enemies and the observer of all religious rites in the year—5-6

After that Śūra, out of friendship, gave his daughter, Prithā, for being adopted by Kuntibhoja, who was very old, and for that reason she also came to be known as Kunti, the sister of Vasudeva, Vasudeva gave in marriage his sister, Kunti, to King Pāndu, for whom he bore several brave sons, through Devas—7-8

Kunti gave birth to Yudhishṭhira, through Dharma, Bhīmasena through Vāyu, Arjuna, as powerful as Śaṅkī, through Indra. Mādri gave birth to Nakula and Sahadeva, through the glory of the Áśvinī Kumāras. Both of the brothers were brave, modest and handsome—9-10

Rohini, of the Puru family, the wife of Vasudeva known as Ánakadundubhi, gave birth to the eldest son, Balarāma, and to his brothers, Sārāna, Durduma, Damana, Subhru, Pundāraka, and Mahāhanu. She also gave birth to two beautiful daughters, named Cītrā and Aksī—11-12

Vasudeva begot from his other wife, Devaki—Susena, Klrītīmāna, Udāśī, Bhadrāsena, Rājivāsa, and Bhadravideha the sixth, who were all killed by the King Kamsa, as soon as they were born—13
CHAPTER XLVI

Lord Kṛṣṇa was born on the first Amāvasya of the year, in the month of Vaiśākha—14

(It is so stated in the Purāṇas, owing to the difference in Kalpa other wise it is laid down in the Bhāgavata that Kṛṣṇa was born in the month of Bhādra, on the 8th of the dark fortnight.) The sweet-speaking Subhadrā, the beautiful sister of Kṛṣṇa, was born after him. Both Kṛṣṇa and Subhadrā were born of Devaki—15

Vasudeva begot from his wife, Tāmā, Sahadeva, after whom Upāsāgadāhara and his sister were born. She was also killed by Kamsa—16

Vasudeva begot from Upadevi—Rochmāna, Vairamāna, Devula, and from Vṛikadevi he begot—Mahātmā, Avagāha, and Nandaka—17-19

Afterwards, Vasudeva begot Madana, the seventh son of Devaki, and from Śraddhādevi he begot Gavesana. Formerly, he had begotten Kauśika from his wife of the Vaiśya clan—20

Note—This is an instance of an intermarriage between a Kṣatriya and a Vaiśya.

Pandra and Kapila were born from the wives of Vasudeva, Sutānu and Ratharājī, respectively—21

Of whom, the first came to be known as a great archer among the Nīśadha clan, known as Jorā. After him, Saubhadra and Bhava were born of his wife, of the Vaiśya caste—22

Uddhava was the son of Devamārga, who is known to be a man of great learning—23

Anādhrīṣṭī became the father of Śatrughna from Ikṣvākū, who also begot Śraddhā—24

King Karusa, who had no issue, was given in adoption a powerful son, named Suchandra, by Śri Kṛṣṇa—25

Kṛṣṇa begot Chārudesa and Samba from his wife, Jāmbavatī—26

Tantipāla and Tanti were the sons of Nandana Śamika begot four powerful sons, named Viraśa, Dhanu, Śyamya and Śrīśaśāya—27

Śyamya had no issue, and Śamika despising all pleasures went to the forest, where he attained to Rājarṣihood—28

One who daily hears or recites the birth and family history of Lord Śri Kṛṣṇa, will become liberated from all his sins and go to heaven—29

Here ends the forty-sixth chapter dealing with the dynasty of the Vṛṣṇis.
CHAPTER XLVII

Sūta said —The Lord of all, the Protector of the universe, manifested Himself as Śrīkṛṣṇa for the purpose of His pastime. Through the asceticism of Vasudeva, Śrīkṛṣṇa was born in the womb of Devaki. His eyes were like lotus. He had four arms, and His Divine form was of unsurpassing splendour. When He was born like that in His glory, wearing the Śrīvatsa jewel, Vasudeva besought Him with folded hands, saying “Hide that form O Lord, I make this request to you, on account of my fear of Kamsa, who has killed my powerful sons, thy elder brothers” — 1-4

In compliance with those words of Vasudeva, Lord Kṛṣṇa hid His form of Divine glory and asked Him to send him to the house of Nanda. Accordingly, Vasudeva took him to the house of Nanda, and requested the latter to look after the Divine babe, like his own child, and added that the celestial infant would bring prosperity to the Yādavas, and this child, born of the womb of Devaki, will kill Kamsa — 5-6

The Sages said —Sūta! Who were Vasudeva and Devaki, to whom the manifestation of Lord Viṣṇu was born as a son and called them His parents, and who were Nanda and Yaśodā, who saw the childish freaks of that Divine babe? — 7-8

Sūta said —Kaśyapa became man and had Aditi for his wife. The former was born by the glory of the Creator and the latter was created from a particle of the Earth. — 9

Note — It means that Kaśyapa was a partial incarnation of the Creator, whilst his wife, Aditi, was that of the goddess of earth.

Afterwards Devaki in the form of Aditi, was granted all the fulfillment of her desires by Viṣṇu. — 10

Note — It means that Aditi was afterwards born as Devaki, through the process of transmigration of the soul, in which her desires were fulfilled by the pleasure of Viṣṇu.

Lord Viṣṇu manifested Himself in the human form and deluded the world by His Yoge powers. Its history is that, when the earth became deprived of righteousness and the Asuras swelled the world, Lord Viṣṇu, in order to re-establish righteousness, incarnated Himself in the human form in the Vṛṣṇi family — 11-12

Śrī Kṛṣṇa had sixteen thousand wives, of whom Rukmini, Saityabhāmā, Satyā, Nāgajīti, Subhāmā, Śāivyā, Gāndhāri, Lākṣmanā, Mitravindā, Kālindī, Jāmba-Vati, Susilā, Mādri, Kauḍalyā, Viṣayā were the principal ones. — 13-14
Rukmini gave birth to the following sons, proficient in the art of war, viz., Chārudeśa, Pradyumna, Suchāru, Bhadrachāru, Sudeśa, Bhadra, Paraśu, Chārugupta, Chāmbhadia, Suchāruka, Chāruhāsa, and a girl named Chānumaiti — 15-16

Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the beautiful-eyed, begot from Satyabhāmā four sons, named Rohita, Diptamāna, Tāmra Chakia, and Jalandhama, who had four younger sisters also — 17-18

Jāmbavati gave birth to Sāmba, who was an ornament to all assemblages. Mitravindā became the mother of Mitra-vānā and Mitravinda Sunita and Mitra Bāhu were born from Nāgnajitī — 18-19

Beginning with these, there were thousands and, according to some, hundreds of thousands, and according to others eighty thousand sons born to Vāsudeva. While others say that he had a hundred thousand sons — 20-21

Upasanga had two sons, named Vajra and Satksupta, and Bhūrindrasena and Bhūrī were the two sons of Gaveṣana — 22

Pradyumna begot from his wife, the daughter of the King of Vidarbha (Modern Berar) named, Aniruddha, who was most brave and steady in battle. That is why he came to be known as Aniruddha. He begot Mrigaketana — 23

Sāmba begot five valiant and truthful sons from his wife, Kādyā, the daughter of King Supārśva — 24

The valiant Yādavas multiplied themselves into a race of three crores, out of whom 60000 powerful ones were born as incarnations of Devas on this earth. The incarnations of Asuras who were killed in the war between Devas and Asuras, were born on earth as obstructors of all human progress, and in order to destroy whom Śrī Kṛṣṇa was born in the clan of the Yādavas — 15-27

The Yādavas, among whom Lord Kṛṣṇa was born, had one hundred different families, all of which were supported by Viṣṇu, and it was for that reason that the Yādava clan went on prospering. All the Yādavas were the companions of Lord Kṛṣṇa — 28-29

The Rīṣis said — Sūta! How did Viṣṇu, the prime cause of the universe, come to be born on this earth, along with the seven Rīṣis, Kuveṣa, Yaksi, the sages Māinchara, Sālaki and Nārada, Siddha, Dhruvanātari? How many manifestations have there been of Viṣṇu, and how many of them will be in future? Why does the Lord Viṣṇu incarnate Himself exclusively among the tranquil Brāhmaṇa, and the Kṣatriyās? O Sūta!
pray tell us the object of Viṣṇu’s incarnating Himself in the family of Viṣṇu, Andhaka, &c., and also the cause of manifesting Himself again and again in human form — 30-33

Sūta said — At the end of a Yuga, and when morals of the time becomes lax, owing to the loss of righteousness in the universe, Lord Viṣṇu casts off His Divine form and assumes that of a man, or, when the Devas and the Asuras combine to oppress the world, then the Lord Hari incarnates Himself. Thus He incarnated when, in the days gone by, the Daitya Hiranya Kāśyapu was ruling the three worlds. Similarly, He incarnated when Bali of yore ruled the three worlds. In the reign of these two rulers there was great friendship between the Devas and the Asuras — 34-36

But all the same, the world was agitated by the presence of the Asuras, for it was an age of Asuras, the Devas being in minority. The Devas and the demons residing under the sway of Hiranyakāśyapu and Bali were on equal footing. In other words, the Devas and the Asuras under their sway enjoyed equal rights and privileges. At the same time, on account of the curse of Bhīrūṇa, there was a destructive warfare between the Devas and the Asuras to cause pain to Bali, when Lord Viṣṇu manifested Himself in the human form to re-establish righteousness, for the sake of the Devas and the Asuras — 37-39

The Rishi said — Sūta! Why did Lord Viṣṇu interest Himself personally in the affairs of the Devas and the Asuras? How did this conflict arise of itself between the Devas and the Asuras, who were living on friendly terms before? Pray tell us all that — 40

Sūta said — There were twelve hard fought battles between the Devas and the Asuras on account of getting their heritage, beginning from the Varāha (Boar) incarnation and ending with Śanḍā and Marka times, and there were incarnations on the occasion of each war. The first was that of Man lion (Nṛsimha), the second that of Vāmana, third that of Varāha, the fourth incarnation was on the occasion of the churning of the ocean for the nectar, the fifth took place at Tārakaṁaya war, the sixth was called the Ādityaka war, the seventh was the Traipura war, the eighth was the Andhaka war, the war for the destruction of Vītrāśura was the ninth, the Dhātri war was the tenth, the Hālāhala war was the eleventh and the twelfth was the terrific war, named Kolāhala — 41-45

Nṛsimha killed the Daitya king, Hiranyakāśyapu, Vāmana made the Daitya king Bali a captive, by measuring the three regions. Varāha killed the Daitya Hiranyakasipu with His tusks and divided the ocean into two — 46-47

At the time of churning the ocean for nectar, Indra conquered Prahładā, and then He killed Virochana, the son of Prahalāda, in the Tārakamaya war, for the latter was always after the life of Indra and never was friendly to the deeds of the Devas — 48-49

At the time of Ádityaka war, Lord Śiva killed the Daitya Tiśpuśa, along with other Dānavas, besides those that He killed in the Andhaka war — 50

In the Vṛtra-nāśaka war, Indra, by the help of Viṣṇu, killed Vṛtraśura, who was sided with by men, Pitṛs and Devas and then He also killed most fearful Dānavas in the Dhātq and Hālāhala wars. He killed the Daitya Viprachāta in the Kolāhala war, which was an offshoot of the Śandā Marka wars that ensued between the Devas and the Daityas over the right of Avābhīrtha bath, when Viprachāta was hiding himself with the army of Dānavas under his banner — 51-53

Note — Avābhīrtha = Bathing at the end of a principal sacrifice, for purification

In that way, there were a dozen battles between the Devas and the Asuras in which the military classes of Devas and Asuras were killed, but it was good for the general populace — 54

Hiranyakasipu ruled the land with all the mundane glory at his command, for a period of one hundred million seventy eight crores and eighty thousand years, after whom Bali ruled for 20,080,000 years and Prahlāda also ruled for a similar period with other Asuras — 55-57

All three of them were the most powerful Daitya Kings, and known as Indras of Daityas. This world was under the sway of the Daityas for ten yugas. After which, Indra ruled over the three regions with marvellous tact and statesmanship — 58-59

Indra ruled, since the close of the sway of Prahlāda, when the seer, Śukra, deserted the Daityas and joined the Devas — 60

Once the sage Śukra happened to go to the sacrifice of the Devas, when the Daityas called him and asked him how he did that during their loss of kingdom. The Daityas said that they could no longer stay in that region and would repair to Rasātala — which grieved the seer, who said that they need not fear, he would sustain them by his power, for it was he alone who had spells, medicines, nectar, and the best of things, in his possession to the full. The Devas had only one-fourth of them. He would give every thing to them, for he had preserved them with him for their sake — 61-65
The Devas, on seeing the Daityas clustering around the sage Śukra (Kāvyā), held a council of their own to devise means to acquire all those boons from the sage. They all discussed among themselves that the sage was forcibly usurping their dues, and so before he conferred them on the Daityas they would all go and manage to let the Daityas go to Pātāla by their stubbornness. With that resolution, the Devas went and caused trouble to the Dānavas — 67-68.

At that, the Daityas, overwhelmed with affliction, went and sought the succour of Śukra and were rescued by him instantly. Afterwards they started their operations against the Devas who, defying the support of Śukra, began to annihilate them — 69-70.

Then the sage, thinking of the past, addressed the Daityas for their well-being — "Vāmana has deprived you of all your realm by measuring it with his three strides, and has made Bali a captive. Besides, He has killed Jambhāṣura and Vīrochana. In course of the twelve battles, the Devas have killed most of your powerful members, by their various stratagems. Very few of you are left now, therefore follow my advice and cease fighting for sometime. I shall teach you a useful contrivance. I will go to acquire the spell of victory from Śiva, and, after acquiring those powerful charms from him, shall make you victorious in your fight with the Devas." — 71-75.

Hearing those words of their Preceptor, the Asuras spoke to the Devas, "O Devas! We are without arms, our armours are broken, we have no chariots, consequently, we will now go and practise austerities in the forest after covering ourselves with the bark of trees." Hearing those words of the Asuras and believing the utterances of Prabhālāda to be true, the Devas cast off their wrath and cheerfully stopped fighting with the defenceless Asuras — 76-78.

Sometime afterwards, the seer Śukra said to his disciples — "For the accomplishment of your desires, keep yourselves engaged in your penances, and, O Daityas! go and reside in my father's house and await my return there." Giving that piece of advice to the Dānavas, Śukra went to Mahādeva — 79-80.

Śukra said — "O, Mahādeva! I wish to acquire the spells, that are not possessed by Brahma; even, for the defeat of the Devas and the victory of the Asuras." — 81.

Mahādeva said — "Bhārgava! You shall acquire those spells after practising austerities with your head suspended down and imbuing the smoke of chaff for a thousand years. If thou succeedest in this, thou shalt obtain the mantras." — 82.
CHAPTER XLVII

Then Śukra, accepting the injunctions of the Lord Śiva, touched His feet and said, "Sire! In obedience to your will, I start to observe the penances dictated by you"—83

Afterwards, the sage, to acquire the spells for the well-being of the Asuras, went to practise asceticism by the side of the altar from which smoke emitted fire—84

The Devas, understanding the treacherous policy of the Asuras, tried to turn them out of the region where they were residing—85

The Asuras, on seeing the Devas unexpectedly advancing towards them well-armed, in company of their Preceptor Bṛhaspati, became grieved and said—86, 87

"We have disarmed ourselves at your request on giving us the assurance of safety, and our preceptor is engaged in the observance of his vow. How have you come to fight us after giving us an assurance of peace? O Devas, we have not our preceptor by us and are living peacefully without weapons, and we are dressed in deer skin and tree barks and without any occupation or possessions. O Devas! We are not in a position to fight with you. We will go and seek shelter from the mother of our preceptor without offering you any resistance. We will live with her in peace and safety till the return of the sage, after which we will fight with you"—88-91

All the terrified Asuras afterwards went and took shelter with the mother of the sage who gave them assurance of safety—92

She said, "Dānavas, do not be afraid of anything, drive away all your fears from your mind. Nothing will happen to you in course of your stay with me"—93

Then the Devas, without any regard for their comparative strength, went for the Asuras, who had placed themselves at the mercy of Śukra's mother, seeing which the mother of their preceptor very angrily said that she would make them Indraless—94-95

After saying that, she, mustering all her will-force, advanced towards Indra and made him helpless and spell-bound by her great power of yoga and austerities. The Devas, seeing Indra thus spell-bound and helpless like a dumb person by the mother of Śukra, took to flight—96-97

After the retreat of the Devas, Lord Viṣṇu said—"Indra! You enter yourself within me and I shall carry you away from this place"—98

Hearing those words of Viṣṇu, Indra Purandara instantly entered himself within Him, when the mother of the sage seeing him thus protected by Viṣṇu said in anger—99
"Indra! I have such powers of asceticism that I shall reduce you to ashes along with Viṣṇu, in presence of all creatures"—100

At that, both Indra and Viṣṇu were overcome with fear and began to contrive some means of escape. Viṣṇu said to Indra—"How shall we escape from her?" Indra replied—"Lord! kill her before she consumes me. I am solely protected by you. Destroy her soon without delay." Viṣṇu thought over the great sin of killing a woman, but, in spite of that, he took up his Sudarṣana Chakra to free Himself from that impending calamity—101-103

Trembling with fear, on thinking over the consequences of her anger and being afraid of the consequences of His own wrath, He severed her head with His Chakra—104

The sage Bṛhari then cursed Viṣṇu for killing his wife—105

He said—"Viṣṇu! You will be born seven times among men for the sin of killing a woman, knowing that a woman under no circumstances is to be killed"—106

Since then, owing to that curse of the sage, Viṣṇu manifests Himself among men for the good of mankind, whenever there is a decay in righteousness—107

Afterwards, the seer Bṛhari at once picked up the severed head of his wife and joined it to the trunk, saying—"Devi! You have been killed by Lord Viṣṇu, and now I recall you to life again." Saying that, he joined the head and the trunk together, and said "Abhijiva," ("Be revived"), if I have fulfilled all the rules of law and acted righteously, and if I have always spoken the truth, then through that truth you come back to life. I say so truthfully—108-110

After that, he sprinkled cold water and again pronounced the spell, "Abhijiva," and the lady at once came back to life—111

On seeing her thus coming to life, as if rising from her slumber, everyone present there repeatedly expressed his delight by saying, "Well done," "Well done"—112

Thus that lady was revived by Bṛhari, in the presence of the astonished Devatās, and the whole thing was considered a miracle—113

Indra seeing the sage Bṛhari quietly bringing back his wife to life, became terribly afraid and had no peace. He said to his daughter, Jayantī—"Daughter! This seer Śukra is practising rigid and devout asceticism for the sake of my foes, which is causing me deep pain, so you should go to him and please him by your service and conduct. Do just what he wishes, and serve him with all diligence. Do exactly what would please him. Go, I have dedicated you to him. Worship him and try all that lies in you to serve my end."—114-117

Hearing those words of her father, Jayantī went to the spot where the sage was engaged in his rigid austerities.—118

There she saw the sage suspended with his head downwards, and unibbing the smoke of the chaff, while a Yaksā had just thrown him down the side of the Kunda. She found him all absorbed in his austerities, looking very lean and having all his body covered with ashes. Seeing the sage like that, she set herself to serve him according to the injunctions of her father. In other words, she began to serve the sage by shampooing his legs and winning his pleasure by her sweet and flattering speech, and, adapting herself to suit his pleasure, she practised penances along with him for many a year. On the lapse of a thousand years of practising this vow of smoke, the God Śiva, becoming satisfied, appeared to grant boons to Sukra and said—"Śukra! You alone have undergone this penance, none other has done so, consequently, you alone will have the glory of conquering all the Devas by your asceticism, intellect, knowledge of the Śastras, splendour, and power, and O, Bhriguṇandas! in addition to all these, you will achieve all the rest of your desires. Do not say so before any one, but you alone will accomplish everything."—119-125

The Lord Śiva, after granting all those boons to Sukra, also made him master of mankind and riches as well as invulnerable.—126

On getting all those boons, Śukra (Kāvyā) had such an unbounded pleasure that all the hair of his body were thrilled with joy. After that, the sage pleased the Lord by standing curved and singing the hymn of praises to the God of blue red color.—127

Śukra said—"I salute Thee, O Śiva! designated as Śita Kāṇṭha (blue-necked), Kaniṣṭha (short-statured), Suvarcchās (full of splendour), Lehibhāna (eats much), Kāvyā (omniscent), Vatsara and lord of Andhāsa, Kapardin (whose hair is matted), Karāla (whose form is formidable), Har-yakṣa, Vairāgd (who is propitious), Samstuta (well praised), Sūtrītha (most sacred), the Lord of all the Deities, Ramās (full of impetus), whose eyes are threatening, who wears a crown on His head, whose face is handsome, who is the Creator, whose forms are infinite, who is the seed of the universe, fountain-head of asceticism, whose size is short, hair is unkempt, is the leader of forces, whose eyes are adorable, who is full of velocity, is worthy of being worshipped, whose complexion is red, whose body is like eternal, the subtle, the gross, the enlightened, the supreme, the giver of final bliss, the omnipresent in the three regions and existing beyond these three, the pervader in the four higher realms, viz. —Mahā, Jana, Tapa and Satya —128-167

O Lord Śiva if in course of this hymn of devotion, I have failed to describe Thee adequately, forgive me in consideration of my being your staunch adherent, for Thou art always a friend to a Brāhmana —168

Sūta said —The sage, after thus saluting Mahādeva, stood quietly, with folded hands, before Him. Then the Lord became still more pleased with Śukra, and, after placing His Divine hand on the seer, vanished instantly. After that, the sage addressed Jayanti, who was standing close by him. He said, “Who art Thou, and why art thou sorrowing for me, on account of my penances? Why art thou serving me with so much devotion and austerity? O Beautiful one! I am very much pleased with thy devotion and affection. What dost thou wish? Tell that to me. I shall certainly do anything for thy sake, however difficult it may be —169-174

Hearing those words of the sage, Jayanti said —“Brāhma! Ascertain my desires through the powers of your asceticism” —175

At that expression of Jayanti, the sage realized everything through his Divine sight, and said to her —“O Enchanting one! Thou hast thought of living with me for ten years. This is your desire, which will be fulfilled, follow me to my abode.” Afterwards, Śukra took her home and married her there —176-178

Then the sage Bhārgava, to enjoy himself in her company undisturbed, made himself invisible by means of his magical power —179

The Daityas, getting news of the return of their preceptor crowned with success, went exhilarated to pay their homage to him, but not being able to see him owing to his being enveloped in illusion, they returned as they had gone —180-181

Unfortunately for the Daityas, Brihaspati came to know of the doing of Śukra. He knew for certain that the preceptor of the Daityas would not break his shell of magic for ten years, as he was enjoying himself with Jayanti, the Devas, on the other hand, also came to know of the weak point of the Daityas, that the latter were ignorant of the distinctive features of their preceptor. They consequently entreated Brihaspati to do something for them. Brihaspati thus incited by his disciples, personating as Śukra, went and rallied the Daityas round him —182-183

He, in the form of Śukra, then addressed the Daityas that had flocked to him. He said —“O, my disciples! You are welcome. I have also
CHAPTER XLVII

Come here to do you good I shall teach you the knowledge that I have acquired from Siva " The Daityas were carried away by joy, and began to take lessons from him — 184

After the lapse of ten years, the sage Sukra was also free from his enjoyments with Jayanti, and it is heard that Devayanti was born of her. Then the Sage Sukra made up his mind to see his disciples—the Daityas—and said to Jayanti, "Lady, I am going out to see my disciples — 185-187

Jayanti said—"Lord! go and look after your devotees. This is the duty of high-minded folks and I will not keep you away from it."— 188

Sukra, on finding the Asuras deceived by Brihaspati, said to them—"Asuras! I am Sukra, who has pleased Lord Siva. All of you have been deceived by Brihaspati, who was poisoning me."—189-190

The Danavas were bewildered to hear those words of the sage, and began to look amazingly at both of them sitting there. At that time, the bewildered Danavas could not say anything, nor could they distinguish their preceptor, at which the sage Sukra said—"Asuras! I am your preceptor Sukra, this is Brihaspati, the preceptor of the Devas. Leave him and follow me."—191-193

Then the Asuras again looked at both of them, but did not perceive any difference between Sukra and Brihaspati — 194

At that time, the sage Brihaspati instantly addressed the Asuras—"Asuras! I am your preceptor, Sukra. This is Brihaspati, who has come here after assuming my form. Asuras! Brihaspati is trying to deceive you by assuming my form." After that, all the Asuras held a council and discussed among themselves that, that preceptor (Brihaspati) had been giving them lessons since ten years who, according to their judgment, was their real preceptor — 195-197

After that, all the Danavas paid obeisance to the sage Brihaspati, in the guise of Sukra, and accepted what he said to them, for they were deluded by him during his stay with them for ten years — 198.

Then all the Asuras, with their eyes burning with rage, most angrily said to Sukra—"He Brihaspati, is our well-wisher and preceptor, departs thou (Sukra), for the thou art not our guru. He might be Sukra or Brihaspati, but he is our guru. We remain under his instruction."—199-200 Saying so, the Asuras acknowledged Brihaspati under the garb of Sukra, as their preceptor. At that, the sage Sukra, in a fit of anger, pronounced the following curse upon the Danavas—"Danavas, in spite of my advice, you have refused to acknowledge me as your guru, in consequence of which you will lose your intellect and will be routed by the Devas." Afterwards, he departed from there —201-203

Brihaspati became immensely pleased to find his object gained when the Daityas were cursed by Sukra. Then he assumed his own form, and instantly disappeared, after which the Danavas were confused when they saw him thus vanishing —205

They then said among themselves, "Oh, we have been grossly deluded on all sides by Brihaspati and got cursed by the sage Sukra." —206

They got very vexed, and all the Asuras, under the leadership of Prahlada, immediately went to their preceptor, and with their heads cast down in shame, they stood before him in repentence. The sage, finding his disciples come back, addressed them thus —"Though I tried my best to enlighten you all as to the true state of affairs, you did not pay heed to my warning. On account of this disregard of my advice, you will surely be defeated in future." —207-209

Hearing those words of Sukra, Prahlada, with his eyes full of tears, faltering said to the preceptor —"O Bhargava do not abandon us, we are your devotees and look to you for protection, shield us O preceptor of the Divine Vision! You are capable of knowing, that not having the good luck of seeing you, we were deluded by Brihaspati, the preceptor of the Devas. And, O Bhrgunandana! if you will not show kindness to us, then all of us, discarded by you, shall go to Rasatala." —210-212

The sage Sukra, on hearing these words, curbed his anger and, moved by pity and compassion, said —"You need not entertain any fear, nor need you go to the Rasatala. Certainly, you will obtain prosperity in future, so long as I am away, but your destiny must be fulfilled. I cannot make it otherwise, for fate is stronger. You must lose your intelligence from to-day, though you will regain it hereafter. You will conquer the Devas only once, and after that you had better go to Patala. Now the ten ages of your prosperity have come to an end, for that was the period predicted by Brahma in which you had world-dominion. You will again regain your kingdom in the Svarnika Manvantara, after which, O Prahlada, your grandson, King Bali, will reign with all glory, in different realms, for, even, Lord Vishnu will promise this secretly to your grandson, when He will deprive him of his kingdom in His Dwarf incarnation. Because you were devoted to Vishnu and your mind was regulated according to His will, therefore Brahmā being pleased with you, gave you this world-sovereignty Śiva, the most supreme Lord of the entire universe, has spoken to me, as a secret, that Bali will be the future king of the Devas, and therefore He, invisible to all, is awaiting that time O Prahlāda! Brahmā, on being pleased with you, has granted another boon to you which I am not in a position to reveal to you, because Brahmā, the knower of the future, has not authorised me to do so He has also said that both these my disciples (Śandā and Mārka) are equal in wisdom to Bṛhaspati These two will protect you against all the machinations of the Devas in my absence"—213-224

On hearing these words of Śukra, the rigid follower of ritualistic rites, all the Asuras retired pleased, along with the high-souled Prahlāda, and being assured by their preceptor, Śukra, that they would gain at least one victory over the Devas, the Asuras, acting on these words, put on their armours and challenged the Devas to fight them The Devas, seeing the Asuras standing in the battle-field well-equipped to fight, came out to give battle—225-227

The great war between the Asuras and the Devas lasted for a century in which the Devas were repulsed and the Asuras were victorious The Devas held a conference and decided to invite Śandā and Mārka (as guests of the Devas), on the occasion of their sacrifice, after which they would get victory in the next war After coming to that conclusion, the Devas invited both of them to their sacrifice, and said—"O, twice-born ones! You forsakē these Asuras, we will be yours always, after conquering them through your support"—228-230

The Devas, thus made friends with Śandā and Mārka, and then fought with the Dānavas, when they were victorious As the Dānavas became powerless by being deserted by Śandā and Mārka, so they were defeated easily, and thus the curse of Śukra took effect—231-232

The Asuras, thus cursed by their preceptor, and without any spiritual support from any side, and repulsed by the Devas, found themselves in a most helpless condition and eventually entered Rasātala (infernal regions) The Dānavas, being thus dispirited by the victory of the Devas and through the instrumentality of Bṛigu, went to Pātāla—233-234

Again, whenever there is decay in righteousness, Viṣṇu takes birth, in order to establish righteousness by destroying the Asuras—235

Brahmā had also ordained this, that those Asuras who go against the righteous injunctions of Prahlāda would also be killed by men—236

In accordance with that ordinance of Brahmā, there was a partial incarnation of Nārāyana as Dharma, at the end of the Chāksusa Manvantara, when the Devas performed a sacrifice at the beginning of the Vaivasya Manvantara. At this incarnation, Brahmā was the officiating priest. This was the first incarnation. There was another incarnation of the Supreme Soul. When the Devas were in distress, then, on the fourth day of the Moon, which was the anniversary of the beginning of a Yuga, Lord Visnu manifested Himself on the sea-coast. He incarnated Himself as Nṛsiṃha for the destruction of Hiranyakasipu. Rudra officiated as the sacrificial priest. This was His second incarnation. —237-239

In the seventh Tretā Yuga, when King Bali was in power, Dharma was the sacrificial priest at the time of the Lord manifesting Himself as Vāmana. —240

O Sages! these three are the celestial incarnations of Visnu, and there are seven more human incarnations which the Lord underwent owing to the curse of Bhīma. —241

In the first Tretā Yuga, when the fourth part of righteousness was lost, the Lord incarnated as Dattātreya, and the sage Mārkandeya was the officiating priest. This was His fourth incarnation. —242

The fifth incarnation was that of the world-Emperor, Mandhātri, which took place in the fifteenth Tretā, when Uttānga was the officiating priest. —243

In the 19th Tretā, there was the sixth incarnation, as Pārashurāma, to root out the Kṣatriyas, when Viśvāmitra officiated as the sacrificial priest. —244

In the 24th Tretā Yuga, the seventh manifestation was that of Śrī Rāmacandra, as the son of Dvāratītha, and with Vasistha as the priest, to kill Hāvana. —245

In the 28th Dvapara, Visnu incarnated Himself as Vedavyāsa, the son of Parāśara, when Jātukarṇyasage was the officiating priest. This was the eighth incarnation of Visnu. —246

For the establishment of righteousness and the destruction of Asuras, through asceticism, there was the 9th incarnation, in the form of Buddha of Divine splendour, with His Eyes as beautiful as lotus, and with the sage Dvapāyana Vyāsa as the officiating priest. —247

At the close of Kaliyuga (the present age), there will be the Kalki manifestation, in the house of Viśnuyasa, and the sage, Pārāśarya Vyāsa will be the officiating priest. This will be the tenth incarnation, and Yājñyavalkya will make his appearance before this coming manifestation. —248

This incarnation will destroy all the wicked ones and the hypocrites, and, with a large army of the Brahmans, He will kill Sudra Kings and drive away all hypocrisy. After killing the enemies of Brahmans and other enemies, He will march on with His army in the 28th of the Kaliyuga, and then, after purifying the Sudras, will cross the ocean, where He will destroy the sinful mixed castes and, thus fulfilling His mission, He will educate His peoples — 249 253

Afterwards, the people, by becoming enraged and deluded with each other, will kill each other to fulfil the future destiny — 254

When, in process of time, the incarnation of Kalki will vanish, then the future kings will be destroyed, through the rebellion of their subjects — 255

The people, not finding any one as their protector, will fight amongst themselves, and will then land themselves in great troubles after killing one another — 256

All cities and villages will be devastated, and the duties of castes and the stages of life will disappear — 257

At that juncture—the end of the Iron Age—men will open markets to sell boiled rice, the Brahmans will sell the Vedas and the women will earn their living by selling their hair — 258

People will be very short of stature, and they will be short-lived. They will make forests, as their place of dwelling, or they will reside by rivers and hills, subsisting on roots, fruits and leaves — 259

They will clothe themselves with tattered clothes, the deer-skin, &c. All the castes will mingle into one mass, and the people will be reduced to penury and will find themselves in great distress and subjected to many troubles — 260

Being thus tormented with myriads of troubles and difficulties, all the population will become annihilated along with the end of the Kaliyuga — 261

Satayuga (the Age of Truth) will follow on the heels of the disappearing Kaliyuga. “This is the narration of the doing of the Devas and the Asuras that I have related at some length to you, O sages, now near an account of Yaduvaria, Turvasu, Puru, Druhya, Anu, along with the glory of Viṣṇu” — 262 263

Here ends the Forty-seventh chapter dealing with the curse of Śukra on Asuras and the ten Incarnations

Note.—A summary of this chapter is given by Dr John Muir, in Volume IV of his Original Sanskrit Texts, pp 151-156
CHAPTER XLVIII

Sūta said — Turvasu was the father of Gaṇaha, who begot Gobhānu, the father of the heroic Trisara. Trisara was the father of Karandhama, and Bharata was his son. Thus Bharata should not be confounded with Bharata, the son of Dusyanta. Dusyanta was the father of Bharata, who was a prince and belonged to the family of Puru — I-2.

Because Turvasu did not exchange his youth with the infirmity of Yayāti, through the curse of the latter, therefore, the family of Turvasu did not become prominent, but it lapsed into the house of Puru — 3.

Dusyanta was the father of Varūtha, who begot Andira, who was the father of Sandhāna. He also begot Pāṇḍya, Kerala, Chola, Karnā, and their respective countries were named after them — 4-5.

Druhyu was the father of two heroic sons, named Setu and Ketu. Setu begot Saradvāna, the father of Gaudhāra, after whose name the vast Gāndhāra country is known. He had choice horses of the Arratta country — 6-7.

Gāndhāra was the father of Dharmā, who begot Dhṛpta, the father of Vidyāsa, whose son was Prachetā. Prachetā was the father of a hundred sons, all of whom ruled as sovereigns in the Melecha country lying in the north — 8-9.

Anu was the father of the following three pious sons, viz., Sabhānara, Chakṣuṣa, Panamesa — 10.

Sabhānara was the father of the learned Kolāhala who became a king. Kolāhala became the father of the holy Saṅjaya, of worldwide reputation — 11.

Saṅjaya was the father of Puraṅjaya, who begot Janamejaya, the father of Mahāsāla. Mahāsāla was the father of the renowned and pious king Mahāmanā, who was the lord of seven continents and a universal monarch. He was the father of two famous sons, called Uṣijnara and Titkṣu — 12-15.

Uṣijnara had Bhṛṣa, Kṛṣa, Navā, Dardā and Drisadvati as his five queens, all daughters of a Rājaśi — 16.

The old king Uṣijnara, through his piety and righteousness, begot from his queens, the following pious and worthy sons, viz., Nṛgū from Bhṛṣa, Navā from Navā, Kṛṣa from Kṛṣa, Suvrata from Dardā, Śibi Audinara from Drisadvati — 17-18.

* Name of the Pañcha-nada or Panjāb (Mahābhārata)
Sibi begot four famous sons, viz, Prithuderbha, Sutisa, Kekaya, and Bhadiaka, and their countries were named after them, viz, Kekayas, Bhadrakâ, Sanvira, and Paurâ, and the country of king Ny竣工 was also known as Kekaya—19

Ambastha was the name of the capital town of Suvrata's country, and Vrisalâ was the capital of Kusa, and Navarâstra was the capital of Nava. Now listen to the family of Titiksa—20-21

Titiksa became a renowned king and ruled in the East. He was the father of Vrisadratha, who begot Sena—22

Sena begot Sutapâ, whose son was Bali, the Daitya King, was without an issue, for he was bound by the Mahâtmâ [in bonds of captivity]. But, as he was a great Yogi, he took birth in human body as Bali, the son of Sutapâ, and procured five Ksetraja sons for himself. These were Aûga, Vanga, Suhma, Pundra, and Kalinga, and their country is called Bâleya. The Bâleyas and the Brahmansas were the sons of that lord Bali”—23-25

Lord Brahmâ, satisfied with Bali, gave him a boon, namely, that Bali would be a great Yogi, would live for a Kalpa, would be invincible in war, superior in wisdom, and his mind would always be inclined towards religion. He would be endowed with knowledge of the past, present and future, the chief in his community, victorious in wars, a philosopher, and the establisher of the prescribed orders.

It was through the glory of Brahmâ that Bali was favoured with children (even though made a captive by Visnu)—26-28

The family of Aûga will now be described—29

The sages said—"Sûta! How was Bali blessed with five children? What was the name of the mother of those children? Which Rishi begot them? How did he do so? Be good enough to relate to us all this, and also explain to us the glory of that sage (who begot those children for Bali)—30-31

Sûta said—In the days gone by, there was a great sage, named Usâja, and Mamatâ was his wife Bṛhaspati, the younger brother of Usâja, entertained a desire to enjoy in the company of the latter's wife Mamatâ, understanding the intentions of Bṛhaspati, told him not to think of anything of the kind, as she was bearing a child to his brother, and added—"O! Bṛhaspati, the child in my womb will get angry, for being

* Brahmanas here does not refer evidently to the Brähmana caste, but to those descendents of Bali from whom the modern Burma got its name. of the seed of Uṣīja, thy brother, he knows all the Vedas [and will not allow thy seed to succeed in my womb] Thou, O Brihaspati, art also one, whose seed never goes in vain So do not approach me now After I am delivered of this seed of Uṣīja, do as thou thinkest proper, O Lord"—32-36

In spite of her remonstrance, Brihaspati, even though he was such a mighty sage, could not check his passion, and forcibly carried out his intention. When he was about to emit his seed, the child in the womb cried out —37-38

"Sire! There is no room for two souls in the embryo, and I have come here before"—39

Hearing those words, Brihaspati became enraged, and thus cursed his brother's son in the womb —"You, who are present in the embryo and are putting an obstruction in my way of enjoyment, will suffer from blindness"—40-41

Afterwards, on account of the curse of Brihaspati, the child was born blind and named Dirghatamā [Deep darkness]. He was illustrious and persevering like Brihaspati—42

Dirghatamā settled himself in the house of his brother, leading a life of total celibacy. Whilst so dwelling, he learnt from a bull, the dharma of the cattle, that of promiscuous intercourse without regard to relationship. He was supported by his brother and uncle. Sometime after, an ox happened to go there of his own accord, and began to feast himself on the Kūśa grass planted there for sacrificial purposes, when Dirghatamā caught him by the horns —43-45

The ox, thus taken hold of by him, could not extricate himself from his grip, and, finding himself in a helpless condition said —"O, bravest of the brave! Let me go. I have never come across a valiant man like you, nor was there any one as powerful as myself. Now leave me. I am pleased with you, and you can ask for any boon from me"—46-47

Dirghatamā replied —"Where will you go, so long as I am alive? I shall not let you—the encroacher on other's rights—go"—48

The ox said —"Sire! I have committed neither any sin nor theft There is no hard and fast rule laid down to dictate to us, animals, what to eat and what not to eat, what to drink and what not to drink. Many of these duties are imposed on bipeds, and not on us, the quadrupeds. We are not guided by any such restrictions as to what should be done and what should not be done, and whom we should approach for sexual intercourse and whom not"—49-50

Sūta said—Hearing from the ox the natural laws of cattle, he released him from his grasp. Afterwards, he fed him with corn, etc.—51

On the ox going away satisfied with the repast, Dīrghatamā began to meditate on the natural laws of cattle, and being convinced of it being the true law, he became a devoted follower of it—52

On one occasion he met the wife of his younger brother's son, Gautama, and, in spite of her being with child, he taking the laws relating to cattle to be of superior importance, did not desist from her, and caught hold of her with a violent jerk and enjoyed himself in her company, though she was like his daughter-in-law in relation. Knowing about futurity, he began to dilate upon the cattle law, when that lady said—"You going against nature are behaving like an ox, and without having regard for the rules of prohibited relationships in sexual intercourse, but following the natural law of the beast, you have committed an incest on your daughter. Consequently, I forsake you base and mean, and now go away on account of your doings"—53-56

With those words, she packed him in a wooden case and threw him into the Ganges, saying, "I abandon you (and do not kill you, pitying) your blindness and old age"—57

That case, after a long run, was drifted ashore and was taken possession of by Bali, the son of Virochana. Bali made over the contents of the case to his queen, where he was taken out of the case and nourished with various kinds of dainties. After that, he told Bali that he would grant him any boon he would ask for—58-59

Bali, the king of the Dānavas, besought him to beget progeny from his wife—60

In reply to the request of the king, that sage said, "This will be so;" hearing which, Bali sent his queen, Sudeśnā, to him, but she, thinking him to be old and blind, did not approach him. She, however, sent the daughter of her nurse who, through her contact with that sage, gave birth to Kākṣīvāna and others—61-62

King Bali, seeing the Śudra sons, Kākṣīvāna, etc., so well up in saintly precepts, so illustrious, so sacred and so versed in saintly lore, said to Dīrghatamā that they were his sons. The sage said they were not the sons of Bali and claimed them to be his own, on account of their having been born of the Śudra nurse sent by the queen, who herself had discarded him on account of his age and blindness—63-66

wife, and sent her again well-dressed, after her toilet, to the sage, when the seer said —67-68

"O, Devi! Cast off your bashfulness and then lick the whole of my body with your tongue, after rubbing it with salt, curds and honey, you will then attain your wish and get sons"—69

The queen followed the directions of the seer, but omitted to lick the hind private parts —70

When the sage said "O, blessed one! Your eldest son will be without that part of the body which you have omitted to lick"—71

The queen said —"Sire! It is not worthy of you to bless me with such an offspring. Be pleased at my devotion and show your mercy to me"—72

Dirghatama said —"O, Blessed one, through your fault this will happen exactly as I have told you and this son of yours will not delight you in any way, but your grandson will, he will, however, not feel the necessity of the missing part of his body" Then the sage, touching her abdomen, said, "O, queen because you have licked all parts of my body except the privates, your sons will be like the full moon, and, in all you will be blessed with five sons of Divine beauty who will be most illustrious, renowned, righteous and performers of sacrifices"—73 76

Sūta said —O Rāis, Śudesānā begot, through the favour of Dirghatama, Aṅgā, the eldest, along with his brothers, Kaśīga, Puṇḍra, Sūhuma, and Vāṅgārāja Thus the sage begot the above-named five sons to the king Bāli —77-78

Afterwards, the sage took all the five sons through a course of ceremony, enjoined on all the twice-born Thus that posterity was begotten —79

Then the divine cow Surabhi said to Dirghatama.—"As you followed the cattle law deliberately and took it to be superior to all, O, sinless! I am very much pleased with you and hereby remove your blindness by smelling you. The sin of Brāhmapāti is inherent in you. I however relieve you of your old age, death and loss of vision, by merely smelling you"—80-82

That sage was instantly restored to his vision after being smelled by Surabhi, and got a long lease of life, along with beautiful eyes and form. He came to be known as Gautama, on account of his being relieved of his blindness by (the smelling of) the cow. Afterwards, Kākṣṭhvāna, the son of that Śudra nurse, went with his father, Dirghatama, to Girivraja.
and after seeing and touching him practised penances for a long time, and in the fulness of time, through his asceticism, he purified the body obtained from a Śūdra mother and became a Brāhmaṇa, at which his father told him "I consider myself to-day blessed with a son through you, and O pious one! I feel blessed on getting a righteous and renowned son like you, who after casting off his previous sheath, has become a Brāhmaṇa."—84-87

Kāśivāna, on becoming a Brāhmaṇa begot a thousand sons, who came to be known as Kausamānda and Gautamas—88

Thus the circumstances bringing Bali, the son of Vīrochana, into contact with the sage, Dhīghatamā, as well as the family of Bali, have been explained.—89

Bali said to his five pious sons that he considered himself highly blessed on having them as his sons, and then encasing himself in his Yoga Māya, he became invisible to all, and began to wait for the predicted period, in the Pātalapūrī.—90

The son of Aṅga was the King Dadhiwāhana. Dadhiwāhana's son was King Divatathā, who begot the learned Dharmoratha.—91-92

That Dharmoratha the great, drank the draught of nectar with the seer Śukra, on the Vīṣṇupada mount, after which he became the father of Chitraratha, who begot Satvaratha, the father of Dāsaratha, who is also known as Lomapāda. He was the father of a girl, named Śāntā and a renowned son, named Chaturāṅga.—93-95

Chaturāṅga, through the blessings of the sage Śrīgī, was the promoter of his clan. He was the father of Prithulakṣa, who begot Champa, after whose name the country Champāpurī is known. It first belonged to Mali.—97

Champā, through the favour of Pūrṇabhadra, begot Haryāṅga, the father of Vībhānda, who begot Vīrāna, the resister of his foes, who made the celestial conveyances descend on earth through his supernatural powers. Haryāṅga was the father of Bhadraratha, who begot the King Bṛhatkarmā, the father of Bṛhatbhānu.—98-100

Bṛhatbhānu was the father of Jayadratha, whose son was Bṛhadraṇa Jañamejaya, the great conqueror, was the son of Bṛhadraṇa, who became the father of the King Aṅga, the father of Karna.—101-102

Karna became the father of Vṛṣṇasena who begot Prithusena
"Riṣis! I have enumerated to you the family of Aṅga, now I shall relate to you the family of Puru."—103

The Riṣis said —"Sāta! How is it that Karpa is said to be the son of Sūta, when you say that he was the son of Aṅga? We wish to know about it, for you are an expert in these matters—104

Sūta said—Brhadbhānu begot a son, called Brhanmanā, who had two queens, viz. Yaśodevi and Satyā, the daughters of the king Saivya—105

Jayadratha was born of Yaśodevi, and Vijaya was born of Satyā—106

Brḥat was the son of Vijaya and the father of Brhadṛatha, who begot Satyakarmā, the father of Adhiratha, who was the [Sūta] chariot-driver of Satyakarmā. He had nurtured Karna, the son of Aṅga, and so Karna is known as the son of Sūta also—108

Here ends the forty-eighth chapter dealing with the family of Soma and the founding of the Eastern dominions.

CHAPTER XLIX

Puru was the father of the most illustrious Janamejaya who begot Prachitvata and ruled in the East, and gave his name to the Eastern quarter (Prachi means East)—1

Prachitvata became the father of Manasyu, who begot Pitāyudha, whose heir was Dhundhu, whose son was Bahuvudha, the father of Sampāti—2-3

Sampāti begot Rahamvarcchā, the father of Bhadrāśva, who begot from the Apsaras, named, Dhritā, ten sons, viz., Aucheyu, Hirseyu, Kasseyu, Saneyu, Dhriteyu, Vineyu, Staileyu, Dhaimeyu, Sanateyu and Pumeyu Jvalanā, the daughter of Tak-akā, became the wife of Aucheyu, from whom he begot the King Antināra (another reading is Rantināra), who became the father of many good sons, through his queen, Manasvini. The heroic Amūtinivas, the pious Trivana, and, third, a daughter, named Gauri, who afterwards became the mother of Māndhaṭā, (were born to him)—4-8

Ilīni, the daughter of Yama, who was an auspicious lady (and was another queen of Antināra), begot sons who were gifted with Divine knowledge—9

The son of Ilīni begot four sons through his wife Upadānavi, viz., Bīṣyanta, Dusyanta, Pratīva and Anagha—10

Dusyanta became the father of a world conquering and Universal Emperor, Bharata, from his wife Sakuntala, whose descendants are called Bhāratas—11
CHAPTER XLIX

To the King Dusyanta, an incorporeal Voice thus addressed — “Mother is like a pair of bellows to the father, from whom the son is born. The son is thus identical with the father. Therefore, O Dusyanta! foster your son and do not discard Sakuntalā. The son raises his deceased father back from the hell of Yama to heaven. Thou art the generator of this child. What Sakuntalā said is true.” 12-13

Thus Bharata was born of Sakuntalā and Dusyanta. In ancient times, when all the sons of Bharata perished, through a widespread and virulent epidemic, brought on by the wrath of the Goddess Mātrikā (? smallpox), then the Marut Devas brought Bharadvāja, the son of Brhaspati, and gave him to Bharata — 14-15

The sages said — ‘Sūta! Please explain to us fully how the Marut Devas gave the illustrious Bharadvāja to Bharata’” — 16

Sūta said — Brhaspati, whilst staying on Earth, one day saw the wife of his brother, Uṣīṇa, who was big with child, and addressed her thus — “Dress thyself well and let us enjoy.” She, being thus addressed, replied to Brhaspati thus: “The embryo in my womb is mature and is already reciting the Vedas. Thy seed will also not be fruitless and thy proposal is sinful.” Hearing which, Brhaspati said — “I need not be taught morality by thee, O sweet one.” After saying that, he carried out his desire by force, when on the verge of his final enjoyment the child from her womb cried out to Brhaspati — “I have entered the womb first, O Brhaspati, thy seed will also not go in vain. There is no room for a second body in this womb.” Brhaspati being thus addressed by the child in the womb, replied in anger — “Because on such an occasion, dear to every creature, thou preventest me from enjoyment, thou shouldst see lasting darkness [Dirghatamas].” — 17-28

Afterwards, Brhaspati cast his seed on the floor which at once became a child, seeing whom, Mamātā said to Brhaspati, “I am going home, you should support [Bhaia] this child [born of us two (dvāja)], O Brhaspati” — 24-25

Afterwards, she went away, and the child was also given up by Brhaspati. Seeing the child thus forsaken by both his father and mother, the Maruts, through pity, carried that child, Bharadvāja, to Bharata — 26

At the same time, King Bharata performed a big sacrifice to beget a progeny, but his object was not gained. Then he performed the Marut-soma sacrifice, when the Marut Devas becoming pleased with the devotion of the king, gave him the child Bharadvāja. In that way, the Marut Devas presented this son of Bhūhaspati, the son of Ati, to the king Bharata—27 30

Bharata on getting Bharadvāja said—"I consider myself blessed on getting you"—31

Bharadvāja was named Vitatha [futile], owing to his being futile as a son, for he never entered the mother's womb. The Brahmans and Kṣatriyas born on this Earth of Bharadvāja came to be known as Dyāmysāyana Kaulins. When Vitatha was thus brought to Bharata, then Bharata went to heaven, and the sage Bharadvāja also went there, after anointing his son—33-34

Vitatha begot the renowned Bhumamanyana, who had four famous sons, viz., Brihatksatra, Mahāvyā, Nara and Garga. Nara became the father of Sāktipīti, who begot Mahāvyā, who, through Satkūla, had two sons, named Gurdhā and Rantideva. Garga's heir was the learned Śibi, whose sons, known as Śāiblyas and Gargās, were twice-born Kṣatriyas as well as Brahmans. Uruksvata was the worthy son of Ṭhīva (Mahāvyā) who begot, through Visālā, three sons, named Tīyusna, Puskara and Kavi, and they became Brahmans and were called Uruksvās, and these three were the highest Rasis amongst Kavyas—35-40

The Gargās, the Sāktītās and the Kavyas are twice-born Brahmans with Kṣatriya strain in them. They were all very learned Kṣiti, the son of Brihatksatra, is known as Hasti. He was the founder of the city, called Gajasālvavā (Hastināpurā). Hasti had three sons of great glory, named, Ajamidha, Dwimidha, and Purumidha. Ajamidha had three wives, born of Kuru clan, Nihī, Dhunī and Kesī—41-44

From his wives, Ajamidha begot sons of divine lustre, because they were born to him in his old age, on the completion of his asceticism, therefore, they were very pious and powerful. They were all born through the blessings of Bharadvāja. Hear now their names in detail—45-46

Ajamidha begot from Kesī, Kana, who became the father of Mādhutthi, the progenitor of the Kānvaya clan of Brahmans, from his wife Dhunī, Ajamidha begot the King Bhūhadunu, who was the father of Bhūhantu, who begot Bhūhanmanā the father of Bhūhadhunu, who begot Bhūhadisthi, the father of Jayadhathan, who begot Aṣavant, the father of Senajit, who had four world-famous sons, viz., Rucirāśva, Kāvyas, King Dhridaratha and Vatsaraśa—47 50

Vatsaraśa was the founder of the dynasty of Paivatsaka, and Rucirāśva became the father of Prithusena, who begot Paura the father of Nipa, who begot one hundred valiant sons, who all were known as Nipās. Among them Śrimāna was the most renowned—51-53
Kavya begot Samara, who was only fond of wars, and he begot three sons, namely, Pava, Sampâra, and Sadaśvâ. They were renowned as great men in the world, and of them Pava begot Pruthu, the father of Sukrâ, who begot Vibhûraja of versatile genius, who became the father of Anuha, who was the son-in-law of Sukra and the husband of Kittvi. Anuha begot Bhadradatta, the father of Yugasada, who begot Visvaksena, who, again, came back to this Earth on account of his good deeds—54-58.

Visvaksena begot Udalakasena, the father of Bhallâta who begot Janamejaya Ugrâyudha, for the sake of Janamejaya, then put an end to the family of Nipa kings—59.

The Rishi said—"Sûta! Whose son was Ugrâyudha, and in what family was he born, and why did he annihilate the Nipa Kings? Pray tell as all that fully"—60.

Sûta said—Ugrâyudha was born in the Solar dynasty and practised penances for eighteen thousand years, when he was dried up like a pillar. King Janamejaya adored him for getting kingdom, and he, after promising kingdom to him, killed the Nipas. Once, the Nipas attacked the Rishi Ugrâyudha and Janamejaya, who was serving him in his Āśrama. Ugrâyudha addressed the Nipas with many conciliatory speeches, but they, heedless of them, injured them. Then Ugrâyudha, when being thus injured, addressed them—"Since you have not paid heed to my words asking protection and safety from you, therefore, I curse you thus. May you all be taken away by Yama, if there is any force in my asceticism.") After that, they were all taken before the God of Death. Seeing which, Ugrâyudha, overcome with pity, said—"Janamejaya, you are worthy of rescuing these misguided, but brave men," hearing which Janamejaya began to fight Yama, after crying out to his victims, "O, sinners! I become the slaves of Ugrâyudha"—62-66.

Strange to say, Janamejaya vanquished his foe and captured Yama, along with hells and their tortures—67.

The God of Death, becoming pleased at the end, gave the knowledge of emancipation to Janamejaya, after which all the Nipas went to Lord Krisna—68.

One who hears their history does not die an unnatural death, but attains bliss in both the worlds—69.

Now the family from Dhûmini—another queen of Ajamidha*

*The translation of verses 62-69 is tentative only. The passage is very obscure, and not found in many Mas.
Ajamidha begot from his wife, Dhumini, the learned Yuvinara, who became the father of Dhrutiṃān, who begot Satyadhiti, the father of the valiant Dridhanemi — 70

Dridhanemi became the father of Sudhamā, who begot the illustrious Sārvabhauma, who became the world-emperor, and Mahāpaurava was born in his famous family. Mahāpaurava begot the King Rukmaratha, the father of Supārśva, who begot the righteous Sumatrī, the father of Sannastimāna, who begot Kṛita, who became the disciple of Hiranyanābha Kaudālya — 71-75

This Kṛita was the promulgator of twentyfour kinds of Sāna Vedic Samhitās, and the chanter of those Samas came to be known as Eastern Kārtasāmagas — 76

Ugrāyudha was the son of Kṛita, and was known as Kṛiti. He was the promoter of his family, and it was he who killed the father of Prithu by his valor — 77

That father of Prithu was Nila, the king of the Pańchāla, and Kṣema, the renowned, was the son of Ugrāyudha — 78

Kṣema was the father of Sūmintha, who begot Nṛpajaya, the father of Vīratha. This completes the line of the Paurava Kings — 79

Here ends the forty ninth chapter describing the Paurava dynasty

Sūta said — Ajamidha begot from Nilinī, Nila, who was the father of Sudānti, through his severe austerities. Sudānti begot Puruṣānu, the father of Prithu, who begot Bhadraśva. Now listen to the progeny of Bhadraśva. He had five sons, namely, Mudgala, Jaya, Brihadāśva, Javīhara and Kapila. They all five, it is heard, were the kings in different parts of the Pańchāla, and ruled with righteousness. Hence their country was called Pańchāla, or ruled by the five. Thus we have heard — 1-4

The sons of Mudgala became Brāhmaṇas from Kṣatriyas and were founders of the family of Maudgalyas. Maudgalyas and Kāṇvas, mentioned before, were the followers of the school of Aṅgūś — 5

Mudgala begot the renowned Brahmīstha, the father of Indrasena, who begot Vindhyāśva, the father of a pair of twins, called Divodāsa and the daughter Abhīyā, from his wife Menakā — 6-7

Abhīyā begot the famous Rṣi, Satānanda, who was the son of Saradvāna — 8
Satānanda begot Satyadrītpu, who was a famous archer. He was the father of Amoghavīrya — 9

At the sight of a nymph, Satyadrītpu cast his seed in a pool of water, out of which, one son and a daughter were born — 10

At the same time, King Sāntanu chanced to go for a hunt and, seeing the babies, took pity on them and brought them with him — 11

All those sons of Saradvāna came to be known as Gautamās. Now the family of Divodāsa will be narrated — 12

Mitāyu was the son of Divodāsa, and he begot Maitreyā, the founder of the family of Maitreyānas. They were all Kṣatriyas, but became Bhārgava Brāhmanas, belonging to the gotra Yati. King Chaidyavara was the son of Maitreyā — 13-14

Chaidyavara became the father of the learned Sudāsa, who begot Ajamītha the second, the father of Somaka, who begot Janta. From him, a hundred sons were born in the line of Ajamītha and Somaka. When Somaka was killed, then Dhūmīni, the wife of Ajamītha, practised most trying and rigid penances on the loss of her promising son. She went to sleep, after duly performing Agniṣṭhota and finishing her meals — 15-18

Ajamītha then enjoyed himself with Dhūmīni, when she begot smoke colored Riksa, the valiant Riksha begot Samvarana, the father of Kuru, who forsaking Prayāga, built up Kurukṣetra. He practised long asceticism to call India, who at last appeared before him out of fear and granted him a boon — 15-21

It is for this reason that Kurukṣetra is so sacred. The family of Kuru multiplied, the members of which came to be known as the Kauravas. The five favourite sons of Kuru, viz., Sudhanvā, Jahnau, Parikesita, P miałana and Aittardana were all very pious and illustrious — 22-23

Sudhanvā begot Chyavana, who was very learned, and he became the father of Riksa, who begot Kṣimi, the great ascetic, who was the father of Chaidyopaniṭhara, also known as Vasu. He was a remarkable warrior like India, and had the power of traversing the sky. He begot from Gnikā the following seven issue, named Mahāratha, known also as Bhiradratha, King of Magadha (Bihār), Pratāpāvā, Kuda, Hariśvāhana, was the fourth, Yaju was the fifth, Matsya and a daughter, named Kāli who was the seventh. Bhiradratha was the father of Kudāgra, who begot Vriṣabhā, the father of King Pulvavāna, who begot the King Punya, the father of Satyadrītpu, who begot Dhanusa, the father of Saiva, who begot Sambhhava, the father of the King Bhiradratha. Bhiradratha’s son was born in two parts, which Jāra joined together (Sandhīta), who, on account of being joined by Jarâ, came to be known as Jarâsandha. He was the conqueror of all the Kṣatriyas —24-32

Jarâsandha begot the illustrious Sahadeva, the father of the illustrious Somâvi, who was a great ascetic. Sutaśravâ was the son of Somâvi. Thus the Kings of Magadha have been described —33

King Jahnâ was the father of the King Suratha, who begot Vidurârtha, the father of Sârvabhauma, who begot Jayatsena, the father of Ruchira, who begot Bhauma, the father of Tvaritâyu, who begot Akrodhana, the father of Devârthi, who begot Dakâ, the father of Bhimasena, who begot Dilipa, the father of Pratipâ, who was the father of three sons, viz., Devâpi, Sântanu, Bahlîka. Bahlîka was the father of the seven sons, known as Bahlîśvarâs. Devâpi, forsaken by his subjects turned a muni —34-39

The Rsis asked —Sûta! Why was the King Devâpi forsaken by his subjects? For what fault of his did the subjects not accept him? —40

Sûta said —That prince Devâpi became a leper, and that is why he was forsaken by everybody. Now I will narrate the future family of Sântanu (as given in the Bhaviyâ Pûjana) —41

King Sântanu was a very learned physician, and was highly accomplished. It is laid down in the books on medicine that by his mere touch even the patient suffering from a most dreadful disease would be instantly cured and become young. He was for that reason known as Sântanu. He married the sacred Ganges —42-44

Note —Sântanu means the healer of the body

Sântanu begot, from Jahnâvi, the famous Devavrata, and from his second wife, Satyavati, the daughter of a fisherman, he begot Kåli and Vichitravrîya. The favourite and sinless son of Sântanu, namely, Vichitravrîya, had died childless, and, consequently, Krishna Dvaipâyana was appointed to produce a son on the widow of Vichitravrîya. He thus begot three sons, named Dhritarâstra, Pându, and Vidura. Dhritarâstra begot one hundred sons, from Gandhâri —45-47

Of his hundred sons Duryodhana was the most remarkable. Pându had Kuntî and Mådri as his wives —48

Then Pându became the father of the five sons, given to him by the Devas, viz., Yudhishthira, from Dharma; Bhima, from Vâyu; Arjuna, from Indra. From his second wife, Mådri, Pându got Nakula and Sahadeva, through the two gods Ashwini —49-50

* This Satyavati, while still a maiden, had given birth to Vedavyâsa, through Rûpa Parâśara.
CHAPTER L

The five sons of Pându had Draupadi, as their common wife, from whom Yudhishthira begot Pātāvindiba, Bhima begot Śrutaseva, Arjuna begot Śrutakti, Sahadeva begot Śrūta Karmā and Nakula begot Śatānika. Thus Draupadi begot those five sons to the Pândavas, and they are known as Draupadeyas. The five Pândavas also begot another half a dozen sons, in addition to those five born of Draupadi. They are known as Pāṇḍaveyas to distinguish them from Draupadeyas. Thus, Bhima begot from the Asura gil Hidambā, a son, called Ghatotkacha and Sarvaga from Kāśi, Sahadeva begot Subotra from his wife Mādri, and Nakula from Karṇumati begot Niramitra. Arjuna begot from Subhadrā, Abhimanyu, and Yudhishthira begot a son, named Yaudheyā, from Devakti—51-56.

Parīkṣit, the conqueror of enemies’ towns, was the son of Abhimanyu, and he became the father of Janamejaya, the Pious. When Janamejaya favored Risi Yajñavalkya, whom he appointed as his Brahma priest at the Sacrifice then the sage Vaiśampāyana cursed him to the effect “The innovations introduced by you O man of perverted intelligence, will not be respected They will be honored only so long as thou wilt remain on earth.”—57-59

Thus all the subjects, seeing the Victory of Kṣatryyas over the Brāhmaṇas, flocked round the King Janamejaya. From that day’s curse the priests officiating at sacrifices performed by Kṣatryyas began to decline and refused to attend on occasions of their sacrifices—60-61.

When, after finishing the Sacrifice of Prajāpati, on a full-moon day, Janamejaya was entering the hall of Sacrifice, he was prevented from doing so, by Vaiśampāyana, but the former did not heed him. On the contrary, Janamejaya, the son of Parīkṣit, after performing two Āśvamedha sacrifices, became a great Vājasaneyaka, and went to the forest on account of his being cursed for entering into hostility with the Brāhmaṇas—62-66.

Śatānika, the son of Janamejaya, was very valiant, and he was anointed and proclaimed king by Janamejaya, Śatānika begot the most illustrious Adhīṣoma Kṛṣṇa,” by performing āśvamedha sacrifice—65-66.

Sāta said —Riṣis! This Adhīṣoma Kṛṣṇa is reigning now, and it is in his reign that you have engaged in this big sacrificial session, of which three years have passed in Puṣkara and two years in Kurukṣetra and Drīḍadvat—67.

The Rīśas said —Sāta! all this is past history now. We wish to hear something about the future kings. Pray tell us about the kings who will be the rulers of the land. Be pleased to tell us their names and duration of their reigns, please also tell us the extent of Satya, Tretā, Dvāpara and Kaliyugas, and also explain to us about the prosperity, adversity and vices of those ages."—68-71

* Mr. Parātik, in his Dynamics of the Kālī age, p. 4, note 10, says that the correct name is “Adhīṣoma Kṛṣṇa.”

Sūta said—Rūpas! listen, while I narrate all which have not yet come to pass, as told to me by Vyāsa, of untiring energy, both with regard to the future Kaliyuga and the Manvantaras. After that, I shall tell you of the future kings.—72-73

I shall narrate the kings who are to be in the families of Aila and Ikṣvāku, as well as in the family of Panrava, among whom, the auspicious stock of the Aila and Ikṣvāku families was established. All that I shall declare, as mentioned in the Bhaviṣya [Purāṇa]—74

Besides these, other kings will also arise, belonging to the castes of Kṣatrīya, Pāṇḍavas, and Śudrās as well as those who are outside these [foreigneis], namely, Andhivas, Sākṣas, Pulindas, Chulikās, Yavanās, Kaivarttas, Abhitas and Śabaras, and those having a Mlechchha origin. I shall declare those kings, according to their succession and by name.—75-76

Note—According to Mr. Parsee, these lines follow after the words "Mlechcha origin" 216, Panavas, Viṣṇuvās, Vairavas, five (Panchalās?) Kosālās, Mekalās, Kosālās, Paundras and Svasphrakas, Sumidharmas, Sākās, Nipās.

Adhisoma Kṛṣṇa is the first king, and I shall first relate to you his dynasty, as told in the Bhaviṣya [Purāṇa]—77

Adhisoma Kṛṣṇa shall have Vīvaksu for his son, and after Hastināpura is washed away by the Ganges, the latter shall make Kausthambhi his capital, and he shall be the father of eight powerful sons.—78-79

Bhūri will be the eldest and shall beget Chitraratha, the father of Suchidrava, who shall beget Viṣṇumāṇ, the father of King Suśena, who shall beget Sunitha, (the father of Rucha, who will be) the father of Nrichakṣu,† who shall beget Sukhibala, the father of Panśnava, who will beget Satapā, the father of Medhāvi, and Purīnājaya will be the son of the latter, and the father of Uva, who shall beget Tigmātma, the father of Brihadratha, who shall beget Vasudāmā.—80-85

Vasudāmā will be the father of Satāntika, who will beget Udayana, the father of the brave Vahinara.—86

Dandapāṇi will be the son of Vahinara and the father of Niramitra, who shall beget Kṣemaka. The following śloka has been sung by the ancient prophets.—"The source of Brahma-Ksatra stock the family honored by Devas, will come to conclusion in the Kali age, when it reaches King Kśemaka."—87-88

Sūta said —Rśis I have narrated to you this dynasty of Pauravas who descended from Arjuna, the son of Pāṇḍu.—89

Here ends the fiftieth chapter describing the dynasty of the Pauravas up to Kśemaka

CHAPTER LI

The Rśis —O! Sūta! Pray tell us about those Agnis or Fires which are honored amongst the twice-born, and narrate the history of the descendents of that dynasty in detail.—1

Sūta —Rśis! In Svāyambhuva Manvantara, Agni Abhimāṇi (the presiding spirit of Fire) was born from the mind of Brahmā, and Svāhā was his wife. She gave birth to Pāvaka (Subteiianeaun), Pavamāna (Terrestrial) and Suchi (Celestial) Fires. Pavamāna or Terrestrial Fire is produced by friction, and Pāvaka (Subteiianeaun) Fire produces the magnetic fire, called Vidyuta.—2-3

Suchi is also called Saura (Solar or Celestial Fire). These fires are known as Sthāvaras or Fixed Fires. Havyavāha is the son of Pavamāna.—4

Pāvaki, Saharaka, and Havyavāhamukha are sons of Pāvaka, Pavamāna and Suchi respectively. The Havyavāhamukha Agni is sacred to the Devas, and the first-born of Brahmā (Pavamāna) is the Fire sacred to men.—5

Saharaksa is the Agni sacred to the Asuras. These three Fires belong to the three classes. Their sons and grandsons number forty.—6

They are now described and named separately. Pāvana (Pavamāna), the Fire of human beings (Laukika), is the first-begotten of Brahmā, and Brahanandana known also as Bharata, was the son of Pavamāna Havyavāha is also known as Vaiśvānamara Agni. He died while carrying Havya offerings to the Gods. He being dead, the son of Atharvan (Aṅgiras) produced the Fire Puskarādadhi (produced by the churning of the cloud), which is known as Atharva Alaukika Agni and also as Dākṣina Agni, by non-rubbing.—7-9

Atharvan was begotten from Bhṛgu, and Aṅgiras was the son of Atharvan, who begot the above-mentioned Alaukika Dākṣina Agni.—10.
Pavamâna is called Nirmathya Agni, also produced by (rubbing fire-sticks or) any friction, and the same is known as Gârhapatya Agni or Household Fire, the first fire amongst the Brâhmans. —11

He produced, from Samâti, two sons, named Sabhya and Avasathya, then Havyavâhana was enamoured of sixteen rivers. The twice-born call this Agni Abhimâni Abavanîya Fire also. —12

The sixteen above-mentioned rivers are —

Kâveri, Krîñnaveni, Nainadâ, Yamuna, Godâvâri, Vistâ, Chandrabhâgâ, Irâvati, Viîâda, Kaustiki, Satadru, Sarayû, Sitâ, Manasvini, Hradini and Pâvanâ

After dividing his body into sixteen different parts, he dallied with these sixteen river-goddesses, when he was attracted towards Dhisnyas. * Produced from these Dhisnyas was the progeny known as Dhisnus. Since they were the sons of Dhisnyas, they are called Dhisnus. —13-16

All the sons of the rivers made friends with these Dhisnyas. Listen now about the Vihâranîyas (those which are removable from the altar, and Upastheya (those which are fixed in their places and worshipped there), amongst them Vibhu, Piîâhana and Agnidhra are fixed in their altars, while the remaining Dhisnus are shifting and moving, and taken from their places when some auspicious occasions arise. Hear the names of Anirdeśya and Anvârya Agnis, in order. —17-18

Vâsava and Krishna are both the Agnis of Dvitiya and Uttara ved (altars). Samât was the son of Agni, and the Brâhmans worship these eight Fires. —19

Parjanya and Pavamâna are also Agnis and are seen on the Dvitiya altar. Pavakoṣa and Samuhya are the Agnis found in the North or uttara altar. —20

Havyasûda and Asamariya are both known as Sâmtra. Satadhamâ and Sudhâjyoti are described as Raudhânâvarya agnis. Brahmajyoti and Vasudhamâ are said to be Brahmasthâniya. The Upastheya Agni by Ajekapâda is known to be Śalânukha. —21-22

Anirdeśya and Abhirbudhnya are carried to the south. The Brâhmans say that these Upastheya Agnis should be worshipped by all. —23

* Dhisnya —A sort of subordinate or side altar, generally a heap of earth, covered with sand, on which the fire is placed, and of which 8 are enumerated, viz. beside the Agnidhrya [in the Agnâvara], those in the Sadás belonging to the Hotra, the Mattra-aruna or Pratâstâ, the Brahma-dvechhannas, the Potra, Nâjâra, and Achkâ-âska and the Mâtârika. (Monier-Williams' Sanskrit-English Dictionary)
CHAPTER LI

Now I shall describe the Viharaniyas and their eight sons. Bahuṣa Agni, the carrier of sacrifice, was the son of Hūtiya—24

Piacchetā Agni is the son of Pusaṃśya. He is the second Agni Samsabāyaka Viśvevedā is the son of Agni, called Brāhmaṇa chamā—25

Svāmbha Agni is described having its origin in the waters. His name is Setu. These Dhiṣṇya Āharana (shifting) Agnis are worshipped along with the Soma in the Soma sacrifice by Brāhmans—26

The good call Pāvaka Agni to be Yoga, and that Agni is worshipped along with Varuna at the time of purificatory bath—27

Agni, the son of Hṛidaya, that digests the food, is known as Manyumāṇ, Jātharāgni, and Vidhāgni—28

The Agni that is produced spontaneously by friction and consumes all beings, is the son of the Agni Manyumāṇ, called Ghoirasamvartaka—29.

Thus Agni dwells in the ocean, drinking water, in the mouth of Vadavā (oceanic volcano), and the son of Samudravāsī (oceanic fire) is Saharakṣa—30

Saharakṣa Agni resides in the houses of the people, and fulfils their desires. Kravyāda Agni, the son of Saharakṣa devours the dead (i.e., the funeral fire)—31

These are the sons of Pāvaka Agni, as related by the Brāhmans. Their sons, though Sāviliya, were stolen by the Gandharvas and the Asuras—32

The Agni obtained by the rubbing of Arāni went to dwell in the sacrificial fuel. This fire is called Lord Āyu, in which sacrificial victims are immolated—33

Āyu begot Mahimāna, the father of Dahana. This Dahana is the presiding Fire in Pīkayāṇa domestic sacrifices, and eats the fire oblations made into it, and it eats also offerings made to the Devas and the pitrās. His son is Sahita Adbhuta, who is very celebrated—34-35.

He eats the offerings, &c., made at Prāyaschitta (atonement). He (Adbhuta) is the father of a portion of the heroic Devāmāṇa, known as the Great—36

Vividhāgni was born of the Vira Devāmāṇa, who begot Mahākavi. Arka, the second son of Vividhāgni, begot eight sons—37

He who is known as Rakṣobhāyatikrit is the presiding deity in all Kāmya sacrifices. The second son is Surabhi (the fifth), Rukmavān (the sixth), Vasumān (the third), Annada (the fourth), Haryāvā (the fifth), Pravargya (the seventh), and lastly Kṣemāvāna (the eighth), and including the progeny of Šuchī Agni, these are fourteen —38-39

Thus have been described the Fires, which were employed in sacrifices in previous world periods by the Devas, along with the Yāmās (a class of gods) —40

These Agnis were the presiding deities of sacrifices in Svāymbhuva Manvantara. Now, these are subsidiary fires, shifting from one altar to another and roaming among animate and inanimate beings —41

They were the presiding deities of altars and were known as Agnidhra Fires in ancient times, and were then carriers of sacrificial offerings, and were employed in those days, and may be employed in present days in voluntary (Kāmya) and occasional (naimittika) rites —42

They were worshipped in the first Manvantara by Śukīnas, Yāmās and Devas —43

Thus have been described the altars and the sources of the various Fires, they should be known as existing in the seven Manvantaras, beginning with Svārochis and ending with Savāna —44

Thus have been described the Agnis of the past Manvantaras. Now will be described the characteristic marks of the Fires to be worshipped in the present and the future Manvantaras —45

In all Manvantaras, these Fires, along with Yāmās and Devas, make their appearance in various forms and for diverse objects —46

These Fires live along with future Devas, and thus I have described the Past Agnis, what more do you wish to hear now, O Rishi —47

Here ends the fifty-first chapter describing the dynasty of Agni.

CHAPTER LII

The Rishi said — "Śūta! Be good enough to relate to us the difference between Virtue (Dharma) and Vice (Adharma) in detail, as explained by the Lord Viṣṇu, at the respectful enquiries of the King Vaivasvata Manu." —1 Śūta — "Rishi! Lord Jñānādana, in the form of Fish, has explained at length Karma Yoga and Sāṅkhya Yoga to Manu, the most illustrious son of the Sun, at the time when the world was a vast sheet of water.

CHAPTER LII

He explained them at length the first creation and the destruction of the world."—2-3

Note—Karma Yoga=Performance of worldly and religious rites. Sānkhya here means Jñāna Yoga, as opposed to Karma Yoga.

Hearing those words of the sage, the Rishis cried out—"Sūta! We are also most eager to understand the characteristics of Karma Yoga, because, Oh Pious Sūta, there is nothing concealed from you in this world, and you are the knower of all."—4

Sūta—Rishis. I repeat the Karma Yoga, as taught by Viṣṇu. Karma Yoga is superior to a thousand Jñāna Yogas, because Jñāna Yoga is produced by Karma Yoga, and from Jñāna Yoga, one attains the final emancipation. The divine knowledge of Brahma springs from Karma Yoga and Jñāna combined. Jñāna Yoga in its turn does not arise without Karma Yoga.—5 6

Note—Jñāna Yoga=contemplation. Akarma Jñāna=Renunciation.

Consequently a pious devoted to Karma Yoga attains to eternal Truth. The entire Veda is the fountain-head of all Dharma, so also the conduct of those good men who know the Vedas is also a root from which Dharma arises.—7

The eight spiritual qualities must exist in pre-eminence, in order to produce Dharma. They are,—(1) Clemency to all living beings, (2) forbearance, (3) protection of him who seeks aid in distress, (4) freedom from envy in the world, (5) external and internal purification, (6) to calmly meet sudden emergencies in all works, (7) not to exercise niggardliness in the case of the distressed and with regard to one's earnings, (8) not to banter after the riches or the wives of others.—8-10

The above eight spiritual qualifications of the soul are enumerated by those learned in the Purāṇas, and the possession of these qualities is essential which is, for Kriyā Yoga, the means to the attainment of Jñāna Yoga.—11

None in this world attains Jñāna without Karma Yoga, consequently, the duties enjoined by the Śrutis and Smṛitis ought to be closely followed with diligence.—12

Every day one ought to perform the five sacrifices, viz., (1) worshipping the Devas, (2) the Pitris, (3) feeding men (4) and the lower creatures, (5) and honouring the Rishis.—13

The learned, according to the prescribed rites, ought to (1) adore the Devas by performing sacrifices to the fire, (2) worship the Rishis by the recitation of the Vedas, (3) the Pitris by Srâddha offering, (4) the men by showing hospitality to guests, (5) honour all lower living creatures by scattering food for them on the ground, as described in Balikarma — 14

To ward off the five sins by which the animal life is accidentally destroyed by a house-holder, viz., (1) the threshing of the grain, (2) grinding of condiments and grain, (3) lighting the fire-place, (4) fetching water, by the water-pot, (5) sweeping by the broom, the above five sacrifices have been laid down — 15

By the above-mentioned five deeds the householder commits the five sins that are known as pañchaguana, and he does not go to heaven without freeing himself from the sins, which are wiped out by the performance of the five sacrifices mentioned above — 16

The twenty-two as well as the eight Samskâras laid down in the law-books, put together, do not lead to emancipation if the man does not possess the eight spiritual qualifications mentioned above — 17

Consequently, a man possessing these qualifications ought to perform the rites laid down in the Vedas and should support the cow and the Brâhmanas with his wealth, and always do good to others and should be well-conducted — 18

One ought to worship Śiva (Vâsudeva) containing within Him Brahmâ, Viśnu, the Sun, Rudra, and the Vasus, by means of cows, land, gold, cloth, incense, flower-garland and water — 19

One should devoutly, free from jealousy, worship Śiva (Vâsudeva), according to the prescribed rites, and observe fasts and vows. Śiva (Vâsudeva) is supersensuous, peaceful, unmanifest, subtle, all-pervading, eternal. And the whole universe is His form. All the following Devas are his manifestations — viz., Vasudeva, Lord of the universe Brahmâ, Viśnu, the adorable Sun, Śiva, the eight Vasus, the eleven lords of hosts (eleven Rudras), the Lord of the Lokapâlas, Pitris, and the Mâtriganas — 20-21

These above-mentioned Devas are said to be the powers of God. These powers include all moveable and immovable objects and belong to that Supreme Spirit who is the root of Brahmâ, Viśnu, Śiva and the Sun, and who is said to be the overlord of the Unmanifested (Prakriti) — 22

He who has adored all the four (Brahmâ, Sûrya, Viśnu and Śiva) without observing any difference among them, has worshipped, in fact, the whole universe, including the moveable and the immovable — 23
CHAPTER LIII

He who is the supreme abode of Brahmā and the rest, in whom all the three (Vedas) reside, He is Pūsam, the personification of Vedas, and consequently he should be worshipped with great diligence — 24

These Deitiees, Brahmā, &c, should be worshipped by feeding the fire and the Brāhmanas. Moreover, they should be adored by utterance of mantras, sacrifices, gifts, penances, fasts, silent recitation of the sacred name, and by fire oblation — 25

For those who are devoted to the above-described Kriya Yoga and who love the Vedānta, the Smritis and the Sāstras and who are afraid of sinful deeds there is nothing in this world as well as in the next which is beyond their reach, i.e., such people attain everything — 26

Here ends the Fifty-second Chapter describing the Kriyā Yoga

CHAPTER LIII

The Rishis—Sūta! Be pleased to describe to us the number and bulk of all the Purānas in due order and in detail and also about the giving of gifts and charity (Dāna Dharma) — 1

Sūta — I shall tell you exactly what the Universal Soul, the ancient Male Lord, said to the King Vaivasvata Manu — 2

Lord said to Manu! Brahmā remembered in the beginning first the Purāṇas among all the Sāstras. So Purāṇas are the first among the Sāstras. Afterwards, Brahmā uttered out the four Vedas from His four mouths — 3

There was only one Purāṇa in the beginning of the Kalpa. It was alone the means of the accomplishment of the three ends of man (Dharma, Artha and Kama). And it was the only holy book consisting of thousand millions of stanzas — 4

When all the regions punished by fire at the Great Dissolution, then I recited the four Vedas, with their six Angas as well as the Purāṇas, the manifold Nyāyas, the Mitāmsās and the Dharmāṣṭra. In the beginning of the new age, I immersed myself in the furious waters, at the time of dissolution of the universe and explained them fully to Brahmā. Who in His turn revealed them to the Devas and the sages, after which they spread all over the world. Therefore, the Purāṇas became the source of all other Sāstras. Later on, seeing the neglect of the Purāṇa under the changed circumstances, I repromulgated them in every yuga, through my partial incarnation of Vyāsa. In every Dwāpara yuga I compiled the Purāṇas to the extent of 4 lacas of slokas, and spread them in the world after dividing them into eighteen. Even now the bulk of the Purâna extends to a hundred crore verses in the Deva Loka. On the universe, however, its bulk is abridged only to 4 lacs of slokas, and is divided into eighteen Purânas. — 5-11

Sûta —Hear, O Rûpas! the names of the different eighteen Purânas I shall enumerate them to you, as they were described to Marichi by Brahmâ — 12

(1) The Brahma Purâna — Brahma Purâna contains 13,000 slokas. One who writes and gives it away in charity, along with a cow and water, in the month of Varâkha, on the full-moon day, passes his days in Brahmaloka, in happiness — 13

(2) The Padma Purâna — At the time when this universe came out of the cosmic waters, in the beginning of the Lotus Kalpa, and in the form of a golden lotus, then the Padma Purâna was revealed, describing that creation, and it is called Padma Purâna by the wise. And it consists of 55,000 slokas — 14

One who gives away Padma Purâna in charity, along with a golden lotus and sesame, in the month of Jyaistha, gets the benefit of performing an ávamedha sacrifice — 15

(3) The Viṣṇu Purâna — Similarly, the rules of virtue laid down by Parâshara, for the period when there was the Varâha incarnation of Viṣṇu, in the beginning of Varâha Kalpa, form the Viṣṇu Purâna — 16

That Purâna contains 23,000 slokas and one who gives it away in charity, along with a cow and clarified butter, in the month of Ådâdha, on the full-moon day, is purified of all sin and goes and rests in peace in the region of Varuṇa — 17

(4) The Vâyu Purâna — The rules of virtue laid down by Vâyu, along with the glory of Rudra, in the Śveta-kalpa, is known as Vâyaviya Purâna. It contains 24,000 slokas — 18

One who gives it away in charity, along with a cow, sugar and an ox, to a Brâhma, whose family is large, on the day when Râkhi thread is tied on the wrist, in the month of Srâvana, goes and resides for a Kalpa in the region of Śiva — 19

(5) The Bhâgavata Purâna — The Purâna which begins with the description of the sacred Gâyatrî worship, and goes on to mention various Dharmas and which contains a narration of the destruction of the demon Vîtrâsura as well as an account of the famous men who flourished in the Sârasvata Kalpa, is known as Bhâgavata — 20-21

One who writes Bhāgavata and gives it away in charity, along with a golden lion, on the full-moon day, in the month of Bhādrapada, attains final emancipation. It contains 18,000 ślokas—22

(6) The Nāradīya Purāṇa—The Nāradīya Purāṇa, containing 25,000 ślokas is that in which Nārada has described the Brahmākalpa and the dharmas of the Bṛhatkalpa—23

One who gives away this Purāṇa in charity, on the full-moon day of Āśvin, along with a cow, attains bliss, and is liberated from the cycles of birth—24

(7) The Mārkandeya Purāṇa—The Purāṇa which begins with the story of the birds solving the difficulty of Dharma and Adharma, and which the pious sages explain in an answer to the question of the sage (Jaimini), which has been described at great length by the sage Mārkandeya, at the request of the Rṣis, and which contains 9,000 couplets, is known as Mārkandeya Purāṇa—25-26

One who writes this Purāṇa, and gives it away in charity, along with a golden elephant, on the full-moon day, in the month of Kārtika, attains the benefit of performing Puṇḍarīka sacrifice—27

8 The Agni Purāṇa—The Purāṇa which commences with the description of the Āśāna Kalpa, and which was a path of virtue revealed to Agni by Vasiṣṭha, is known as the Agneya Purāṇa, and contains 16,000 ślokas—28

One who writes the Purāṇa and gives it away in charity, along with a golden lotus, a cow and sesamum, on the full-moon day, in Mārgaśīrṣā, attains the benefit of performing 16,000 sacrifices—29

9 The Bhaviṣya Purāṇa—The Purāṇa in which Brahmā has described the history of Aghorakalpa, the glory of the Sun, the existence of the Universe, the characteristics of the aggregate multitude to Manu, is known as the Bhaviṣya Purāṇa, and contains 14,500 ślokas—30-31

One who gives away this Purāṇa in charity, free from the feeling of jealousy, on the full-moon day of Pauṣa, along with a pitcher of raw sugar, attains the benefit of performing the Agniṣṭoma sacrifice—32.

10 The Brahmavaivartta Purāṇa—The Purāṇa which commences with the description of Rathāntara Kalpa, and in which Śāvanti Manu has described to Nārada the glory of Kṛṣṇa and the history of the Rathāntara Kalpa, and in which there is also a constant allusion to Brahmavārtha, is known as Brahmavaivarta Purāṇa, and contains 18,000 ślokas—33-34

One who gives away this Brahmavaivarta Purāṇa in charity to a Brāhmaṇa, on an auspicious day, in the month of Māgha, on the full-moon day, goes and enjoys in the region of Brahmā — 35

11 The Līnga Purāṇa — The Purāṇa in which Śiva explained the virtues of Agni and the four Vargās, viz., Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa, by manifesting Himself through the pillar of fire, which commences with the description of Āgneya Kalpa, and which was uttered by Brahmā Himself, is styled Līnga Purāṇa, and it contains 11,000 ślokas. One who gives away this Purāṇa, along with sesamum and cow, in charity, on the full-moon day, in the month of Phālguṇa, attains the form of and similarity with Śiva.— 36-37

12. The Varāha Purāṇa — The Purāṇa in which Viṣṇu has described the glories of the Great Boar to the goddess Earth, and which was recited in connection with the Māna Kalpa, is known as the Varāha Purāṇa, and contains 24,000 stanzas — 38-39

One who gives away this Purāṇa in charity, along with a golden eagle (Grūnda), cow and sesamum, on the full-moon day, in the month of Chaitra, to a Brāhmaṇa with a large family, reaches the region of Viṣṇu by the favour of Varāha — 40

13 The Skanda Purāṇa — The Purāṇa in which the six-faced Kārttikeya has expressed the virtues of high class men and also about the worship of Mahādeva, is known as Skanda Purāṇa. It commences with the description of the Māheśvara Dharmas, as found in the Satpurusa Kalpa, and contains 81,100 ślokas, in this mortal region — 41-42

One who gives away this Purāṇa, along with a golden trident, after writing it out at the time of the Sun being in the 12th sign of the Zodiac (Pisces), goes to the region of Śiva — 43

14 The Vāmana Purāṇa — The Purāṇa in which the four-faced Brahmā has related the glories of Trīvikrama, and which describes the three Vargās also to the Devas, after declaring the glory of Vāmana, is known as the Vāmana Purāṇa, and contains 10,000 ślokas. It describes the Kalpa, and is auspicious. Following Kūrma Kalpa, one who gives it away in charity, after writing it out neatly in the autumnal equinox, goes to the region of Viṣṇu — 44-45

15 The Kūrma Purāṇa — The Purāṇa in which Viṣṇu has dwelt on the glories of the four Vargās (Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa), in the form of a Kūrma, in the Rasātāla regions, before the sages, in connection with the story of Indradyumna, where Indra was also present, through his companion Indradyumna, is known as Kūrma-Purāṇa, and is related to Lākṣaṇ Kalpa. It contains 18,000 ślokas.— 46-47.
One who gives it away in charity, along with a golden turtle, at the time of the equinox, gets the benefit of giving away thousands of cows — 48

16 The Mātsya Purāṇa — The Purāṇa in which the Lord has related the glory of Nṛsimha to Vaivasvata Manu, at the beginning of the Kalpa, with a view to propagate the Śrutis, in the form of a fish, and in which the Lord has also described about the seven Kalpas, is known, O sages, as the Mātsya Purāṇa. It contains 14,000 slokas — 49-50

One who gives this Purāṇa away in charity, along with a golden fish and a cow, at the time of the summer solstice, acquires the benefit of giving in gift the entire earth — 51

17 The Garuda Purāṇa — The Purāṇa in which Kṛṣṇa has described the birth of Garuda out of the cosmic egg, in the Garuda Kalpa, is known as Garuda Purāṇa, and contains 18,000 slokas — 52

One who gives away this Purāṇa in charity, along with a golden flamingo, attains a place in the region of Śiva, endowed with highest perfection — 53

(18) The Brahmāṇda Purāṇa — The Purāṇa commencing with the glory of the cosmic egg, and in which Brahmā has described the future Kalpas as well as the history of the Universe to the Devas, is known as the Brahmāṇda Purāṇa, and contains 12,200 slokas — 54-55

One who gives away this Purāṇa in charity, along with a yellow woolen garment, and a golden cow at the time of Vyaśa-pātra, attains the benefit of a thousand Rājasūya sacrifices — 56

Sūta said — Vyāsa, of wonderful activity, explained these eighteen Purāṇas, to the extent of 4 lacs of slokas, to my father, and the latter told me about it, and I, O Rsis!, have described the same to you — 57

The venerable sage has abridged the Purāṇas for the sake of the good of this world, otherwise, the entire Purāṇa existing in the Deva Loka, contains a hundred crore slokas — 58

Upapurāṇas — (1) Nṛsimha — I shall now tell you about the difference between the Purāṇas that exist in the universe and the secondary Purāṇas. There is a mention of Nṛsimha in the Padma Purāṇa, and the 18,000 slokas (dealing with the history of Nārāyaṇa) forms the Nārāyaṇa
Purāṇa (which is one of the secondary Purāṇas) — 59

(2) Nandī upapurāṇa — Where Svāmikāntika has described the glory of the great goddess Nandā (the portion dealing with that), is known as the Nandī Purāṇa — 60
(3) Samba upapurana — That Purana in which Lord Siva, taking his most noble consort, Gauri, as his audience, has related about the future, as found in the Bhaviya Purana and also is styled by the sages as Samba Puraga — 61

(4) Aditya upapurana — The learned who know, say that the recitation of the list of the Puranas dealing with the ancient Kalpa, is conducive to glory, fame and long life. This is the order of the Puranas, as described above. Similarly, the Aditya Upapurana is also mentioned therein.—62

O Rusa! the secondary Puranas have been deduced from the original eighteen Puranas — 63

The following are the five characteristics of the Puranas — They describe (1) the creation of the universe, (2) its genealogy and dissolution, (3) the dynasties, (4) the Manvantaras, (5) the dynastic chronicles — 64

The Puranas, with these five characteristics, sing the glory of Brahma, Visha, the Sun and Rudra, as well as they describe also the creation and dissolution of the Earth — 65

The four Vargas (Dharma, Artha, Kama and Moksha) have also been described in all the Puranas, along with evil consequences following from sin — 66

In the Satvika Puranas, there is largely a mention of Hari's glory. In the Rajas Puranas there is the greater mention of Brahma's glory. In the Tamasiya Puranas, there is a mention of Siva and Agni's glory. In all kinds of Puranas, of all the three attributes, the glory of Sarasvati and the pitha have been described — 67-68

The great sage Vyasa, after compiling the 18 Puranas, indulged in the composition of the story of Mahabharata in order to magnify their bulk, which was an addition to the Puranas, by another lac of slokas. And in which he has condensed the sense of the Vedas — 69

The glorious story of Ramayana, sung by the sage Valmiki, at the instance of Brahma, also extends to a hundred crore of slokas — 70

Brahma narrated the original Ramayana to Narada, the latter revealed it to Valmiki, who gave it to the world, and which is a means of giving Dharma, Kama and Artha. And in which way the famous epic exists in the world, and contains 5,25,000 slokas — 71

The learned know of the Puranas of the ancient Kalpa. The recitation of this list of the Puranas is conducive to prosperity, fame and long life. He who reads or listens to it, gets wealth, reputation, long life and emancipation.— 72
CHAPTER LIV

This list is the most sacred. It is the giver of fame and the destroyer of sins. It is very dear to the purus, and is prized by the Devas as a nectar. It is external and destroyer of sin of all men. — 73

Here ends Fifty-third Chapter giving the list of Purānas and Upapurānas, and is known as the Anukramanikā of the Purānas.

Note — It is a remarkable fact that this Purana does not mention the eighteen Upapurānas, as they now exist. It gives the names of five such Upapurānas only, showing that when this Purana was composed the other Upapurānas did not exist.

CHAPTER LIV.

Sūta said — Rīṣas¹ I shall now relate to you in full about the gifts (Dāna Dharma), vows (Vrata) and fasts, as explained by the Lord in the form of fish. This narration is in the form of a dialogue between the great Lord Śiva and wise Nārada and also a mention of trivarga (Dharma, Kāma and Artha). I shall relate exactly as the dialogue took place. — 1-2

In ancient times, Nārada questioned the Lord Śiva, who resides on the summit of Kailāsa, has three eyes, and is the enemy and destroyer of Cupid. — 3

The Sage Nārada said — “O Adorable God of gods! O Ruler of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Indra! pray tell me how one may become your devotee or a devotee of Viṣṇu and so attain wealth, life, health, beauty, luck, and prosperity? Pray also tell me which Vrata is the giver of gradual emancipation to married women or widows, possessing all good and auspicious qualities.” — 4-5

Lord Śiva said — Nārada! You have put a very useful question for the benefit of all. Hear about the vow which is beneficial to widows. There is a religious observance (Vrata) which is known as naksatrapurusa Vrata, which should be devoutly kept. It (naksatrapurusa Vrata) is worship of Nārāyana in the figure which should be made according to rule, having feet, etc., and the names of Viṣṇu should be recited. — 6-7

Note — Naksatrapurusa — A figure of a man, on the limbs of which various ashterisms are marked.

The devotee should get an image of the Lord Vāsudeva made according to the instructions of the Brähmana, and should then commence to worship it from the month of Chaitra, at the time when the moon is in the Mūlā, etc. — 8

He should recite the following mantras on the various limbs, beginning from the feet and ending with the hair of the figure —

(1) नमः विस्वाधार्या Namō Viśvādārhya — on the two feet, sacred to Mūlā ashterism garments, bedstead, &c., to a pious Brâhmaṇa, versed in the Sâmaṇedra. The mace should be placed in a pitcher of water —21-22

Besides all that, the devotee should give away other things worthy of being offered to a Brâhmaṇa, after which he should devoutly pray to the Lord to fulfil his desires in the words “Manoratham naḥ Saphalikuruṣva hiranya garbhāchyutarudraśāpina” O thou having the form of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva, fulfil all my cherished desires —23.

The image of Viṣṇu along with that of Lâkṣmī, should be given away to the Brâhmaṇa and his wife, with a peaceful mind. So also should be given a bedstead, made of wood, without any joints —24.

The devotee should recite the following —“As the worshippers of Viṣṇu never get any sufferings or sin, so let me get beauty and health as well as highest devotion towards Keśava, as the house of the Lord is never devoid of Lâkṣmī, so my house, may never be bereaf of my consort in all my life, O Krisna” —25-26.

After that, the Brâhmaṇa versed in astronomy, should be dismissed by giving away the image of the nakṣatra puruṣa, along with clothes, garland, sandal paste, &c. The worshipper should abstain from salt and oily food during all the twenty-seven days of his observance of the Vrata, and should feed others according to his means, without giving way to miserliness —27-28.

The worshipper of the nakṣatra puruṣa attains all his desires, and at the end passes his days in the region of Viṣṇu with happiness. He washes off all his sins as well as all the sins of his deceased ancestors committed in his present and past lives —29-30.

The married woman of the man who reads or hears the story of this observance with devotion, will free herself or himself from all the sins by hearing and reading it. This observance confers many blessings on the worshippers —31.

Here ends the fifty-fourth chapter dealing with the observance called nakṣatra apuruṣavrata

Note — The twenty seven Nakṣatras which are to be worshipped in the ceremonial in the month of Chaitra commencing with the Moon when she is in the asterism, Māli, and on successive twenty-six days, when she passes through different other asterisms are shown in the Table opposite to this page which has been reproduced from Colebrooke’s Essays. The asterism, Abhijit, is no longer, counted amongst asterisms.
CHAPTER LV

Hearing all that Nāradā said — "Lord! What should one, who, owing to delicate health or otherwise, is not in a position to go through the ordinance of fasting just explained by you, do?" — 1

The Lord said — One who is not in a position to keep up the fast should take his meals in the night which will also give him everlasting benefit — 2

Hear about the Vrata, called Āditya Sayana Sankarārcharana observance, as described by the learned in the Purāṇas, as well as the method of worshipping Sākara, on the conjunction of the moon with particular asterism. That day is most auspicious which falls on a Sunday, when there is Sankrantī and the 7th day of the dark fortnight and when the moon is in the asterism Hastā. On that day, the images of Umā and Mahēśvara should be worshipped, the former after reciting the names of the God, Sun, and the latter along with the invisible form of Śiva — 3-5

There is absolutely no difference between Śiva and the Sun, and consequently, the devotee, when worshipping the Śiva, uses the mantras addressed to the Sun. They are as follows —

With (1) Ṛgveda nam Śūryāya namah, let him adore the feet of the image, along with Hastā asterism,

With (2) Ṛgveda nam Arkāya namah, the ankles, with Chitrā asterism,

With (3) Ṛgveda nam Puruṣottamāya namah, the shanks, along with Śvātī asterism,

With (4) Ṛgveda nam Dhātrey namah, the region of the knees, along with Viśākhā asterism;

With (5) Ṛgveda nam Sahasra Bhāuave namah, the two thighs should be worshipped along with Anurādhā asterism,

With (6) Ṛgveda nam Anangāya namah, the generative organ, along with Jyeṣṭha asterism;

With (7) Ṛgveda nam Indrāya Somāya namah, the waist, along with Mūlā asterism,

With (8) Ṛgveda nam Tvastrē Saptāturamāya namah, the navel, along with Pūrvā and Uttarā Āvāṭāhā asterisms

With (9) Ṛgveda nam Tikṣāuave namah, the arm pits, along with Śrávāṇa asterism,

With (10) Ṛgveda nam Vikārānāya namah, on the back, with the asterism Dhanāśthā asterism

With (11) Ṛgveda nam Dhvāntavīśānāya namah, in the eyes, with the Satabhīṣa asterism

With (12) Ṛgveda nam Chandakrāya namah, on the arms, along with Pūrvā and Utta-rābhādrapada asterisms,

With (13) Ṛgveda nam Sāmnāmadhīśaya namah, the two hands, along with Revati asterism;

With (14) Ṛgveda nam Saptvāsvadhurandharāya namah, the nails, along with Avasīni asterism;

With (15) क्रुद्धतापी नमः। Kañchöradhāmō namah, on the throat, along with Bharani asterism;
With (16) विभूतितयतं नमः। Divākarāya namah, on the neck, with the Kṛṣṭikā asterism;
With (17) रोहणकामं नमः। Ambujesāya namah, on the lips, with the Rohini asterism;
With (18) वर्तीयतं नमः। Harāye namah, on the tooth, with Mrigasirā asterism;
With (19) संयतं नमः। Savitṛa namah, the tongue, along with Ārdra asterism;
With (20) विकारं नमः। Āṁkarāya namah, in the nose, along with Punarvasu asterism;
With (21) विन्दुवंशकारं नमः। Ambhoruvallabhāya namah on the forehead, along with Puṣyā asterism;
With (22) विद्यतं विविधतां नमः। Vedasuvrādhārīna namah, on the crown of the head, along with the asterism Aslesā;
With (23) विन्दुवंशकारं नमः। Vibhandapriyāya namah, the ears, along with Mahā asterism;
With (24) गोभ्राह्माद्विकवंशकारं नमः। Gobhrāhanavandaṇāya namah, the eyes, along with Purvaphālguṇi asterism;
With (25) विन्दुवंशकारं नमः। Vīsvesvarāya namah, the eye-brows, along with the Uttara phālguṇi asterism — 6-15

Afterwards the devotee should pray to Śiva: "O, Lord! armed with a noose, a hook, a trident, a lotus, a human skull, and the wearer of the snake and the moon and the bow, I salute Thee! O Lord! the destructor of Gaja, Demous, Cupid and Pura and Andhaka, etc., I salute Thee" — 16

And the worshipper should also worship the different weapons (mentioned above), and should salute the Lord by bowing down his head, with the mantra Vīsvesvarāya namah, and every day abstain from oil, flesh, green vegetables and salt, and eat moderately — 17

After thus taking his meals in the night, the devotee, on the Punarvasu asterism day, should put some rice, along with some ghee, in a vessel made of fig-leaves. And should then give it away to the Brāhmaṇa, after putting some gold in it. Then, on the seventh day of the fast, he should give to the Brāhmaṇa a couple of raiments — 18-19

On the day of the fourteenth repast after the fast, the worshipper should feed the Brāhmaṇas with raw-sugar, milk and clarified butter — 20

And after that, he should get a golden lotus, eight fingers in length, made with eight leaves and studded with gems, and bedecking it with nice cloth, should give it away to a Brāhmaṇa, along with bedsheet, pillow, utensils, shoes, chināra, a piece of mattress, looking glass, garments, fruits, incense, bedstead, a cow with its horns covered with gold and hoofs with silver, along with her calf and a vessel of bell-metal for milching the cow. The cow must necessarily be given away on that occasion — 21-25

Then the devotee should pray to the Sun: "O God! as Your house is not bereft of lustre, fortune and prosperity, similarly let mine be also in the enjoyment of same blessings" — 26

"Lord! who else is there, excepting Thyself, to grant me prosperity, consequently, be pleased to safely and comfortably see me through this mundane sea of trials and troubles" — 27

After that prayer, the devotee should circumambulate and salute the Deity, and then dismiss the Brāhmaṇa and send to his house all the things given in charity. None of them should be kept in the house of the worshipper — 28.

Nothing should be said about this sacred observance to a blasphemer, to a person of evil conduct, to a hypocrite, or to a false reasoner, for they are liable to profane it. Doing so, would lead to sin — 29.

The self-controlled and the devout are worthy of being told about the mystery of this observance. Those learned in the Vedas assert that it is the destroyer of all sins and giver of all peace and happiness to men — 30.

Those women and men who observe this ordinance with devotion, are never bereft of their sons and other dear ones. They attain the Divine felicity, and are free from the curse of disease, grief and suffering — 31.

This ordinance was at first observed by Vasiṣṭha, Arjuna, Kuvera and Indra. The mere recitation of this liberates one from all sins — 32.

One who reads or hears about this Ravi Śayana observance, endears himself to Indra and helps his deceased manes to go to heaven from hell — 33.

Here ends the fifty-fifth chapter describing the observance, called Adityaśayana Vrata

CHAPTER LVI

The adorable Śiva said — I shall now explain to you about the Kṛṣṇaṭami Vrata (ordinance) which is the destroyer of all evils. This fast gives victory, peace and emancipation to men.

Saṅkara should be worshipped on the eighth day of the dark fortnight in the month of Mārgaṇīṣa, Sambhu, on the corresponding day of Paūṣa, Mahaśvara in Māgha, Mahādeva in Phālguna, Śīhānu in Čaṭtra, Śiva in Vaiśākha, Paśupati in Jyaṣṭha, Ugra in Āśādha, Śarva in Śrāvana, Trayambaka in Bhādha, Hara in the month of Āḍvīna, Īśāna in Kārtika. These pujās should be performed every month, on all the 8th days of the dark fortnight. The devotee should worship the
CHAPTER LVII

Närada said—"O Lord! with moon as thy crest-jewel, pray tell me all about the ordinance, the observance of which begets long life, health, fecundity of the race, kingdom, in several successive lives."—1.

The Lord Śiva said—Närada! I have already explained to you about the ordinance that confers everlasting blessing on the devotee, and I shall now also explain to you more clearly about it, as described by those learned in the Purāṇas.—2

Rohunchandra Ṛṣyavrata is most sacred. The devotee should worship the image of Nārāyana, after reciting the names of the moon in observing it.—3,
When the full moon day falls on Monday, or when the Rohini asterism falls on the full moon day, the learned should bathe with pañchagavya and mustard, and, after that, should recite “Āpyāsya” Mantra for a hundred and eight times — 4-5

Note.—Āpyāsya—A Vedic Mantra

The Śūdra also may observe this Vrata with extreme devotion, freeing himself from the company of all unbelievers, and should devoutly salute the Gods, Moon and Viṣṇu, with the following mantra, instead of the Vedic one — Somāya Varadāyātha Viṣṇave cha namo namah — 6

After finishing his bath and the recitation (japa) of the mantra, he should return to his house and worship Maithunādana, by offering fruits and flowers and singing the names of Moon (Soma), as given below — 7

After reciting (1) Somāya Śūra-yā namah Somāya Śūrāyā namah Somāya Śūrāyā namah, should be worshipped the feet (of the Divine image), and after reciting (2) Anantādharmī namah Anantādharmī namah, should be worshipped the shanks and knees, after reciting (3) Jalodarāya namah, the two thighs, and after reciting (4) Anantābhāve namah, the organ of generation — 8

After reciting (5) Śūrābhāva namah Śūrābhakrīpāya namah, the waist of the moon should be worshipped. After reciting (6) Amritodarāya namah, the stomach, after reciting (7) Śūrānīkanamah, the navel should be worshipped — 9

After reciting (8) Chandrāya namah, the mouth should be worshipped, after reciting (9) Dwajādhīpāya namah, the teeth, after reciting (10) Chandramase namah, the face (hāsyam), after reciting (11) Kumudavatvānva priyāya namah, the lips — 10

After reciting (12) Vanasadhinānya namah, the nose, after reciting (13) Anuśādhārīya namah, the brows, after reciting (14) Indivaśāyamakarāya namah, the eyes like lotus — 11

After reciting (15) Uddadhiprīyāya namah, the two ears, after reciting (16) Udadhiprīyāya namah, the forehead, and after reciting (17) Sūramādhipataya namah, the hair — 12

After reciting (18) Saśāmkāya namah, the head of Murāri, after reciting (19) Viśvārāya namah, the coronet (of the Divine image) Rohini should also be worshipped. The devotee, by praying “O, Rohini, the beloved of the Lord, also known under the name of Lakṣmī, O blessed one,” should offer sweet-smelling flowers, incense and eatables, etc., and sleep on the floor in course of the night on getting up early in the morning, and after taking his bath, he should offer a vase of water, gold and eatables to the Brahmans, with the mantra nam Nāmaśāmyaḥ and then hear the recitation of some sacred book (Itiṣṭa) for a couple of mūhūrta (90 minutes), after taking twentyeight morsels of food with clarified butter, milk and urines of the cow, but devoid of flesh and salt — 1 3-15

Then he should worship the Moon and Viṣṇu with Kadamba, blue-lotus, Ketaki, jasmine, lotus, sevati, kuvāya, white kśemair and champaka — 16.
Hari should be worshiped with all the various kinds of flowers that bloom in various months, from the beginning of the month of Śāvana—17

In this way, the devotee should go on with the worship, according to the prescribed rites till the end of the year, after which he should give away a bedstead, along with a mirror and other things in charity—18

Then he should make an image of Rohini and the Moon in gold. The image of the latter should be six fingers in length and that of the former four fingers. And he should give them away to a good Brāhmaṇa, along with eight white pearls, white clothes, milk, some utensil of bell, metal, rice, raw sugar, sugar-cane and fruits—19-20

He should also give away after that, a white cow, with its horns plaited with gold and hoofs covered with silver and its back covered with a cloth, along with utensils and a couch—21

Afterwards, the worshipper should bedeck the Brāhmaṇa along with his consort with fine clothes, &c., and should look upon him as the moon in company of Rohini—22

And he should then pray, "O Lord! as Rohini shines in Thy house, so let my house, too, be full of lustre—23

O Lord Moon! as you bring happiness and emancipation to all, be merciful enough to shower the same blessings on me, and let my devotion in you always remain firm"—24

"O Lord Moon, grant me health and prosperity. I am afraid of this world, and desire bliss at your hands"—25

This ordinance is very dear to the Pitrās, and the observer of it attains the region of the moon, after being the lord of the three worlds for 307 Kalpas, and then gets final rest—26

The women folk, observing this fast, beget the same fruits, and are liberated from the cycle of births—27

One who reads or listens to this form of ordinance, gets pure intellect and goes to heaven where he is venerated by the Devas—28

Here ends the fifty-seventh chapter describing the worship of Rohintchandraśayanavata

CHAPTER LVIII

Sūta said—The King Vaivasvata Manu asked the Lord, who was lying in the water in the form of fish, to explain to him when should the sacrifice be performed and what feasts should be employed therein, and what kind of altar should be made for the occasion to consecrate a newly built tank, well and pool, grove and temple —1-2

He also asked the Lord to explain what fees to the officiating priest, and Sacred offerings to the Deity should then be made What are the proper time and place for this observance, and what preceptor should be appointed.—3

The Lord Fish said —Hear, O Mighty-armed, the rules about tanks, etc., as laid down in the Itihāsa and the Purāṇas, by knowers of the Veda. At the end of the summer solstice, the man performing the ceremony should get the preparatory rites to the observance performed in an auspicious bright fortnight, after consulting a Brāhmaṇa —4-5

After that, he should get a nice Vedi (square altar), measuring four-hands in length, with four openings made, near the tank, etc., to be consecrated, in the north-eastern direction —6

A pandal (mandapa), measuring sixteen hands, with four openings should also be made, and then around the altar should be made pits (gartas), five, seven or nine, but not more in number, one cubit deep and three circles round them. The receptacle (yoni) of the altar should be one span long and six or seven fingers broad —7-8

Note—Vitasti=A measure of length equal to 12 fingers (being the distance between the extended thumb and the little finger)

The gartas or pits should be seven in number, and the circles should be three inches (parvasi e digits) in height. Flags and buntings of the same colour should be on all sides —9

In all the four directions of the pandal, arches of the twigs of the Aśvatha, Udumbara, Plakṣa and Vata trees, should be made —10

Then eight Brāhmaṇas, versed in the Vedas, should be employed as sacrificial priests (hotā), eight as warders and another eight as Jāpakas
—11

Note—Jāpaka=One who mutters prayers

The Brāhamana who has all the virtues in him, who is able to restrain his passions and knows the mantras, is calm and belongs to a good family, should be chosen to perform the functions of the priest (Purohita) —12

Water-pot and materials of sacrifice should be placed at each of the gartas (pits), after which a fan and a white chāmara should be placed on a big plate of copper —13.

 Afterwards, the family guru (Āchārya) should scatter on the ground the different kinds of boiled rice and barley for presentation to the Gods, after reciting the Vedic text — 14

The sacrificial pots should be made of the gleaming fig, measuring three cubits, with closed fist, in length, of the hand of the sacrificer. It is also auspicious to get them made of the size of the worshipper — 15

Twenty-five Ritvijas (the eight Hotas, eight Dvānapālas, eight Jāpakas and one Purukula), adorned in ornaments of gold, should be presented with golden ear-rings, armlets, rings and different kinds of cloths, without making any difference between them. But the family (Achārya) should be worshipped with double the number of things offered to the Ritvijas. After that, the worshipper should give away in charity the things liked by him the best, along with a bed-spread — 16 17

The turtle and the crocodile should be made of gold, the fish and the unvenomous water-snake should be of silver, the frog and the crab of copper, and the Sītumāra (purpose) fish of iron. All these things should be prepared from before, O Lord of men — 18

Then the worshipper (yajamān), bathed in the water of different herbs, according to the Vedic injunctions, by those Veda knowing priests, should enter the sacred pavilion, wearing a garland of white flowers, white garments and smeared with white sandal paste, through the western arch, in company of his consort, sons and grandsons, etc — 19-20

Then the learned should draw up a ring with powders of five colors by uttering auspicious sound, while the music of drums is playing — 21

Then a circle should be made, with sixteen spokes in it, and in the centre a figure of a beautiful lotus of four leaves should be made — 22

Afterwards, images of the planets and the regents of the world should be established in the proper directions on the different altars, after reciting the Vedic hymns (prescribed for the occasion) — 23

Then, images of the turtle and other water animals should be established in the middle, after reciting the hymns of Varuna (the God of waters), and afterwards images of the Deities, Brahmā, Siva and Viṣṇu, should be established — 24

After establishing the images of Ganeṣa, Lakaṇṭi and Ambikā, and for the peace of the Universe, the images of the group of the Bhūtās should be established — 25

Note—Bhūtās = Elements, demons

Then the pitchers full of water should be covered with clothes, incensed with the odour of flowers and fruits — 26.
After gaitlanding the waders and putting sandal paste on them, the Achārya priest should ask the waders (the Dvārapāḷas priests) by saying “pathadhivam” to chant the Veda — 27

In the east should be seated the Valhārīchas (the two priests veised in the Rigveda), in the south the two Dvārapāḷas (learned in the Yajurveda), in the west the two Dvārapāḷas (learned in the Śāmveda), and in the north, similarly, the two Dvārapāḷas (learned in the Atharva-Veda).—28

The worshipper should seat himself on the south side, facing the north and the Āchārya should ask the eight (Hott) priests “Yajadhiram” to commence the sacrifice, and to the skilful Jāpakas he should say “tāthadhivam” (to sit down). Thus directing them, the Āchārya, veised in the sacred text, should sprinkle water silently round the fire without uttering any ritual formula — 29-30

Sacrificial fuel and clarified butter should be offered to the Fire, after reciting the hymns of Varūna, and the sacrificing priests should also be made to do the same all round — 31

Afterwards, according to the prescribed rites, offerings should be made to the planets, Indra, Ṛṣīva, Maṅgala, Lokāpalas, and Viśvakarmā — 32

Then the knowers of the Rigveda, seated in the east, should separately mutter the formulae of Itāṁsūkta, Rudrasūkta, the auspicious Pāvamānasūkta, and Pūrvasūkta, in the same way the Dvārapāḷas, learned in the Yajurveda, seated in the south, should separately mutter the formulae of India, Rudra, Soma, Kūrmāṇḍa, Fire (Jātavedas), and the Sun — 33-34

Similarly, the Dvārapāḷas, the choristers of the Śāmveda, seated in the west, should chant the hymns of Varāya, Pūrvasūkta, Suvaṇa, Itudra, Sāmpitā, Šaśiva, Pañchnādhana, Gāyatrīsūkta, Jyestha Śāma, Vāmadevya, Brhiṇataśāma, Rāmaṇa, Rathantara, Kānya, Gavāṁ Vratam, Rāk-soghaṇa and Vayyas — 35-36

Afterwards, the learned (Dvārapāḷas) in the Atharva Veda, seated in the north, meditating on Varūna, should devoutly mutter the formulae of the Śāṅkukas and the Paṇtikṣas — 37

After performing the above-mentioned ceremonies on the first day, adhrivasana should be done, and then the earth of the following places, viz., Elephant ward, stable, well, lane, pool, cattle-shed, ant-hill, the place where four streets meet, should be put into the pitcher full of water (placed in the pandal) — 38

Note.—Adhrivasana =Scenting with perfumes (2) Preliminary consecration of an image, its invocation and worship by suitable mantras, before the commencement of a sacrifice, (3) Making a divinity assume its abode in an image.
CHAPTER LVIII

Then the worshipper should bathe in the water, incensed with the following things — the yellow pigment white mustard, sandal paste and resin together with panchagavya, five products of the cow) — 39

Having thus finished the preliminary rites performed with the utterance of great mantras, with regard to each ceremony, the worshipper should pass the night in sleep. In the morning, the worshipper should give away cows to the Brahmana, i.e. 100 cows or 68 or 50 or 30 or 25. — 40-41

Later on, on some auspicious day and hour, as calculated by the astrologer (Sinvatsana), the worshipper should give away after making her pass through the water of the pond, etc., to be consecrated, a cow decked with gold, to the Brahmana versed in the Samaveda, after chanting the text of the Vedas accompanied with music — 42-43

Afterwards, the worshipper should put, five different kinds of gems on a plate of gold, and give away to the Brahmana, and should place the alligator, fish, &c., in a pond. Then he should worship the above-mentioned cow standing in water, held by the Brahmanas versed in all the four Vedas, with the Ganges water, curd and rice, and should afterwards make it swim in the water facing towards the north — 44-45

The cow should then be bathed by reciting the text of the Atharva Veda, such as punarāmeti, etc., as well as āpohiṣṭā, etc., and then the worshipper should return to the circle of priests. Then the tank should be worshipped and bali offerings should be made on four sides of it. Afterwards, homa sacrifice should be performed for four days — 46-47

At the end of these ceremonies the Chaturthi-Karma should be performed, when the worshipper should give daksinā to the Brahmanas, according to his means, and should mutter mantras of Varuna — 48.

Then the entire materials employed in the performance of the sacrifice, including the pandal, should be equally distributed to the Ritvijas, and the golden bedstead should be conferred on the chief priest — 49

Afterwards, the worshipper should feast either 1,000, 800, 50 or 20 Brahmanas, according to his means, which is the way of consecrating the tank, as described in the Purānas — 50

And, similarly, it has been laid down for the consecration of wells, pools, small tanks, &c — 51

As to the consecration of palaces, groves, lands and buildings, the ritual formulae are somewhat different from the consecration of tanks.
Lord Brahmā has prescribed these rites for the wealthy. Forty people, in less favourable circumstances, should follow the Ekāgni rites, without giving way to misery—52

The consecration of tanks in the rainy seasons and autumn begets the fruit of Agnistoma sacrifice, and of the Vajapeya and Atrāstra sacrifice in the seasons of Hemanta and Śūdra—53

Note—Agnistoma=a protracted ceremony, extending over several days in spring Vajapeya=a particular sacrifice. Hemanta=water season. Śūdra=spring season.

The consecration in the vernal season (Vasanta) begets the benefit of Ādvamedha sacrifice, and of the Rājyasya in the summer season—54

The Lord has said that one who performs the ceremonies mentioned above, with the mind purified by scriptures and with full faith in them, goes to the region of Śiva and resides in heaven for many ages—55

Afterwards that man goes and enjoys in higher regions, and remaining there for the full life of Brahmā, to the extent of two Parādhās, gets emancipation and enters into the highest stage with Viśnu. And all this he gets through the merit acquired by the performance of this ceremony—56

Here ends the fifty-eighth chapter dealing with the consecration of tanks, reservoirs, etc.

CHAPTER LIX

The Rsis—Śūta. Tell us in detail the rites which the wise should observe in dedicating and consecrating a tree, and also the region in which he would go after his death—1-2

Śūta—I shall explain to you, O Lord of the world, the rites of dedicating as well as those prescribed for the laying out groves. One should follow the rites, as dictated for the consecration of a tank, and should then plant the trees, the Rūṇjas, the pavilion and the Achkāyās should be arranged in the same way, and the Bhāhmanas should be adorned with sandal paste, &c—3-4

Afterwards, the trees should be bathed with the water, mingled with all the prescribed medicinal herbs, and then, girdling them, they should be wrapped with cloth—5

Then with a needle of gold, the Karnavedha ceremony should be performed on the tree and, similarly, with the same golden stick the eyes of the tree should be painted with black pigment—6

Note—Karnavedha—The piercing of the ear with needle to put on earring.
After that, seven or eight fruits made of gold should be placed on the altar.—7
The incense of the resin (guggul) is considered best on such an occasion. Copper pitchers, filled with water, should be placed and worshipped with cloth and incense, &c., after placing coin on them—8

Then the pitchers containing gold, &c., inside them, should be placed close to the trees and sacrifice should be made after which offerings should be made to India, Varaspati, Lokapālas, &c., according to the rites prescribed—9-10

After that a milch cow, covered with a piece of white cloth and wearing gold ornaments and having, her horns covered with gold, should be let loose between the trees planted, with her face turned towards the north. A milking vessel of bell-metal should also be included among other things to be given away with the cow—11

Then the trees should be watered with (the water contained in) the copper pitchers, after reciting the Mantras of the Rik, Yaju, and Śāma, addressed to Varuna, accompanied by music and song—12

Afterwards the worshipper should bathe with water, taken from the above pitchers, and wear white garments, and then with a peaceful mind should confer on the officiating priests the cows, the riches, bedsteads, sacred threads, bracelets, rings of gold, clothes, sandals, among other things, and feed them on milk for four days—13-14

Libations consisting of mustard, barley and black sesame and wood of bunia fanosā, should be offered in the Fire, and on the fourth day, festivities should be observed and Daksinā should be given to the Brahmans, according to the means of the worshipper—15

The worshipper should also give away with an easy mind other things which he likes, and should salute and dismiss the chief priest (Āchārya), after giving him twice as much as he gave to other officiating priests—16

The wise who observes these rites in dedicating the plantation of trees, obtains all his desires and attains to endless felicity.

One who plants even one tree, O King! according to the prescribed rites, resides in heaven for 30,000 years of India. The planter of trees, according to the prescribed rites, liberates the same number of his past and future manes and attains the highest perfection, and is never reborn on earth. One who hears or relates to others these prescribed ceremonies goes to the region of Brahmā and is venerated by the Devas—17-20

Here ends the fifty-ninth chapter describing the rites of dedicating trees and planting groves.
CHAPTER LX

The Lord Fish said—I shall now relate to you the Saubhāgya Śayana Viṣṇu (ordinance), the giver of all bliss which is known to the Paurāṇikas—1

When the regions Bhū, Bhuvah, Svāt and Mahā, &c., were consumed, then the good fortune of all creatures went and centred itself in the heart of the Lord Viṣṇu, in Vaiśvanātha heaven. Agnī, long time after, with the object of creating the world, O King, the plastic material, consisting of Pradhana (roots matter), and conscious souls called Parāsas, was enveloped with self-consciousness (ahākāra), when there arose a rivalry between Bṛhaspati and Kṛṣṇa, regarding the fashioning of the future world. Then (from then clashing wills), a terrifying flame of fire arose in the form of a linga (pillar), by the warmth of which the good luck of the world resting in the heart of Hari came out (in the form of perspiration)—2-4

That good fortune emerging from the heart of Viṣṇu, passed through the Intermediate plane (antarikṣa) before it could reach the earth in liquid form, and Daikṣa the wise son of Bṛhaspati, drank up this giver of beauty and loveliness—5-6

Thence Daikṣa got mighty power and great lusture, and the remainder of (the good luck) which reached the Earth was divided into eight parts. From them were produced the seven givers of prosperity to all men, namely (1) sugarcane, the Kings of all juices, (2) Nīpāra, common seed, (3) the cumin seed (Kālajāta), (4) the clarified butter (ghūṭā), (5) cow's milk (Kuśa), (6) saffron (Kusumbha), (7) safflower (Kumkuma). So also the common salt was produced as the eighth, and these are called saubhāgya Astakā, the eight blessings—7-9

That which was drunk by Daikṣa, the son of Bṛhaspati, the knower of Yoga, became his daughter, known as Sati (Pārvati). Parāvati, owing to Her matchless beauty, came to be known as Lalita, and that paragon of beauty was afterwards married by the Lord Śiva. The very Sati is called the Goddess who gives bliss (Saubhāgyamayi) and also prosperity and emancipation. Those men and women who worship Her with devotion may obtain everything—10-12

Manu said—O Lord! explain to me the ways of worshipping that sublime Goddess, the upholder of the Universe, and tell me completely the ritual of Her worship—13

The Lord Fish said—The devotee should bathe himself with sesame in the forenoon, on the third day of the lunar fortnight, in the month of Chaṭtra, during the vernal season, for, on that day, the Goddess was united to Śiva, the soul of the Universe, with marital rites. On that day, Śiva, along with His consort, Parvati, should be worshipped with flowers, fruits, incense, lamps, and offerings of foods, &c, and the image of Gauri should be bathed with Paśchimāvahya and scented waters, after which Gauri and Sāṅkara should be worshipped as follows—14-17

By pronouncing (1) वरदाः सम । तिहैि नामाः है the feet of the Devī should be worshipped, and those of Śiva should be worshipped with the mantra विहवश नमः विस्वायनमाः. Their ankles should be worshipped after pronouncing (2) वियवस नमः विस्वायनमाः and अवधि नमः जयावानमाः, after saluting Rudra with (3) विनुवस नमः त्रिवन्दायनमाः and the Goddess, with सर्जनी नमः विस्वायनमाः, their shanks should be worshipped. After saluting Gauri with (5) विष्णुवासि नमः रुद्रावराजि नमः, Śiva and with श्रीवासि नमः विस्वायनमाः, their knees should be worshipped. After saluting Śiva with (6) विश्वयवसि नमः हरिवेश्वरायनमाः and Gauri with वरदाः सम याराजे नमः (the giver of boons), the thighs should be worshipped—18-19.

Their waist should be worshipped, after saluting the goddess with (7) वरदाः सम इश्वरायनमाः I salute the goddess Isā. He should salute रामकुमार with रामकुमार नमः सांकरस्यायनमाः The abdomen should be worshipped by saying (8) वरदाः सम कोतवाले नमः I salute the goddess Kotavi, and by पूजिते नमः उलि नामाः I salute the wielder of the trident—20

The stomatch of the Goddess, after saying (9) वरदाः सम मंगलयः मानसमुख्याः, "I salute Mangalā (the giver of bliss), the stomatch of Śiva, after pronouncing वियवसि नमः विस्वायनमाः I salute śiva, the breasts of the Goddess, after saying (10) वरदाः सम इश्वरायनमाः I salute Isā, and of the God by saying वरदाः सम सर्वात्माने नमाः I salute the All Soul—21.

The throat of the Goddess, after saying (11) वरदाः सम वेदात्माने नमाः I salute the soul of the Vedas, the throat of the Goddess, after saying रुद्रायनमाः रुद्रात्माने I salute Rudrā, then hands, after pronouncing (12) विनुवसि नमः त्रिपुराघात्माः namah, "I salute the god, the destroyer of the demon Tripura, and the goddess with अनन्तायायनमाः I salute the Infinite"—22.

Their arms, after pronouncing (13) विनुवसि नमः त्रिपुराघात्माः namah "I salute the three eyed Hira, and the goddess by अलसकृष्णायनमाः, "I salute the beloved of the Lord," the ornaments, after saying (14) वैष्णवावात्माः namah "Saubhāgyabhāvanāya namah," then mouths, after reciting (15) विनुवसि नमः विस्वासवधायनमाः namah, for the goddess and विराजतमाः ब्राह्मणायनमाः, for the god—23.

The lips of the Goddess, the giver of prosperity, should be worshipped by reciting (16) विनुवसि नमः विस्वासवधायनमाः नमह and of the god by विनुवसि नमः विस्वायनमाः The cheeks of the Lord should be worshipped by saying (17) विनुवसि स्थानायनमाः namah and of the goddess by विनुवसि नमः चानात्माने नमह Chandramukheśvarāya namah—24.

The nose of the Lord should be worshipped by reciting (18) विनुवसि नमः अचाऩ्यायनमाः namah and of the goddess by विनुवसि नमः आसिंधायनमाः namah. The ey-brows of the Lord of the world should be worshipped by reciting (19) असिंधायनमाः namah and of the goddess by विनुवसि नमः लालितायायनमाः namah—25.

The tresses of Śiva, after reciting (20) वरदाः सम विस्वायनमाः, "I salute sarva," the destructor of Pura, the tresses of the hair of the Goddess, after saying भास्वयम् सवस वायुन नमस "I salute Vayu, the hair of the god," after reciting (21) िन ऋक्ष नमस वायुन नमस and of the goddess with the same mantra. The head of the goddess, after pronouncing, िन एक द्रव एक द्रव एक the eight blessings consisting of the following eight things: clarified butter (ghee) निर्देशत्सप निर्देशत्सप, cow's milk, honey, sugar, rice, sugar, salt and coriander seed. All these eight things are considered as herbs, and therefore their mixture is called नादश्वयम् नादश्वयम्. - 27 28

Note - The enumeration here is slightly different from that of Elora 9

After offering these things to Shiva and Parvati, the devotee should wash the horns of the cow in the night and drink the same and sleep on the floor - 29

Getting up in the morning, the devotee should bathe, and after turning his rosary, should offer clothes, garlands, ornaments, &c, to the Bhimana and to his Consort - 30

The devotee should get a pair of golden feet made and give them away along with the eight blessings to the Bhimana after invoking blessing of the Goddess Lalita, saying "पञ तं अत्र ललिता" - 31

Similarly, for a year, the worship should be performed according to the prescribed rites, on each third day of the moon, by those who desire all blessings - 32

The following special articles of diet and mantra of gift (Dana) should be observed from me. The devotee should drink the washing of the cow's horns in the month of Chhatri, eat cow dung in the month of Vastikha. The flower of Vindūra tree in the month of Jyanta, the leaves of the woodapple (Vulvaputra) in the month of Asvāha, curds in the month of Śārvī, the water sprinkled with the Kusa grass in the month of Bhūṣṇa Milk in Kāraka clarified butter, mixed with curd, in Kirtika, the cow's urine in Mārga, clarified butter in Pausa Black sesamum in Māgha, Pañcchagavya in Phālguṇa. At the time of giving away the gifts, the devotee should recite the following mantra, "ललिता, विजयी, विजयी, बुज्जिनी कुमाला, चवी, वासुदेवी, गाँवी, मंगला, कुमाला, सात, उमिः, be pleased." In other words, the devotee should in each month invoke the pleasure of the Goddess by reciting a fresh name out of the twelve names mentioned, viz., in Chhatri he should say, "Lalita be pleased," in Vastikha, "Vijayī be pleased," and so on - 33 37

He should offer the following varieties of flowers (one each month) at the time of worship—Mallikā, Asoka, Lotus, Kadamba, Ulpala, Malati, Kubjaka, Karabira, Bānam, Amlāna, Kuṭkuma and Sindhuvarā; or any of the following flowers, as procurable, should be offered, viz.—Jasmine, Safflower, Malati, Lotus and Karabira—38 40.

Married woman or maid, after devoutly worshipping Śiva, at the end of the ordinance, should give away a bedstead, along with all the necessary requisites—41

At the time of giving away the bedstead, the following things should also be placed on it and given away along with it—The golden images of Śiva and Pārvatī, the golden figures of ox and cow—42

Besides this, according to his means, the devotee should give to the Brāhmaṇas and their wives, clothes, grain, ornaments, cows, cash, and should not give way to niggardliness or doubt—43

One who observes this ordinance—Saubhāgyaśayana—achieves all his ends and emancipation. This ordinance had better be observed without any object of bearing fruits—44

One who observes this ordinance every month, begets good fortune, health, beauty, longevity, clothes, ornaments, etc., which last him for 9000000300 years. One who observes this ordinance for 12 years, 8 years, or 7 years, goes and enjoys in the region of Śiva, for three Kalpas—45-46

The married woman or the maid who keeps up this ordinance also attains the same benefits through the grace of the Goddess Lalitā—47.

One who hears or advises others to listen to the account of this ordinance, passes his days in heaven for a long time in the form of Vidyādhara—48

Cupid was the first to observe this ordinance, and Sahasrabāhu, the son of Kārtavirya, was the second to observe it, and afterwards it was kept up by Varuna and Nandi, and consequently this is considered so sacred in this world—49

Here ends the sixteenth chapter dealing with the observance called Saubhāgyaśayanaśrāta

CHAPTER LXI.

Nārada said.—Śiva! There are named the following seven regions of the Devas, viz.—Bhuḥ, Bhuvah, Svāḥ, Mahāḥ, Janāḥ, Tapaḥ, Satyam—1

How may mastery be obtained in succession over these lokās, and how one may obtain in this earth prosperity, beauty, long life and blessing. Please also explain to me how they become blessed with fortune, beauty and wealth—2
Śiva said — Formerly, a fearful fire was ablaze on this earth accompanied with a strong wind. The friction caused by the wind produced the fire for the destruction of the demons, at the command of Puruhāta (Indra) — 3.

That terrific fire reduced many demons to ashes, when Tārakācura, Kamalākṣa, Kāladandastra, Parāvasu, and Virāchana fled from their warfare with the Devas. — 4

They all plunged themselves into the waters of the sea and took up their abode there, where fire with the help of air could not consume them — 5.

Afterwards, the demons began to come out of the waters and persecute the Devas, men, sages and other living beings, and disappear again into the sea. — 6

In that way, the demons asserted their boldness for twelve thousand years and continued their campaign of persecuting the three worlds, for a period of five or seven years at a time, by taking shelter in the fortress of the ocean — 7.

Later on, Indra directed the fire and the wind to dry up the ocean in the following words — Dry up this receptacle of water quickly. — 8

"Because it shelters my foes They have taken their refuge in the home of Varuna It should therefore be dried up as quick as possible." — 9

Hearing that mandate of India, both fire and wind said to Him, the destroyer of Sambhara — "It would be a great sin to destroy the ocean. Because innumerable beings had made it their home, and the destruction of the ocean meant their annihilation along with it, therefore, we, O Purandara, cannot do it. Lacs and lacs of beings inhabit the ocean, within the space of every yojana. It was not meet for us to annihilate them. What fault have they done to be destroyed, O chief of the Devas" — 10-12

Hearing the speech of the fire and the wind, India became full of wrath. His eyes turned crimson red, and it appeared as if He was going to eat up both fire and wind. In his rage, he said — 13

"There is no question of Dharma or adharma where Immortals are concerned, and your glory is still more high O Agni and Vāyu! Since you have violated my injunction and have adopted the duties of the Manis not to injure any being, and since you have leaned towards the enemies who are devoid of religion and politics, losing sight of duty and Śāstra; therefore You, O fire, will now be born by assuming one body along with Maruta, among the mortals, in the form of a sage In that form of the sage Agastya, you will dry up the ocean, after which you will again come back to your Divine form"—14-17

After thus being cursed by Indra, both of them fell on the earth, where they were jointly born out of the pitcher by the seeds of Mitrā Vaunā and came to be known as Agastya—the younger brother of Vaśiṣṭha, and one of the most renowned ascetics—18-19

Nārada asked Śiva how Agastya became the brother of Vaśiṣṭha, and how Mitrā Varuṇa became his father, and how the sage Agastya was born out of the pitcher—20

Śiva said that, once upon a time Lord Viṣṇu, the son of Dharma, began to practise rigid asceticism on the summit of the Gandhamadāna mountain Indra being afraid of His austerities, sent a group of nymphs in company of the Vernal-season and Cupid to distract Him from His penances and destroy His austerities—21-22

The Lord Hari was not in any way moved by the songs and music, gestures and tones of the Cupid and the spring, nor was His mind attracted to external objects—23

Finding the Lord remaining firm, the agents of Indra began to shiver with fear, when the Lord, in order to further bewilder them, produced from His thigh a damsel of exquisite beauty, fascinating the dwellers of the three worlds—24

Seeing whom, all the Devas, along with Cupid and spring, became enamoured of her, when the Lord said to them, in the presence of the Apsaras—25.

"This is the nymph Urvāśī, O Deva¹ and I have created her to become the head of all Apsaras"—26

Then the God Mitrā called her, and asked her to enjoy with Him, which she accepted—27

Afterwards, the lotus-eyed Urvāśī, while moving in the sky slowly, was caught by Varuṇa, who slowly pulled her by her cloth, at which she told Him: "Your action is not proper. Because I have accepted Mitrā first, and consequently I cannot be your wife, O Varuṇa." Varuṇa told her, "Keep me at least in your favor and then go elsewhere."—28-29.

She replied.—"All right." When Mitrā heard this, he cursed her "You go down to the world of the mortals and be married to the son of moon, Budha, because you have followed the ways of a courtesan." Saying that, both Varuna and Mitra threw Their seed in a pitcher of water, out of which two sages Agastya and Visâtha came out—30-31

Once upon a time King Nimi was playing with women the game of dice, where Visâtha, the son of Brahmâ, chanced to go At that time the king did not show his respect to the sage, at which the latter got annoyed and cursed him to become bodyless, and the king also pronounced another curse on the sage—32-33

They both became bereft of reason, as it were, through the curse of each other, and went to Brahmâ, the Lord of the Universe, to remedy the effects of the curses—34

With the orders of Brahmâ, Nimi entered the eyes of the mankind, and this causes them to open their eyes, but when Nimi takes rest, they close their eyes, and hence this shutting and closing of the eyes is called winking or nîmaka. Visâtha, similarly, entered that pitcher of water and was born out of it, and after him the sage Agastya was born, of the same pitcher, of white colour, with four hands, sacred thread, kamândalu, and garland—35-36

The sage Agastya went to the Malaya mountain, along with his better-half, and began to practise rigid austerities, surrounded with a number of other sages, according to the rules of forest-dwellers, hermits—37

A long time after, the sage Agastya, seeing the world oppressed by the demon Târakâsura, drank the ocean—38

When Brahmâ, Varuna and Śiva went to grant him a boon and asked him to seek any boon he wished, Agastya said—"I wish to have the privilege of moving about in the Vimâna on the Daksinâchala mount, till a thousand Brahmâs come and go in turn for 25 crores of times, and those who worship me at the time of the appearance of my Vimâna, should be the monarch of all the seven realms, till the time of the re-establishment of fresh sovereignty in the seven climes"—38-41

Lord Śiva said —"It will be so," and afterwards all the Devas went back to their respective regions. It is therefore proper for every sensible man to give a libation of water (arga) to the sage Agastya—42

Nîrâdâ—"How should a libation of water be offered to the sage Agastya, be pleased to explain to me the ways of worshipping him"—43

The Lord said,—The learned should get up early in the morning, with the rising of Agastya, and bathe in water mixed with white sesame and should wear garland of white flowers and white clothes.—44.
And then a good pitcher, free from perforations, should be placed, after decorating it with flowers, cloths, and filled in with Pañcharatna, and having a pot, full of clarified butter, put on top of it—45

Note: Pañcharatna, Lit five gems. They are variously enumerated viz. '—

(1) नीले वट्रके इमोति पारारागवच मैकिके। प्रवाले वेति विना रंगवले मनिचियि॥

(2) सुक्ष्म राजस मुक राजास्ते प्रवाले। राजारंवक्षमार भारतम्॥

(3) कनक हारके गील पारारागवच मैकिकम्। पारारागवच मैकिकम्। पूर्व-पुरुष्मिः॥

Afterwards, a golden image, of the size of a thumb, with extensive arms and four heads, should be made and placed on top of the pitcher, and then, after filling it in with sapta-dhānya and decorating with cloth—46

Note: Sapta-dhānya seven grains

It should be given away to a Brāhmaṇa, along with a vessel of bell metal, rice, shell, and then the image of gold should be given away in charity, with the devotee’s face turned towards the south—47

The devotee, if he can afford it, should give away a milch cow, along with her calf, after getting her hoofs covered with silver, and horns covered with gold, and wearing a bell round her neck, to a Brāhmaṇa—48

The devotee should observe this rite for seven days from the rising of Agastya Some say that it should be observed for seventeen years—49

"O Thou, as white as Kāșa flower, O Thou born of Agni and Marut, O Thou son of Mitra and Vārūṇa, I salute Thee, born of a pitcher” The devotee worshipping like this with fruits and flowers, never gets aggrieved—50

Afterwards, homa sacrifice should be performed, without any desire of obtaining any fruits. The devotee should thus offer libation of water—51

The devotee offering a libation of water once, according to the rites prescribed, gets beauty and health, the one offering it twice gets a place in Bhuvana region, the one performing it thrice goes to heaven. In the same way, one who performs it seven times goes and enjoys in all the seven realms, one after the other, and the one who offers it during the whole of his lifetime, becomes united with Brahmā—52-53

One who hears, reads or relates to others this ordinance, goes to the clime of Viṣṇu, and is respected by the Devas there.—54

Here ends the sixty-first chapter dealing with the birth of Agastya and the method of giving arghya to him.
CHAPTER LXII

King Vaivasvata Manu said — Lord! pray tell me about a vrata (ordinance) that may be the giver of good luck, health, prosperity, emancipation, and everlasting fruit in the next world — I

Lord Matsya said — I shall relate to you what Śiva, the destroyer of Pura, said to Pārvati, in answer to a question put by her, while he was sitting on the beautiful peak of the Kailāsa. I shall explain to you now the ordinance which gives prosperity and emancipation, as enunciated by Him, in the course of a conversation on religious and pleasant subjects in which they were engaged — 2-3

Śiva said — Hear, O lady, attentively, the vow which gives endless merit, the best of vows, worthy of being followed by men and women. The devotee should put the tilaka mark on his forehead made with a paste of gōrchana, fresh urine of the cow, cowdung and sandal, mixing them with curds, after bathing well and rubbing white mustard on his body, in the month of Bhādra, Vaśākha or the holy Māṅgāśa (Agrahāyan and), on the third day of the bright fortnight. This is giver of auspiciousness and health, and is very much appreciated by the goddess Lalitā — 4-6

On every third day of the bright and the dark fortnights, the male devotees, with their minds controlled, should wear yellow garments, the married women red garments, the widows should put on ochre-coloured garments, and maidens should be clad in white. Afterwards, the devotee should bathe the goddess with pāñchagavya and milk, then with honey and then with water aromated with flowers and sandal. Then white flowers, various kinds of fruits, salt, raw-sugar, milk, clarified butter, white rice, sesameum, coriander and cumminseed should be offered to the goddess, and a libation of water should be made on the third days of the bright and dark fortnights with the following mantras — 7-10

The feet should be worshipped after reciting (1) "Varadāyai namah," (I salute the giver of boons), the ankles after reciting (2) "Śriyai namah," (I salute you Laksñī, the goddess of wealth), the legs after reciting (3) "Adokāyai namah," the knees, after reciting (4) "Pārvatyai namah," the hips, after reciting (5) "Māṅgala Kārtaṇai namah," "I salute the giver of happiness," the waist, after reciting (6), "Vamadevai namah," the stomach, after reciting (7) "Padmodāyai namah," the breast, after reciting (8) "Kāmaśriyai namah," the hands after reciting (9) "Saubhagyaśriyai namah," the arms and the mouth, after reciting (10) "Śriyai namah," the face after reciting (11) "Darpapa vāsinai namah," the cheeks after reciting (12) "Smaradāyai namah," the nose after reciting
(13) "Gaurīyai namah," the eyes after reciting (14) "Utpalāyai namah," the forehead and the tresnees, after reciting (15) "Tvṣṭyai namah," the head after reciting, (16) "Kātyāyaniyai namah"—11-14

The Goddesses Gaurī, &c., should be worshipped also after pronouncing the mantra नमो गौर्वे नमो विष्णुये नम: काशी नमः गौरी। ब्रम्हाविनाय ब्राह्मणेये नमः॥ "Salutations to Gauri, Dhiṣṇu, Kānti, Śrī, Hānabhā, Lalitā, and Vasūdevi." Then the devotee, having thus worshipped, according to rule, should draw in front of the goddess, the figure of a lotus with twelve petals, with the pericarp made of saffron—15-16.

The Goddess Gauri should be fixed on the Eastern petal, Aṣṭāpanā on the South-Eastern petal, Bhavānt on the Southern petal, Rudrānt on the South-Western petal, Saumyā on the Western petal, Madanavīśini on the North-Western petal, and after that Uma on the Northern petal, followed by the terrible Pātalā on the North-Eastern petal, in the Centre, in due order, should be placed, 1 Māṃsāṅga, 2 Matgala, 3 Kumuda, 4 Sati, and the Lord Rudra in the midst of all these goddesses, the goddess Lalitā on the pericarp of the lotus flower, the goddesses should be located with flowers, rice, and water by uttering the salutation, namah—17-19.

Afterwards, auspicious songs should be sung, conches blown, and the goddesses, adorned with red saudal, red cloth, red flowers, should be worshipped and the devotee should put red pigment and bathing powder on them after bathing them, for, red sindura and saffron are extremely agreeable to them—20.

The teacher (guru) should also be adored, with prescribed rites, because where the guru is left unadored, all the rites prove fruitless—21.

The Goddess Gauri should be worshipped with blue lotus, during the month of Bhādrapada, with red Bandhujiva flower in the month of Āśvin, with white lotus (Satapatra) during the month of Kārtika, with jasmine flowers in the month of Mārgaśīrṣa (Agrahāyana), with the yellow amaranth flower in the month of Pauṣa, with the white jasmine or safflower in the month of Māgha, and with the white jasmine or Sindhuvarā flowers in the month of Phālguna, with the Champaka and the Amoka flowers in the month of Chaitra, with Pāta flowers in the month of Vaṣṇu, with lotus flowers in the month of Jyeṣṭha, with fresh lotus during Āṣāṃha, with Kadamba and Malati flowers during Śrāvana—23-24.

The devotee should take the following things, one after the other, from the month of Bhādrapada—Cow’s urine, cowdung, cow’s milk, curds, clarified butter, the water of Kuda grass, the leaves of the wood-apple (bulva), the flowers of Calotropis gigantea (arka), barley (yava), the washing of the cow's horns, Puначagavya and Bael fruit, and offer these to the Goddess as Prāṇa. They should be taken one by one, viz., on the third day of Bhādrapada cow's urine, in the month of Āśvina cowdung, and so on —25–26.

In the same way, on every third day of the bright and dark fortnights, the devotee should, after adoring the God (Siva) with his consort, offer them clothes, garlands, flowers, sandal, etc. To a male God, a yellow garment should be offered and to a female goddess, saffron-colored dress —27.

The following things should also be given away to the Goddess — Nispava, cuminseed, salt, sugarcan, raw sugar, flowers, fruits, a lotus of gold, with these words: “Goddess! as Siva does not go anywhere where forsaking you, so you should save this devotee of yours through this mundane sea of troubles” —28–29.

The Goddesses Kumudā, Vimalā, Anantā, Bhavānī, Sudhā, Śiva, Lalitā, Kanalā, Gaurī, Satī, Rambhā, Pārvati should also be worshipped. The devotee should invoke the pleasure of the Goddess by reciting each of the names mentioned above, one by one, from Bhādrapada, viz. — “Kumudā Priyatām,” Kumudā be pleased and satisfied, and so on.

On the completion of the ordinance, a bedstead, along with a golden lotus, should be given away to the Brāhmana —30–31.

Every month, 24, 10, 8, 6 or 2 Brāhmanas, with their wives, should be adored by the devotee and by his consort —32.

After first giving Dakṣinā to the guru, it should be given to other Brāhmaṇas. This is what has been laid down for the observance of this ordinance—the giver of infinite benefit —33.

It is the destroyer of all sins, and the giver of good luck and health. It should not be missed through miserliness, for the man or the woman who exercises miserliness goes to the lower regions —34.

Women who are in the family way, maids, those in confinement due to delivery, and those who are ailing, should take their food at night (not keeping the full fast). If one is in her menses, and so cannot observe it through impurity, she should get it observed by others, according to the prescribed rites. She herself should observe continence —35.

One who observes this Trītiya, giver of endless fruit, with devotion, remains in the realm of Śiva for a hundred crore of Kalpas —36.

*This offering may be made also to a Brāhmana and his wife
CHAPTER LXIII.

Even the poor who observe it with devotion for three years, according to the prescribed rites, using flowers alone for worship, gets the same benefit — 37

The maid, the married woman or the widow observing it, also gets the same benefits through the grace of the Goddess Gauri — 38

One who reads or hears the relation of this Gauri Vrata or advises others to follow it, is honored by celestial beings and by the Devas and their consorts and the Kinnaras — 39

Here ends the sixty-second chapter dealing with Ananta-trityā-vrata

Note — All the above Goddesses are really manifestations of the same deity. The words Kumuda, etc., may be taken also as different names of one and the same Goddess for the purposes of worship in different months and tithis.

CHAPTER LXIII

The Lord Śiva said — I shall now describe to you another Trityā ordinance that washes off all the sins and is known as “Rasakalyāṇī trityā” by knowers of ancient rituals. In observing it the devotee should bathe in cow’s milk and sesame on the third day of the bright fortnight in the month of Māgha. The Goddess should be bathed with honey and the juice of sugarcane. The right hand side of the Goddess should be worshipped first and the left hand side afterwards, with the following mantras — 1-3

The feet and the ankle should be worshipped, after reciting (1) लिङ्गम् एस “I salute the Goddess Lalita,” the legs and the knees, after pronouncing (2) बल्मीकि एस Śāntyai namaḥ the thighs, after reciting (3) विद्वी “Śrīśyai namaḥ” — 4

Namabhavaniyam, Kaminyam, Kamaidevyam, Jagatpriyaym, should also be said.—11

The Goddess should be worshipped like this, and then the Brāhmaṇa and his wife should also be honoured and feasted with sweet food and drink.—12

A pitcher, full of water and decorated with a pair of white cloths, along with a golden lotus and flower-garlands and sandal, should be given away in charity to the Brāhmaṇa.—13

Afterwards, the devotee should say, O Kumudā Goddess! be pleased and accept this lavaṇavāta In this way, the Goddess should be worshipped each month The Goddess Kumudā becomes pleased with the devotee by the observance of this ordinance.—14

In the month of Māgha, salt should not be taken, raw sugar should be avoided in Phālguna, oil and mustard should be discarded in Chaitra, and honey and sweets should be avoided in Vaśākha.—15

In the month of Jaiśtha puddings should be avoided, cumin-seed should be discarded in Āśāda, milk in Śrāvana, curds in Bhādrapada.—16

Clarified butter in Āśvina, honey in Kārttika, coriander in Mārgaśirsha, sugar in Pausa.—17

On the completion of the ordinance, a Kamanḍalu, full of water, &c, along with a full vessel, should be given away in charity, each month, in the afternoon.—18

(1) White balls of sweet (Laddu), (2) mohanbhāga, pudding, (3) cake (purī), (4) gharika cake, (5) sweet cake, (6) sweet cake mixed with spices, (7) maṇḍaka, (8) milk, (9) vegetable, (10) curd rice, (11) inārīmartī, (12) and avokavaṭṭika Gojha, should be given, one by one, after putting them on the top of the Kamanḍalu in each month, &c, in Māgha, white balls of sweet should be given, in the next month mohanbhāga, and so on.—19-20

Kumudā, Maḍhavi, Gaurī, Rambhā, Bhadrā, Jayā, Śivā, Umā, Rati, Satt, Mangalā, Ratīlālā should be invoked, turn, by turn each month, beginning with Māgha, and say 'priyatām' The devotee should offer to the goddess the pāraṇa with panchagavya, and should observe a fast on each of the prescribed days; if he cannot keep the full fast, he might eat something in the night.—21-22
Again in the month of Māgha, sugar should be placed on the Kamanḍalu, and, after saying, “Goddess be pleased,” should be given away to a Brāhmaṇa in charity—the golden image of Pārvatī, of the size of an inch, after decorating it with the five gems, rosary, sacred thread, Kamanḍalu, the figure of the moon with four arms, white eyes and white clothes, a pair of white cows, decorated with gold and covered with white cloth, along with a milking vessel.—23-25

One who observes this Rasa Kalyantí Trītyā ordinance, becomes instantly liberated from sins and never remains grieved for 9000001000 years. One who gives away an image of Pārvatī, with a golden lotus, each month, gets the benefit of performing a thousand agniṣṭoma sacrifices.—26-27

The married woman, or the maid, or the widow who observes this ordinance, derives the same benefit and gets good luck and health, and goes to the realm of Pārvatī.—28

One who reads or hears this, is liberated from the sins of the Kali Age and goes to the region of Pārvatī. One who relates this to others or induces others to observe this vrata, also becomes like the Lord of the Devas and moves about in aerial chariots.—29.

Here ends the sixty-third chapter describing Rāsakalyāṇiḥ-trītyā vrata

CHAPTER LXIV

Śiva said—Nārada! I shall now explain to you about the ordinance known as Ādrānandakarti trītyā, which is the destroyer of all sins.—1

On the third day of the bright fortnight, whenever the moon is in the mansion of any one of the following asterisms, Pārvāṣāḍhā (or Uttarāṣāḍhā), Rohiṇi, Mrīgaśirā, Hastā or Mūlā, the devotee should bathe in water mingled with kūra and incense.—2

Afterwards, he should wear a garland of white flowers, white raiments, and use white sandal paste, and then worship goddess Bhavānti, along with Her consort, Mahādeva, with white flowers and incense, and then seat them in their proper places, and recite the following mantras—3

Pārvatī’s feet should be worshipped, after reciting “Vāsudevyai namah,” and Śiva’s feet should be worshipped, after reciting “Śankarāya namah,” and their legs, after reciting “Śokavināśinyai namah and Anandāya namah,” respectively—4

Their hips, after reciting “Rambahāyai namah” for the goddess, and “Śivāya namah” for the God Śiva. The waist of the goddess, after reciting “Ādityāy namah,” and of the God by reciting “Śūlapānaye namah” — 5

The navel of the Goddess, after reciting “Mādhavāy namah,” and of the God Sambhu, by reciting “Bhavāya namah” The breast of the Goddess, after reciting “Ānandakārṇayā namah,” and of Sankara by Indudhārīnī namah” — 6

The mouth of the Goddess, after reciting “Vilāsīnī namah,” and the mouth of Śiva, after reciting “Vriṣesāya namah” The cheek of the Goddess, after reciting “Sasmeralīlīya namah,” and of the God by “Viśavavaktīya namah” — 8

Then the following prayer should be said to them — विनाशनी विनाशकी निवृत्तजी शिवो | अध्यात्म सरसे गौरवनिविकारे I salute Pārvati and Paramēśvara, the whole universe is whose body, mouth, hand and feet, the auspicious ones with gracious countenance — 11

Having worshipped in this way, he should make, according to rules, in front of the image of Śiva and Pārvati, pictures of lotus, etc., with various coloured powders. He should also make pictures of conch, quoit, flags, tridents (svastika, gada) and chāmara. As many grains of the coloured powder as fall on the ground, the devotee remains for the same number of thousands of years in the realm of Śiva — 12-13

For four months, in the dark as well as in the bright fortnight, the devotee should give away to the Brāhmaṇas four kamaṇḍalus full of water, grain and gold, and having a vessel of clarified butter and gold out of them — 14

Then, for another four months, the 4 kamaṇḍalus should be given away, after placing 4 pots of barley meal (Saktu), along with a vessel, full of sesame on top of them, and after that, for another four months, 4 pots fo

sesamum should be placed on top of the kamandalus and for one year from the month of Mārgaśira on the tritiyā tithi the devotee should offer the following eatables to the deities, one in each month (1) Incense with water (2) flower, (3) sandal and water, (4) saffron and water, (5) curd, (6) unboiled milk (7) washing of the cow's horns, (8) water and flour, (9) water mixed with powdered kūśtha (a kind of plant, called Costus speciosus), (10) Andropogon Vurnicatus, (11) water mixed with powdered barley, (12) cuminseed, sesamum and water — 15-18

In the worship of this Goddess, white flowers are said to be the best, and at the time of giving away dāna (presents to the Brāhmaṇas) the following mantra should be uttered — 19

"O Goddess Gaurī, be pleased, O Goddess Maṅgalā, the giver of happiness, liberate me from sins, O Goddess Lalitā, promote my good luck, O Bhavānī, fulfil all my desires " — 20

After a year, the devotee should give away to the Brāhmaṇa and his wife, after saying, “O Gaurī, be pleased with me” the following things pitchers, full of salt and raw sugar, natron, sandal, cloth (netra patta), lotus, along with gold, the images of Śiva and Pārvatī made in gold, sugar-cane, cotton and bedstead, along with mattress and pillows — 21-22

One who observes this ordinance, called Ārdranandakaritrītyā, goes to the region of Śiva and attains healthy longevity, wealth and happiness in this world, and never gets grief or woe — 23-24

Married women, or maidens, or widows also, through the grace of the Goddess, attain the same benefits — 25

The person, acquainted with the rites, duly observing this ordinance, goes to the realm of the Goddess Pārvatī — 26

One, who hears or relates this ordinance to others, goes to the region of Indra, and is venerated by the Gandharvas for three ages — 27.

The woman, whose husband is alive, and the widow, who observes this ordinance, attain unbounded happiness in their houses, and in the end goes to the region of Pārvatī, along with her husband, and the widow rejoins her husband there — 29

Here ends the sixty-fourth chapter dealing with Ārdranandakaritrītyāvāra

CHAPTE R LXV

Śiva said — I shall now explain to you about the Aksayatrītyā (giver of all desires) vrata, on which day the performance of charity, sacrifice or Japa gives inexhaustible benefit to the devotee — 1.
One who keeps a fast on the third day of bright fortnight, in the month of Vaśākha, derives inexhaustible fruit of all his good deeds—2

If the asterism Kṛttikā happens to fall on that day, it becomes still more sacred, and charity, sacrifice or yāpa performed then, begets inexhaustible benefits—3

The progeny of the devotee will be unlimited and her good deeds will have no end, since Viṣṇu is worshipped on that day with Aksata, it is called Aksaya tritiyā. On that day, the devotee should bathe in water mixed with unhusked rice (Aksata). He should also offer unhusked rice to Viṣṇu and to the Brāhmaṇas, or well-made barley meal (Saktu) should be offered to the Brāhmaṇas as well as taken by the devotee himself. The devotee who does this gets everlasting benefit—4-5

One who keeps up, according to rules, this tritiyā ordinance even once, begets the benefit of having observed all the tritiyas, and one who keeps a complete fast on this tritiyā and worships Janaḍana, gets the benefit of having performed a Rājasūya sacrifice, and attains bliss—6-7

Here ends the sixty-fifth chapter, describing Aksaya Tritiyā

CHAPTER LXVI

Vaivasvata Manu asked—Lord! By what vrata does one get sweet speech, worldly prosperity, intelligence, skill in all arts and sciences, inseparable conjugal union, fast friendship and longevity? Pray explain all this to me—1-2

The Lord answered—King! you have put a very useful question to me. Now listen attentively to the description of Sarasvata ordinance, the mere recitation of which gives so much pleasure to the Goddess Sarasvati—3

The devotee should begin this vrata by adoring the Brāhmaṇas on the morning of the day which is most proper for the worship of the Goddess he usually worships—4

Or, the fast should be observed on a Sunday and the Brāhmaṇas fed with rice, cooked in milk and sugar, after consulting the stars and determining an auspicious hour for the feast—5

According to his means, the devotee should give away gold and cloth in charity, and should then worship Gāyatri with garlands of white flowers, and with white sandal, &c.—6

And then pray, "O Goddess! as Brahmā, the father of the universe, never live in the Brahmaloka separate from you, in the same way be pleased to give me boons — 7

"Goddess, the sacred Vedas, the Sāstras, the songs and the dances, &c., are not apart from you, let by your grace success attend me — 8

"O Goddess Sarasvati, protect me with your eightfold body, viz., Lakṣmi, Medhā, Dharā, Pustī, Gaurī, Tusṭi, Prabhā and Matai — 9

Gāyatrī with a Vīṇā (a kind of harp), a rosary of Akṣa, a Kamanḍulū and a book in each hand, should be worshipped with devotion, with white flowers and unhusked rice, &c. The pious devotee should, then in silence, take his meals, morning and evening, without speaking a word at the time. He should worship the Brahmavāstini (Gāyatrī), on the fifth day of both the fortnights. He should also offer her a quantity of (Prastha) measure of rice, placed in a vessel and full of clarified butter and milk and gold, by invoking her in the following words — "Gāyatrī, be pleased with these" — 10-11

The devotee, following this rite, should observe the vow of silence in the evening, and should have in the daytime no meal, till 13 months are over — 12

On the completion of the ordinance (vrata), the devotee should take white rice, and, before doing so, should feed a Brāhmaṇa and give him a couple of clothes — 13

Then he should give away, in honour of the Goddess, the flags, bells, a silver-eyed milch cow, sandal, a pair of clothes, and a crest jewel. Afterwards, the preceptor should be worshipped with devotion, with garlands, cloths and sandal paste, without giving way to miserliness — 14-15

One who worships Sarasvati in this way, becomes learned, wealthy and gets a melodious voice. Besides this, he goes to the region of Brahmā through the grace of the Goddess. The women folk, observing this ordinance, too, get the same benefit. Such devotees reside in the Brahmaloaka for three Ayuta Kalpas — 16-17

One who reads or hears this, goes and enjoys in the region of Vidyādhara, for three Kalpas — 18

Here ends the sixty-sixth chapter describing the Sārdevata Vrata

CHAPTER LXVII

Manu said — Lord! Knower of the rites, the mantras and of the things to be given away in charity at the time of solar and lunar eclipses, I wish to hear from you the method of bathing at those times — 1
The Lord said — When the eclipse takes place, at the time when the sun or the moon is in that particular sign of the zodiac under which a person is born, it is necessary that he should bathe in water mixed with herbs, according to the prescribed rituals, as mentioned below. When there is a lunar eclipse, the devotee should get blessings invoked by Brahmansas and worship four of them with white flowers and sandal paste, and place four flawless pitchers, full of water and herbs, before the commencement of the eclipse, and consider these pitchers as representing oceans — 2-4.

Then the Devas should be invoked, after putting the following things in the pitchers — The earth of the elephant, ward of the stable, of the chariot-house (or, road), of the anthill, of the tank, of the confluence of two rivers, of the cattle-yard and of the king’s gateway, as well as panchagavya, good and genuine pearls, gorōchana, lotus, conch-shell, pancharatna (five jewels), quartz (crystal), white sandal, Ganges water, mustard, andropogan muncatus, Kumudini (lotus), Rājadanta (ivory), and resin (guggul) — 5-7.

The Devas should be invoked with the following mantras — “All the sacred places, seas, rivers, tanks, rivulets, come here to wash off the sins of the devotee — May the God India, the wielder of the thunderbolt, known as sovereign of the Ādityas, and having thousand eyes, come and remove my suffering caused by the (inauspicious) planet — May Agni, the mouth of the Devas, having seven flames, of immeasurable brightness, come and remove my suffering caused by the lunar eclipse — May Yama, the rider of the buffalo, representative of justice (Dharma), the witness of the deeds of all men, come and soothe my pain caused by the lunar eclipse — May the living god Varuna, the ruler of all waters, the rider of the alligator, and wielder of the noose, consisting of sea serpents, come and remove my suffering caused by the lunar eclipse — May Vāyu, who nourishes all creatures in the shape of vital breath, who loves black antelope, come and remove my suffering caused by the lunar eclipse — May Kuvera, the giver of wealth and master of riches, and armed with sword, trident, club, &c, come and drive away my sin caused by the lunar eclipse — May Śaṅkara, the rider of the bull and the wearer of the crescent and armed with the bow, called pināka, come and destroy the pain arising out of the lunar eclipse — May Brāhma, Viṣṇu and Arka as well as all mobile and immobile beings existing in the three worlds, come and burn up my sin” — 8-16.

After thus invoking all Devas and other beings, the devotee should sprinkle upon himself the water of those medicated pitchers which are adorned with white garlands and sandal paste, and then worship the Brāhmaṇas and the family Deity by reciting the mantras laid down in the Rig, Sāma and Yajur Vedas, and then give away a cow, along with cloth to the Brāhmaṇas —17

The mantras mentioned above, (in the verses 8-16,) should be written on a piece of cloth or on a lotus leaf, and, placed in an earthen dish with five jewels (gold, diamond sapphire, ruby and pearl, or gold, silver, coral, pearl and āgapatā) The Brāhmaṇas should place on the head of the devotee, the said dish and await the time of passing away of the eclipse At the time of the eclipse, the devotee should turn his face towards the east and worship his family God On the cessation of the eclipse, cows should be given away in charity, and then after a bath, the cloth, on which the above mantras are written, should be given away to the Brāhmaṇa —18-20

One who bathes according to these rites, after an eclipse, never gets any trouble through unlucky stars, and his family and kinsmen will also prosper —21

The person following the above rites with devotion, attains highest bliss, free from re-birth

At the time of a solar eclipse, the mantras mentioned above should be recited by substituting the word Śūrya (the Sun) in the place of Chandra or Moon The additional gift in the case of solar eclipse must consist of rubies A beautiful cow should be given away at the time of any eclipse (either solar or lunar), in honour of the moon —22-23

One who hears or causes others to hear about this ritual goes to the realm of Indra, after being liberated from all sins, and is glorified there —24

Here ends the sixty-seventh chapter dealing with the ritual of bathing, at the time of solar or lunar eclipse, by a person in whose zodiacal house of birth the eclipse takes place

CHAPTER LXVIII

Nāradā said —Lord! What should be done to restore the equilibrium of mind in times of distress? How is poverty to be got over? What should be done at the time of the ablation of a woman whose offspring do not survive? —

Lord said —The sins of the past fructify in one's present life Disease, misery, loss of dear ones, are only the results of past sins. —2
I shall now describe to you the rituals of bathing on the seventh day of a bright fortnight, that washes off all the sins, which causes prosperity, and destroys all human troubles. I shall also describe to you the rituals of the ablation of a woman, whose offspring do not survive, as well as for the longevity of old and diseased men as well as of young men. This ablation which is done according to special rites, drives away the uneasiness of the mind—3,5

In a future Varaha Kalpa, O King, there will be a Varavswata Manu also—6

Then in the 25th Satyayuga, of that Varavswata Manvantara, an illustrious and powerful king, Kutavinya, the promoter of the Haya-Haya dynasty will be born and thrive—7

That king will rule the world, consisting of seven continents for seventy thousand years, O Nārada, with great statesmanship—8

He will have one hundred sons who will all die as soon as born, owing to the curse of the sage Chyavana—9

Sometime after that the King Kutavinya will be blessed with a renowned son, named Sahasrabahu (thousand-armed). He will have beautiful eyes like elephant, will be lucky and possess all the auspicious marks of a king—10

His father, Kutavinya will worship the thousand-rayed Sun according to the Vedic hymns with fasts and vows, in order to ward off the sage's curse, so that the son may not die in infancy. He will then come to know of the rituals of this particular ablation from the God Sun, who will relate to the king the ways of the ordinance that would wash off all sins and allay all misfortunes—11,12

The God-Sun will say “King Kutavinya! I am very much pleased with your devotion and penances; there is no further need of them. I bless you that this son of yours will be long-lived”—13

I shall now explain to you about the rituals of ablation on the seventh day of a lunar fortnight, in order that all men may be benefited by it. The woman, whose offspring do not survive, ought to bathe on the seventh day of the lunar fortnight, or on the seventh month after the birth of the child—14

The worshipper should consult Brāhmans about his lucky stars and then fix some auspicious day for the rituals, avoiding the birth asterism of the child. Thus ritual applies to old men and to others suffering from illness, etc—15

According to the rites of the Ekāgni fire ceremony, the devotee should locate the Fire on an altar, plastered over with cow dung, and cook on that fire pudding (charu), with red rice and cow’s milk, and offer it to Sūrya and Rudra by reciting the mantras of Rudra and the God Sun —16.

An offering of clarified butter should also be poured into the fire, after reciting the seven Rik mantras of the Sun, and, similarly, he should offer to Rudra with hymn sacred to Rudra —17.

In this sacrifice, the fuel of Calotropis gigantea and Butea frondosa should be used. An offering of barley and black sesame should be made 108 times in this hōma.

In the same way, another 108 offerings of clarified butter should be made, after reciting Vyāhṛti mantras. Afterwards, the worshipper should bathe —18-19.

Four pitchers should be placed in four corners by a Brāhmaṇa versed in the Vedas, with a Kusa grass in his hand, and a fifth one should be placed in the centre, after filling it in with cards, uncooked rice, etc., reciting the seven Rik verses, and then Agni should be invoked —20-21.

The central pitcher, which must have no flaw in it, should also be filled in with the sacred water of the Śrīya tīrtha. All kinds of gems, and different kinds of herbs, pāṇcāgavya, pāṇchiraṇa, fruits and flowers, should be placed in the corner pitchers. Afterwards, the pitchers should be covered with cloth, and then located at their respective places —22.

The earth of the following places should also be put into those pitchers, along with the things mentioned above —stable, elephant yard, chariot house, anthill, confluence of two rivers, tank, cattle-fold, royal palace gate —23.

The Brāhmaṇa touching the central pitcher, which is surrounded by four other pitchers, each containing precious stones within them, should recite the Vedic mantras relating to the God Sun —24.

Seven Brāhmaṇa ladies, along with their husbands, should be worshipped with garlands, cloths, ornaments, etc., according to the means of the devotee. These women should have no bodily defect. Afterwards, the Brāhmaṇa women should perform the ablution ceremony of the woman whose children do not survive, and recite the following words —

‘May this child be long-lived, may this progeny of this woman be long-lived O Sun, Moon, planets, Stars, India, Devas, Lokapālas, Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Śiva and other groups of Devas, always protect this child O Mitra, O Saturn, O other Devas, O Agni, O Bālagraha, be pleased and never injure the child and his parents’ —25-28.

Note.—अङ्कः = A demon or any planetary influence that injures the child.
After this, the seven Brāhmaṇa women with their husbands and children and wearing white raiments, should be honoured along with the preceptor—29

Then the image of Dharmarāja, made in gold and placed on a copper vessel should be given away to the preceptor.—30

Afterwards with his mind free from jealousy and miserliness, gold, cloth, gems, clarified butter, milk, &c., should be given to the Brāhmaṇas.—31

The Brāhmaṇas should be fed first and then the devotee should take his meals. After meals, the preceptor should pronounce his blessings in the following words—"This child may live for a century and may always remain prosperous—32

"All his sins be instantly consumed in the submersible fire O Brahmā, Visnū, Śiva, Vasu, Svāmikārtika, Indra, Agni, protect this child from all calamities and bless him." The preceptor pronouncing the above blessings should be worshipped—33-34

Then a milch cow should be given away in charity to the preceptor who should then be dismissed with proper honours. Then the woman holding her child should salute the Sun and Śaṅkara and eat the remainder of the charū (Śākalya), and then pronounce "Ādityāya namah." This is the way which should be followed to restore the peace of mind caused by evil dreams or calamities, &c.—35-36

Note—सततम = The thing which is offered as a libation in the Fire at the time of sacrifice अभिव्रतम = I salute the sun

One who observes these rituals on a seventh day of a bright fortnight avoiding his birth-day and asterism, never comes to grief—37

The King Kṛitavīya, most renowned, got long life and ruled the world for a period of ten thousand years, owing to his having observed the above-mentioned rituals repeatedly—38

The deity Sūrya, having described this ablution called Saptamagnāna, and which is sacred, sanctifying and giver of long life, vanished then and there—39

This Saptamagnāna, which has been thus described, is most sacred and dispeller of all evils. It is the giver of great benefit to children—40

Health ought to be sought from the Sun, wealth from Agni, knowledge from Śiva, and emancipation from Jānārdana—41

This ritual is the destroyer of great sins and giver of happiness to the children, and the Munis say that one who hears about it attains success — 42

Here ends the sixty-eighth chapter describing the Saptamātrata for the longevity of infants

CHAPTER LXIX

The Lord said — In the past, during the Rathantara Kalpa, Brahmā asked Śiva on the summit of the Mandarāchala Mountain — 1

Brahmā said, “How one may with the performance of slight austerities get unending prosperity and health, O Lord of immortals? How may men attain emancipation by practising brief austerities? — 2

O, Mahādeva, nothing is unknown to thee. Through thy grace one knows everything. Pray, be pleased to explain to me how, by practising small austerities, one may get large reward.” — 3

The Lord Matyā said — On thus being asked by Brahmā, Śiva, the lord of Uma, the Soul of the universe, the creator of all worlds, began to explain the ordinance, so pleasant to the mind — 4

Śiva said — After this 23rd Rathantara Kalpa, will again follow Vārāha Kalpa. In that Kalpa, also, there will be 14 manvantaras. The seventh of these will be Vaiśvaswata manvantara. In the 28th Dvāpara yuga of the Vaiśvaswata manvantara will be born the great God, Vasudeva, Janārḍana. By the end of the same 28th Dvāpara age, Lord Visnu will manifest Himself in three different ways, to relieve the world of its burden — 5-7

He will manifest Himself as (1) Dvārpāyana Vyāsa, (2) Baladeva, (3) Śrīkṛṣṇa, and will bring relief to the world by crushing the pride of the wretches like Kaṃsa, etc — 8

The purī Dwārāvatī, which is now known as Kuḍāsthali, will become Dwārakā, and will be planned for the residence of Kṛṣṇa by Viśv-karmā, according to my instructions — 9

In the noble assemblage which will be attended in that sacred city, in company of their beautiful ladies, by Viśṇi, Yādava and the Kauravas, the Pāṇḍava Bhīma, the most illustrious of all assembled there, will, at the close of the paurānic discourses, ask Lord Kṛṣṇa, attended by the Devas and the Gandharvas, and He will then explain about the ordinance just now asked by you — 10-12

O Brahmā! after that Bhīmasena will follow the rites dictated by Lord Kṛṣṇa and will promulgate it in the world — 13
Bhimasena is called Vṛkodara, on account of his having Vṛka or wolf-like fire given by me in his stomach. His hunger will never be appeased—14.

*Note.—"Vṛkodara=A wolf in the stomach"

Bhima will be most wise, charitable, wealthy, handsome like Cupid, and will have the power of ten-thousand elephants—15.

The pious who are unable to suppress their hunger and keep up a full fast, should observe this ordinance, which is the best of all for them—16.

For the benefit of the pious, unable to suppress their hunger, Lord Vāsudeva, the Jagadguru, the soul of the universe, will explain the rituals relating to this ordinance, which will be the giver of the benefits of all the sacrifices, the destroyer of all sins and calamities, the giver of the highest prosperity, the most ancient of all the forms of ordinations and venerated by the Devas"—17-18.

*Note.—Now follows the explanation of the rituals by Lord Vāsudeva, which is another epithet of Kuṇḍa.

Vāsudeva said—The devotee who may not be able to fast on the eighth, fourteenth and twelfth day of a bright fortnight, or on any other prescribed day, attains unification with Viṣṇu, by keeping a fast on this sacred day only—19-20.

On the tenth day of the bright fortnight, in the month of Māgha, the devotee should bathe in water mixed with sesamum, after anointing his body with clarified butter—21.

Having thus worshipped Govinda, Śiva and Gaṇeśa should be worshipped with sandal, incense, flowers, and various kinds of viharas.
Then the devotee should take, in silence, with ghee, the porridge made of rice, sesamum and grain, cooked with cow’s milk, sugar, and walk a hundred steps—27-28

Afterwards, the devotee should brush his teeth with a stick of banyan or khadhi and then rinse his mouth, facing the east or the north, and holding a kusa in his hand. After sunset he should perform his sandhya and then utter "Om namo narnarayanaya namah, tvamaham saranangataha
I salute Narayana, I throw myself under your protection." On the Ekadasi day, I shall keep a fast and worship Narayana and keep a vigil at night, have a bath early in the morning (i.e., on the Dvadasa) and make an oblation of clarified butter to Fire. Puṣṭakākṣa, I shall, with mind controlled, eat rice, cooked with milk, with a few good Brahmins. May that be fulfilled by Thy grace, without any obstruction.'

With these words, he should sleep on the bare earth. Then, on daybreak, he should hear recitation from the Hitastery, and go and bathe in a river, after rubbing earth on his body. At this time, he should avoid the company of wicked persons—29-34

After that, he should perform his sandhya prayers and offer libations of water to the manes of his deceased ancestors, and then salute Hṛṣikedasa, the sole sovereign of the seven worlds. Then he should erect a pandal measuring ten or eleven hands, in front of his house—35-36

Note—Sandhya—The morning, noon and the evening prayer, performed by a twice-born

An altar, measuring four hands, should be made in the pandal, and a portal of the same measurement should be made—37

He should place there a pitcher of water and worship the Guardians of the quarters (Dhākṣa). There, the devotee should sit on a black deer skin, and over his head place the pitcher of water, after making a hole in its centre. He should allow the water to trickle, drop by drop on his head, and, in the same way, should allow a stream of milk to fall on the head of the symbol of Viṣṇu—38-39

There should be made a sacrificial pond, one hand deep, of the shape of a conical triangle and surrounded by three circles, and after that the Brāhmaṇas should be asked to make an offering of milk, clarified butter and sesamum to Lord Viṣṇu, after the rituals of Ekāgni, with mantras sacred to Viṣṇu, after which a stream of clarified butter, of half the size of a winnowing basket (Niṣpāva), should be poured into the fire as well as the charu, mixed with cow’s milk. Thirteen pitchers, full of water, should be placed. The mouths of these pitchers should be covered with plates of fig leaves containing different kinds of eatables and five jewels and covered with white cloths. Four Rigveda Brâhmanas should offer sacrifices to Fire, facing north — 40-43

Four Brâhmanas, well up in the Yajurveda, should recite the mantra sacred to Rudra. Another group of four Brâhmanas, versed in the Sâmaveda, should be asked to chant the hymns of the Sâmaveda, sacred to Viṣṇu, along with Atriya hymns — 44

The twelve Brâhmanas thus employed should be honoured with garlands of flowers, sandal paste, bed sheets, gold rings, gold sacred threads, gold bangles, and different kinds of cloths. Miseryness should not be exercised in this respect. That might should thus be passed in rejoicing, accompanied with singing and music — 45-46

Double of all these Dakinās should be given to the preceptor, and, O Bhūmasena," on the following morning thirteen quiet and good milch cows, with their horns covered with gold, hoofs with silver, covered with cloth and painted with sandal, should be given away in charity, along with milking pots of bell metal to Brâhmanas well fed with nice eatables — 47-49

Then the devotee should take his meal, without acid and salt. Afterwards, the Brâhmanas should be dismissed, after being satisfied with dainty dishes — 50

The devotee should follow the Brâhmanas for eight steps in company of his son, wife, etc., and should say "Kesava! the destroyer of all evils, be pleased! Siva is enthroned in the heart of Viṣṇu and the Viṣṇu in the heart of Siva. As I do not see any difference between the two, so there may be long life and prosperity to me" — 51-52

With these words, the devotee should send the pitchers, the cows, the bedding, the clothes, &c., to the house of the Brâhmanas — 53

If many beddings cannot be given away, then only one should be given away, with all necessary requisites — 54

One who wishes to acquire vast wealth should read the Purânas that day — 55

"O Bhūmasena! You should also keep up this ordinance (vrata), without pride and with purity of heart. I have dictated all this out of affection for thee, Bhima! This ordinance observed by you will be known after your name." The ordinance (vrata) of Bhūmasena dwādasa is the dispeller of all ills, and was known as Kalyāṇī in the past Kalpa. O Valiant one! You will be the first to observe this ordinance (vrata) during this Varāha Kalpa, having remembered all about it, you will be liberated from all sins and attain the rank of the Lord of Devas (Tridās). The public women of other Kalpas having observed this vratā, have become celestial nymphs (Apsārās). One dairy maid, of a previous Kalpa (Avira Kanya), having observed this vratā out of curiosity alone, has now become Urvā in the heaven of Indra. The daughter of a Vaisya became the daughter of Pulama and the queen of Indra, by virtue of this ordinance, and, similarly, Satyabhāma, the maid of that girl, has become My beloved"—56-60

The Sun also on account of having bathed in a thousand torrents on the Kalyāṇapādaśa, got His shining body, surrounded by halos, and has become the thousand-rayed Vivasvan—61

In former times, the same ordinance was observed by Mahendra and other gods, by the Vasus and by Asuras. No one, even with a thousand tongues, can adequately describe its effect—62

Krīṣṇa, the King of Yādavas, will describe this tithi which, when observed, dispels all the sins of the iron (Kali) age, and liberates all his men from the region of Yama, (Naraka)—63

One who devoutly hears about it or reads for the good of others, gets whatever he desires and even becomes unified with Brahma.—64.

What was in the former Kalpa, known as Kalyāṇ-pādaśa of the month of Māgha, will come to be known as Bhutmadpādaśa, when observed by Bhīmasena, the son of Pāṇḍu—65

Here ends the sixty-ninth chapter, describing the Bhutmadpādaśātoran.

CHAPTER LXX

Brahmā said—Śiva! I have heard of the efficacy of Varpa Ațrāma as well as of good conduct, as prescribed by the Dharma Śāstras. I am now desirous of hearing the practice and conduct of public women—1

Śiva said—There will be 16,000 wives of Krīṣṇa in the Yuga mentioned before. When once, in the spring time, those ladies, having decorated themselves with ornaments, would be drinking together on the banks of a pond studded with full-budded lotus flowers, dancing with the wind and resounding with the melodious notes of the cuckoo and musical tunes of the big black bee, they will see Lord Śāmba, beautiful like Cupid, having eyes handsome like those of a gazelle, and wearing the garlands of malati, passing by. They will cast on him amorous glances, their hearts being fired with lustful feelings and they being targets of the arrows of Cupid—26.
Lord Kṛṣṇa will come to know all that with his mental vision, and will curse them as follows: 'Because you cherished the desire of amorous pastime during my absence, all of you will be taken away by bandits.'—7

Then those ladies, overcome with grief on account of such a curse, will please Kṛṣṇa (by their prayers), when the Lord will say 'Dālβha Rīṣi of eternal soul, the favourite of the Brāhmaṇas, will teach you a vṛata, which will be the means of your liberation from the bondage and which will actually free you all. This vṛata will be of great benefit to futurity. With these words, the Lord of Dvārāvati left them.—8-10

Then, ages after, there will be a great slaughter, owing to the māsala affair, and Lord Kṛṣṇa, after relieving the universe of its great burden, will go to heaven. The Yudhāvas will have ceased to exist, and the ladies of Kṛṣṇa will be seized by robbers, a warrior, like Arjuna being defeated (and unable to protect them). Those robbers will take them to the seashore and enjoy with them there. When these ladies will bemoan their hard lot, the sage Dālβha, will appear before them. Those ladies will worship the sage by offering him aghṣa and salute him again and again. They will then, with tearful eyes, remember their past enjoyment, use of garlands and sandal paste, and think of their Lord, the unconquerable master of the universe, as well as of flowers and the beautiful city of Dwārakā, glittering with its riches and gems, and of their respective abodes therein, the Divine forms of their sons dwelling in that sacred city. Then they will put the following question to the sage, standing before him.—11-16

"Sage! We have all been forcibly defiled by these robbers. Now we have lost our Dharma and place ourselves at your mercy O, Seer! Pray explain, why we have been degraded to the status of concubines, we, who have been united with God. You have been ordained by the wise Kṛṣṇa to be our guide. Pray explain to us the duties of concubines." Thus questioned, the sage will say.—17-19

Dālβha said.—"Ladies! in the days gone by, all of you were sporting in the Mānasarovara lake, when Nārada chanced to go there. Then you were the daughters of Agni, in the form of nymphs. You did not salute the sage, but asked him how Nāriynā, the Lord of the universe, would be your husband. Nārada blessed you with the boon asked for, but also cursed you for not saluting him. He said that, by giving away two beddings, according to prescribed rites, on the twelfth day of the bright fortnight, in the months of Čaitra and Vaiśākha, you would get Kṛṣṇa as your husband in the next life."—20-23

And cursed you as follows:—"Because in your conceit of beauty and prosperity you have omitted to salute me before putting me this question, you will also be separated from Kṛṣṇa and will be lowered to the rank of public women, after being forcibly carried away by thieves. In consequence of the curses of Nārada and Kṛṣṇa you gave way to lustful feelings and have become prostitutes. Now listen to what I say—21-25

Once upon a time thousands and thousands of the demons (Dānavas, Asuras, Daityas and Rākṣasas, were killed in the war between the Devas and the demons Indra told their numberless widows and those women who were forcibly seized and enjoyed, to lead the life of prostitutes and remain devoted to the kings and the Devas—26-28

Indra continued, 'You should look upon, with equal eye, the kings your masters and on Śudra All of you will attain prosperity, according to your fate. You should satisfy those who would come to you with adequate sum of money to enjoy your company, even if they be poor. But you should not give pleasure to proud men. You should give away cow, land, grain and gold, according to your means, in charity on the sacred day of worshipping the Devas or the ancestors. You should act as the Brahmāpas will say. In addition to this, I shall also tell you an ordinance (or vrata), which all of you should blindly practise.'—29-32

This ordinance has been held to be the best means of crossing unscathed the sea of the evils of life, by those learned in the Vedas. The women folk should bathe in the water mixed with several herbs, on a Sunday, when there falls Hasta, Puṣya or Pūrṇaṇaḥ in any month. They should then approach the God of Love and worship Pundarikākṣa, by reciting the names of Cupid, viz.—The feet of Viṣṇu, the God of the gods, should be worshipped with the words, "Kumāya namah," the legs with "Mohakārīname namah," the region of Cupid with "Kundapanaudhye namah," the waist with "Pṛti mate namah," the navel with "Sankhyasamudrīya namah," the stomach with "Nāmāya namah," the heart with "Hrudayāya namah," the breasts with "Aklādakārīne namah," the throat with "Utkanthāya namah," the mouth with Anandakārīne, namah," the left limbs with Puṣpadhanvāya namah," the right limbs with Puṣpadhanvāya namah, the head with "Mānasīya namah," the hair of the head with "Vilolāya namah," and all the body with "Sarvātmane namah."—33 38

The women folk should then worship the Lord, whose body is cupid himself, by offering Him incense, flowers, sandal and estables—41

Afterwards, the Brāhmaṇa well versed in the Vedānta who must be virtuous and free from bodily deformity, should be honoured with the offerings of incense, flowers, sandal—42

And a quantity (of the measure Prastha) of uncooked rice, along with a pot, full of clarified butter, should be given away to the same Brāhmaṇa, after saying, ‘Lord Mādhava, be pleased’—43

That Brāhmaṇa should be well fed and be devoutly look upon as cupid, for the sake of sexual enjoyment—44

Each and every desire of that Brāhmaṇa should be satisfied by the woman devotee. She should, with all heart and soul and with a smile on her face, yield herself up to him—45

This rite should be observed on every Sunday, and the devotee should give away the above-mentioned quantity of uncooked rice for a period of thirteen months, at the expiry of which, the same Brāhmaṇa should be given a full bedding, with all its requisites, viz—pillows, good sheets, dipa (lamp), a pair of shoes, umbrella, sandalas, a small piece of mattress to sit upon—46-48

Next, that Brāhmaṇa, with his wife, should be honoured with gold threads, gold rings, fine cloth, bangles, and with incense, garlands of flowers and sandal paste—49

The images of Cupid and Rati, seated on a plate of copper, placed on a vessel full of molasses, their eyes being of gold and they being well dressed, should be given away, along with a fine milk cow, a vessel of bell metal and a piece of sugar cane, by reciting the mantra of the following signification—50-51.

‘As I do not make any difference between Viṣṇu and Cupid, so O Lord Viṣṇu, be pleased to always fulfill my desires’—52

‘O Kaṭava! as the Goddess Lakaṇṭi never remains apart from you, in the same way make my body Your dwelling place’—53
CHAPTER LXXI

After that, the Brāhmaṇa, accepting the image of Cupid, should pronounce the following Vedic mantra 'Ka Idam Kasāt, &c.'—54

Then the Brāhmaṇa should be dismembered, after being circumambulated, and beddings and other things should be sent to the house of the Brāhmaṇa—55

Henceforth, any Brāhmaṇa coming to them for the sake of sexual enjoyment on a Sunday, should be respected and honoured—56

In this way, the good Brāhmaṇas should be kept satisfied for a period of thirteen months, but if they go abroad, their course of action will be different—57

If, with the consent of that Brāhmaṇa, another handsome person come to them, these women should, with love and affection and to the best of their ability, perform all the fifty-eight kinds of observances of Love, favourite of man and gods, which would lead to pregnancy and which is not harmful to their soul’s welfare—58-59

I have described to you this vṛata in detail, which, when always performed, never leads to the prostitutes to sin—60

I have fully related to you what Indra said to the women of the Daṇavas (demons) in ancient days—61

O, Women of beauty! This vṛata is the dispeller of all sins and gives innumerable benefits. I wish well of you hence you should do as I told you—62

She (the well-favoured), who follows this ordinance strictly, goes to the region of Madhava, and is honoured by the Devas and in the end obtains a place in the Viṣṇu-loka—68

The Lord said—"The sage Dvālābhaṇya, having thus taught those women how to observe this ordinance will go to his own place, and those women of divine origin will practise the vṛata, as directed"—64

Here ends the seventieth chapter describing Anantātmāsūra vṛata (Gift of cupid)

CHAPTER LXXI

Brahma said—"Lord be pleased to explain to me the ordinance, by the observance of which there may be no separation between husband and wife, nor should there be any grief, disaster or pain"—1

Lord said—Kesava always reposes in company with Laksmaṇ, in the ocean of milk, on the second day of the dark fortnight, in the month of Sṛāvaṇa—2
By worshipping Govinda on that day all the desires are fulfilled, and by giving away cows, land, gold &c., the devotee goes and resides in the region of Viṣṇu for a period of 700 Kalpas.—3.

The ordinance is known under the name of Aśānyāśanaśādviṭṭa, on which day Viṣṇu should be worshipped, according to the rituals and mantras mentioned hereafter.—4.

The devotee should pray:—“O, Śrīvatssudhārī, Śrīkānta, Śrīdhamana, Śripati, Avināśī, let the house-holder's life of mine which is the giver of yajvarga (dharma, artha and kāma) may never be destroyed.—5

O Puramottama! let there be no destruction of my Agni or Pitrṣṇa, nor let there be any separation between husband and wife.—6

Deva, as you never remain apart from your consort, Lākṣṇati, similarly, let there be no slovenlyness between me and my wife.—7

Madhusūdana! as your household is never bereft of the goddess Lākṣṇati, similarly, let not mine be devoid of my wife”.—8

After this prayer, the hymns of Viṣṇu should be sung in accompaniment of various kinds of musical instruments; if that may not be feasible, then the mere ringing of the bell is sufficient, for a bell is an embodiment of all musical instruments.—9

After thus worshipping Govinda, the devotee should have his meal at night, avoiding oil and salt and acida.—10

In the morning, the image of Lākṣṇati and Viṣṇu, candle, food grain, cloth, utensils, and bedstead should be given away.—11

A pair of sandals, shoes, umbrella, čāmara, mattress, white sheet should also be given away with the bedstead.—12

Pillows, bedding, fruits, ornaments, should also be given away, along with the bedstead, according to the means of the worshipper, without exercising jealousy and misgivings, to a Brāhmaṇa, who may be versed in the Vedas and be a devotee of Viṣṇu, having a large family and having no bodily defects.—13-14

At the time of giving away the bedstead, the Brāhmaṇa, along with his wife, should be seated on it, and the former should be given a vessel, full of nice catables.—15

The image of Viṣṇu should be given away to the Brāhmaṇa after placing it on a pitcher full of water.—16

A woman with a husband, or a widow, who keeps up this ordinance according to the prescribed rites, without raggardliness, goes to and resides in heaven. They, being always dutiful and free from sorrow and blessed with sons, cattle and wealth, always remain in company of their husband, without being separated so long as the sun, moon and stars remain in heaven —17-18

Their sons, cattle and wealth are never destroyed, and the devotee goes to the region of Viṣṇu where he resides for 77,000 kalpas —19

Here ends the seventy-first chapter describing the Aśunyaśayanavrata

CHAPTER LXXII

Śiva said —"Brahmā! Now listen to the ordinance that will be the giver of wealth, and will come in vogue at the end of future Dwāpara. It is in the form of a conversation between Yudhīṣṭhira and the sages, Pippalāda, etc"—1

"Yudhīṣṭhira, the pious, will go to Naimiṣāranya before the sage Pippalāda, and put this question to him"—2

Yudhīṣṭhira said —"O sage! How health, prosperity and firm faith in religion can be maintained, and how can unflinching devotion be centred in Śiva and Viṣṇu, and how may one be free from all bodily defects"—3

Śiva said —"Brahmā! I shall now tell you the reply of the sage Pippalāda to the queries of Yudhīṣṭhira"—4

Pippalāda said —"King! you have put a most useful question. I shall now tell you something about it." So saying, he will describe the Aṅgārvrata. About this, there is the following ancient story —5

There took place a dialogue between Viṣṇu and Bhārgava —6

Once upon a time, the mighty sage, Śukra, seeing Viṣṇu, the handsome, sixteen-years old son of Pribaḷāda, laughed. And saying, Śādhu, Śādhu, addressed him, "O mighty armed Viṣṇu! O prince! O may you be always prosperous!" Then Viṣṇu, the enemy of the Devas, wondering at the laughing of the sage, inquired —7-8

'O Brahmana! tell me the reason of your laughter without any apparent cause and why did you again say, Śādhu, Śādhu, to me —9'

Śukra said —"I laughed on the sudden remembrance of the glory of the Vrata (which you had the good luck of witnessing in your past life and which gave you this handsome form) —10

In ancient times, a drop of perspiration trickled down the forehead of Śiva at the time of His getting into rage to annihilate Dakṣa —11

That drop penetrated into all the seven lower regions and dried up all the seven oceans. Afterwards, out of the same drop, Viṣṇubhadra, with many a mouth and eyes emitting flashes of fire from them, was born. He was endowed with myriads of hands and feet, and destroyed the sacrifice of Dakṣa. This Earth-born Virabhadra destroyed the sacrifice of Dakṣa and then attempted to burn up the three worlds. Whereupon, Śiva intervened, when He saw Virabhadra was going to consume the universe, and made him abstain from his campaign of destruction—12-13

Śiva said —"Virabhadra! You have destroyed the sacrifice of Dakṣa, and now you should not consume the universe. Be calm. You will be prime in the mansion of auspicious planets, and people will worship you through my favour—14-15

"You will be known as Āṇgāraka (the planet Mars), the son of the Earth, and your form in the Divine region will be a peerless one in beauty—16

"On the fourth day of a bright fortnight, when it falls on a Tuesday, the people worshipping you will get everlasting beauty and prosperity and health"—17

Hearing such words of Śiva, that son of the Earth, instantly became placid and afterwards turned into a planet—18

"Some Śūdra was worshipping that planet Mars, and you saw the ceremony, on account of which you are so handsome and renowned, O you son of Prahlāda. You are known as Vīrōchana by the Devas and the Asuras, because you possess various (vi) far-reaching intelligence (Rochū), and hence you are called Vīrōchana (far-reaching light). I was astonished to see the great beauty possessed by you simply by your looking at the ceremony of Āṇgārakaviyāta, and consequently I greeted you with the words Śādhu, Śādhu, thinking of the great mahātmya of that vrata. When, by merely looking at that ceremony, one gets beauty and lordliness as yours, I do not know what would be the case if a man were to observe this ordinance"—19-22

"O Prince! You looked with faith at the ceremony of giving away the cows, &c., in charity, at the conclusion of the vrata performed in honour of Mars, the son of Earth, by a low-born despicable Śūdra, and consequently you have been given such a handsome form and are born in the royal family of Daityas"—23

Śiva said —"On hearing those words of Śukra, Vīrōchana was very much astonished and asked him"—24

Vīrōchana said —"O sage! I am eager to hear about the ordinance as well as about the charities witnessed by me in my previous life"—25
“Pray explain to me the glory and the rituals connected with that ordinance.” Hearing those words of Vīśeṣaṇa, Śukra, began to explain it in detail—26

Śukra said—O Dānava! if the 4th day of the bright fortnight fall on a Tuesday, the devotee should bathe after rubbing earth over his body, and then wear rubies—27

He should mutter the mantras, “Agnīpurudhā diva,” by turning his face towards the north. If the devotee be a Sudra, he should silently, without uttering any mantra, meditate over the form of Bhauma (Mars). The company of women should be avoided that day—28

At dusk the courtyard of the house should be plastered with cow dung and adorned with floral wreaths, and uncooked rice should be placed all round—29

Thereafter, worshipping Bhauma, a lotus of eight petals should be drawn in saffron. If saffron is not available, then it should be drawn by red-sandal—30

Four pitchers, full of eatables, should be placed, and uncooked rice and rubies should be placed in them—31

The pitchers should be located in the four corners, and fruits, flowers, incense, etc., should be placed over them—32

Then a milch cow, with her horns covered with gold, and hoofs with silver, should be given away to a Brāhmaṇa in charity, along with a milking vessel of bell metal, and her calf. So also should be given an ox, and the seven kinds of grains tied in seven different pieces of cloths—33

An image of the size of a thumb should be made in gold. Its four arms should be extensive. The image should be placed on a vessel of gold, and the vessel should be placed on raw sugar and clarified butter—34

Afterwards, all that should be given away in charity to a Brāhmaṇa, who is versed in the sacrificial rites, is able to restrain his passions, is calm and modest, is well-born and has a large family. It should never be given to a Brāhmaṇa, who is a hypocrite. Then the devotee should recite the following mantras, with his hands folded—35

‘O, Son of Earth, O blessed one, you have been born of the sweat drop of lord Śiva, I pray you for beauty and have taken shelter under you. Be pleased to accept this arghya, I salute you. Pray accept this libation of water’—36

Note—(The mantra in the original is this—

शूरिपुष्प महामाण स्वेषेन्द्रण पिनाकिनः।

रङ्गायं त्वा प्रपोष्टं गृहकांतं नमोऽस्तु से॥

28
The libation of water (arghya), mingled with red sandal, should be made by reciting the above mantras, and the Brahma should be worshipped with red sandal, red flowers, and red cloths, etc. — 37

By uttering the same mantra, a cow, with an ox, should be given away in charity in honour of Mars, and a bedstead, well-arranged with all its requisites, should also be given away — 38

All the nice things available or the things appreciated by the devotee wishing to acquire everlasting benefits, should be given away in charity to the Brahma — 39

After this, the Brahma should be circumambulated and dismissed, and the devotee should take his evening meal with clarified butter, avoiding salt and acid — 40

I shall now describe to you the benefits that accrue to the devotee by observing this Angarakaviyota for eight times or even four times with devotion — 41

He gets handsomeness, luck, and devotion to Siva and Vigna in all his lives, and becomes the king of the seven realms — 42

He lives for seven Kalpas in the clime of Siva after death, and, O Prince of the Daityas! You should also therefore perform this Viyota” — 43

Pippalada said — After thus describing the rituals, the sage Sukra went away and Vinochana, the Prince of the Daityas, afterwards kept this observance, according to the prescribed rites, and O King Yudhisthira! You should also keep it. For the knowers of Veda say that its fruit is inexhaustible — 44

Siva said — Hearing all this from the sage Pippalada, the King Yudhisthira, of the wonderful deeds and prowess, said — “Let it be so” He then performed this Viyota One who hears about it, after pondering over the words of Pippalada with attention, also gets the same benefit by the grace of the lord Mars — 45

Here ends the seventy-second chapter describing the Angarakaviyota

CHAPTER LXXIII

Pippalada said — “King! now listen to the rituals pertaining to the pacification of the malignant aspect of the planet Sukra (Venus) On the beginning of a journey or its end, or on the occasions of the appearance and the disappearance of Sukra, a vessel of silver, gold or bell metal should be made and filled in with white flowers, white cloth and uncooked rice.—1-2.

A silver image of Śukra should be made and given away to a Brāhmaṇa versed in the Sāmaveda, after decorating it with pearls and placing it on the top of the vessel.—3

At the time of giving away the image, the following mantra should be uttered —‘O, master of all realms, O, Bhūgurudana, O Kavi, salutations to you. Accept this arghya for the fulfillment of my desires.’ The arghya mantra is — 4

नमस्ते तत्त्रेष्मेक्ष नमस्ते भुगुरुदन् ।
कवेः सर्वदीर्घतुष्मेघ्ये गृहाणाः ये नमस्तुस्तुः ॥

The person who thus gives away all the things mentioned above, in charity, according to the aforementioned rites, when undertaking a journey, etc., at the time of the appearance of Śukra, goes to the region of Visnu, after getting all his desires fulfilled —5

The devotee should not take his meals until he has finished his worship of Śukra by offering him white flowers, fried cakes and cakes of urad pulse and things made of wheat and gram. The person who does so attains tīvarga (religious merit, wealth and enjoyments) —6

Yudhishthira, the worship of Bṛhaspati (Jupiter) has been described in the same way, to which now listen. An image of Bṛhaspati should be made in gold and placed in a golden vessel, after being dressed in yellow cloth. The devotee then should bathe in water mixed with sesame, or with water mixed with the juice of butera-frondosa or Panchagavya —7-8

He should then put on yellow raiments and paint his head with sandal mixed with saffron, and then pour libations of clarified butter in the fire. Then, after saluting Bṛhaspati, the image should be given away to a Brāhmaṇa, along with a cow —9

Bṛhaspati should thus be saluted —‘Salutations to Bṛhaspati, the giver of solace to those falling under the influence of evil stars’ —10—

O, son of Kunti! One who thus worships Bṛhaspati on a Sankrānta or on undertaking a journey or on other auspicious occasions, attains all his wishes —11

*Note — The pratīma mantra of Bṛhaspati is as follows —

नमस्ते ब्रह्मतत्त्वात् नाथ पाश्चते च पूज्यते ।
कृपयाईः पीठितानामस्तुताय नमस्ते नमः ॥
CHAPTER LXXIV

Bhāmā said — Lord Śiva! you are the One, who sees all beings safely through the ocean of the world, pray therefore describe some such ordinance, as may lead people to cross the sea of the world in safety and attain health, heaven and happiness.

Śiva said — Bhāmā! I shall describe to you the Sauta dharma, consisting of the following viatas (i) Kalyāṇa saptami (ii) Viśokasaptami So also (iii) Phala Saptami, the destroyer of sins and giver of great merit. Similarly, (iv) the sacred Saṅkarā Saptami (v) Kamala Saptami (vi) Maṇḍara Saptami, (vii) Subhā Saptami, the giver of auspiciousness. These are the givers of endless merit. All these have been respected by the Devas and the Rāṣṭras, and I shall describe their rituals to you, one by one, in due order.

When a Sunday falls on the 7th day of a bright fortnight, it is known as Kalyāṇa or Viṣṭaya Saptami. On that day the devotee should bathe in cow's milk, in the morning, and put on white clothes, and then sit facing the east and draw the picture of an eight-petalled lotus flower, made of uncooked rice powder. He should, then, draw a circle round that lotus, and in the centre of it draw its pericarp, with the same material. Then, on all sides of it, he should draw eight pictures of the Sun with flowers and rice. The devotee should put a pinch of uncooked rice on each petal of the lotus, after reciting the following mantras — " Tapanāya namah, Mārtanda-ya namah, Divākārāya namah, Vidyā-ṭre namah, Varunā-ya namah, Bhāskarāya namah Vīkramanāya namah, and Ravyya namah, respectively, beginning with the picture of the Sun on the Eastern petal, and then on those on the South Eastern, Southern, South Western, Western, North-Western, Northern, and, lastly, on the North-Eastern petals.

Note — A pinch of uncooked rice should be placed on each petal after reciting one name each time, until it is placed on each eight petals. vir — On the petal in the eastern direction by reciting Tapanāya namah, and so on.

At the commencement, as well as at the end, and so also in the middle, of placing rice, he should recite the Mantra Paramāt-mane namah. Then at the end, the God-Sun should be saluted.

The Sun should be worshipped on the altar by being offered white cloth, fruits, incense, flowers, sandal paste, eatables and raw sugar, along with salt, all of which should be given away in charity to Bhāmahnas.

Afterwards, good Bhāmahnas should be devoutly worshipped with raw sugar, clarified butter and milk, and then they should be given gold, placed on a dish, containing sesamum.
CHAPTER LXXV

Then the Brāhmanas should be dismissed with fees, after reciting the ‘vyāhriti’ mantras. The devotee should then go to sleep and then, after getting up in the morning, he should bathe and finish his japa (prayers) and take rice cooked in clarified butter and sugar in company of the Brāhmanas—13

After meals, the devotee should give away to the Brāhmanas, who may be free from hypocrisy, a pot full of clarified butter, and a piece of gold, along with a pitcher, full of water—14

At that time the devotee should say, “O, Adorable Sun, the Supreme Self, be pleased.” The worship of the Sun should thus be followed for a year, on the bright Saptami of every month, and in the 13th month, 13 cows, with their mouths covered with gold and bodies adorned with clothes and ornaments, should be given away—15-16

If one cannot afford 13 cows, he may give only one. The observer of this ordinance should not exercise miserliness and jealousy. Those who do so, go to hell—17

One who thus observes the Kalyāna Saptami ordinance, goes to the region of the Sun, after being liberated from all sins, and obtains long life, health and prosperity on this earth—18

This Saptami, which is the destroyer of all sins and venerated by the Devas, is known as Kalyāna Saptami, the remover of all evils—19

One who reads or hears about this kalyāna Saptami, the giver of endless merits, is freed from all sins on this earth—20

Here ends the seventy-fourth chapter describing the Kalyāna Saptami vrata

CHAPTER LXXV

Śiva said—O sage! I shall now tell you about the Visoka Saptami (the Sorrow-Destroying fast) the observance of which fast frees the devotee from all grief—1.

Note—Visoka—Free from grief

On the sixth day of the bright fortnight, in the month of Mâgha, the devotee, after brushing his teeth in the morning and rubbing the body with black sesamum, and bathing, should fast the whole day, and at night, again brushing his teeth, he should take kusa pudding (consisting of rice, sesamum and a pulse cooked in milk and eaten with ghee and without salt). Then go to bed as a Brahmachārī—2
On the following morning, after bathing and finishing his daily-prayer and so being pure, he should have a lotus made of gold, and worship it by pronouncing ‘Aikāya namah’—3

Note—Aikāya namah=Salutations to the Sun

The lotus should be worshipped with red kanera flowers and a piece of red cloth. The devotee should pray to the Sun in these words—‘O Āditya’ as this world becomes free from all grief at Thy rising, in the same way, let me also be free from sorrow, in all my lives, and may I have always firm faith in Thee’—4

Thus, having performed Pūjā on the sixth day of the bright fortnight, the Brahmans should be worshipped with devotion. The worshipper, after taking cow’s urine, should go to bed. Then, on the following morning, rising from his bed, bathing and finishing his daily prayers, he should offer food to the Brahmans, in a vessel containing raw sugar. Then the golden lotus should be given away to a Brahmana, along with a pair of red clothes mentioned above—5-6

On the Saptami (seventh) day, oil and salt should be avoided, and the devotee should observe a vow of silence and listen to some Purāna—7

The ordinance should then be continued on the seventh day of each fortnight, till the next month of Māgha—8

On the conclusion of the ordinance, a pitcher of water, along with a golden lotus, should be given away, and a bedstead, with all its requisites and a milch cow, should also be given away—9

One who keeps up the Viśoka Saptami ordinance, according to the rites mentioned above, without giving way to miserliness, attains bliss, and never gets any sorrow for a period of ten padmas, and is also free from disease. He also attains his wishes, and if he observes it without any desires, he becomes unified with Brahmā—10-12

One who reads, listens to, or relates this vrata of Viśoka Saptami, goes to the realm of India and never gets any sorrow—13

Here ends the seventy-fifth chapter dealing with Viśoka saptami vrata or the Sorrow-Destroying fast

CHAPTER LXXVI

Śiva said—“I shall now describe to you the Phala Saptami, (fruit-gift fast) the observance of which liberates the devotee from sins and leads him to heaven—1

* This ceremony relates to the saṣṭhi day
In the month of Mārgaṇā, on the seventh day of the bright fortnight, the devotee, after fasting, should give away a lotus of gold, along with sugar, to some Brāhmaṇa with a large family. A golden image of the Sun, weighing one pala in measure, should also be given away to a Brāhmaṇa in the afternoon, when the devotee should say, 'O Sun, be pleased on me.'—2-3

On the following day, that is, on Aṣṭami, the Brāhmaṇas should be worshipped with devotion and fed with milk and fruits, during that period of the day, so long as there is any portion of the Kṛṣṇa Saptami remaining, and on every seventh day of the dark fortnight, fruits should be given away in charity.—4

In the same way, any fruit made of gold, and a lotus, along with sugar, utensils, cloths and flowers should be given away on each seventh day of the dark and the bright fortnights in the month, for a full year.—5-6

The following names should be recited, one after the other, each month—Bhānu, Aka, Ravi, Brāhmaṇa, Sūrya, Sukra, Hari, Śiva, Śīmāna, Vibhāvasu, Tvasta, and Vaishnava.—7

Out of the names mentioned above, one name, turn by turn, should be recited monthly, on the seventh day of the dark or bright fortnight. The desire of obtaining any fruit of merit, by the observance of this vṛata, should be renounced by the devotee.—8

At the end of the ordinance, a Brāhmaṇa and his wife should be adored, and then cloth as well as a pitcher, full of sugar, along with a lotus of gold, should be given, and the following prayer should be offered—'O Ravi! as the wishes of your devotees never prove fruitless, so the attainment of endless fruits be mine, throughout my future seven lives.'—10

One who observes this Phala Saptami, the giver of endless fruits, being liberated from all his sins, goes to the realm of the sun. He is freed from the sins arising out of drinks, &c., whether committed in this or the next world. All that is destroyed, who observes this Phala Saptami fast. He who observes this Phala Saptami, becomes free from all diseases and liberates his past ancestors as well as his successors, for 21 generations from bondage. One who reads, hears or relates this to others, gets also prosperity.—11-14

Here ends the seventy-sixth chapter relating to Phala Saptami or the fast followed by the gift of fruits.
CHAPTER LXXVII

Siva said—"I shall now explain to you something about the Sarkari Saptant, (gift of sugar) the destroyer of sin, by the observance of which one gets longevity, prosperity and health —1

In the month of Varākha, on the seventh day of the bright fortnight, the devotee should bathe in water, mixed with white sesame, and then put on white sandal paste and a garland of white flowers —2

A lotus with its petals and pedicel, should be drawn on an altar with saffron, and flowers and incense should be put on it, after reciting 'Savitre namah' —3

Afterwards, a pitcher of water, with a vessel of sugar, should be placed on it. The pitcher should be covered with a piece of white cloth and white flowers, sandal paste, and gold should be put on it. Then the pūjā should be made with the following mantra —4

'O Pitcher, You are the Vedamaya, and, consequently, you are praised as knower of all the Vedas. You are like nectar to all, bring peace unto me.' —5

Note—Vedamaya=Full of all Vedas, Vedavid=The knower of the Vedas

Afterwards, the devotee should drink panchagavya and sleep on the floor, by the side of the pitchers, and should recite the Vedic mantras relating to the Sun and listen to the Purānas —6

After the lapse of a day and night, on the 8th day of the fortnight, the devotee should give away all the things to the Brāhmanas after performing his daily prayers —7

He should feed the Brāhmanas, according to his means, with sugar, clarified butter and rice cooked in milk and sugar, but should avoid oil and salt. He himself should take his meals in silence. The same rule should be observed each month for a year, after which a pitcher of water, with a vessel of sugar, a bedstead, with all its requisites, and a milch cow, and if means permit, then a house containing all the necessities of a householder's life as well as eatables, should be given away. Mischief should not be exercised, for it leads to sin. The devotee should, in addition to the things mentioned above, give away a horse of gold worth 1,000 Niskas, 100 Niskas, or 10 Niskas, or of even 5 Niskas, according to his means, by reciting the mantras pertaining to the Sun. —8-12

Note—One Niska is equivalent to Rs 4

The nectar fell from the mouth of the Sun, whilst He was quaffing it, out of which (Śali) rice, mūnga pulse and sugarcane were produced
CHAPTER LXXVIII

Sugarcane is the best of all these three, because out of it sugar is prepared. Its juice is just like nectar, consequently, an offering of sugar to Devas and Pitrás is dear to the Sun also. 13-14

This Sákhárā Saptami is said to give the same benefit as Advamedha sacrifice. It removes all diseases and makes the sons and the grandsons thrive. One who observes this fast with unflinching devotion, gets bliss. He passes his days for one Kalpa in heaven, and then attains emancipation. One who hears, listens, or reads about this, goes to the region of the Sun. One who advises others to observe this ordinance, is also venerated by Devas and Heavenly drusnaks, and passes his days in heaven. 15-17

Here ends the seventy-seventh chapter describing the Sákhárā Saptami or the fast followed by gift of sugar.

CHAPTER LXXVIII

Śiva said:—I shall now describe to you that Kamala Saptami viha, by the mere mention of which the God Sun becomes pleased —1

In the spring, on the 7th day of a bright fortnight, the devotee should bathe in water mixed with white mustard and should then make a golden lotus and place it in a golden vessel, full of sesamum. 2

The lotus should be covered with a sheet of clothes, and then the Lord Sun should be worshipped with incense, flowers, &c. The following mantras should be recited at the time of worship: 'Kamalabháṣa namah, Vidvadhárine namah, Jivákaráya namah', 'Prabhákaráya namah', and he should then give away the golden lotus in the evening, along with the pitcher of water adorning it, with ornaments, cloths and garlands, and then give it to a Bráhmana. So, also, according to his means, he may give away a milk cow after adorning her well. 3-5

On the following day, i.e., on the ashtami the Bráhmanas should be fed according to the means of the devotee, but he himself should not take flesh and oil. 6

In this way, the devotee, without giving way to miserliness, should observe the same rituals, on the 7th day of a bright fortnight each month. 7

On the conclusion of the ordinance, a bedstead along with the golden lotus, should be given away, and a cow with its horns plaited with gold as well as utensils, asana (seats) and candle sticks should also be given away.
along with other necessary articles. One, who observes this ordinance, according to the prescribed rites, becomes possessed of inexhaustible wealth and goes to the kingdom of the Sun —8-9

He also goes to all the seven lokas, in each kalpa, where he enjoys in the company of the nymphs and gets bliss. One who hears, sees, relates or observes this ordinance also becomes wealthy and goes to heaven, where he enjoys the company of Gandharvas and Vidyādhāras —10-11

Here ends the seventy-eighth chapter dealing with Kamala Saptami Vītara

CHAPTER LXXIX

Śiva said —I now relate to you about the Mandāra Saptami, the giver of all desires, the most excellent, and the destroyer of all sins —1

The devotee should take some light food on the fifth day of the bright fortnight in the month of Māgha, and, having arisen from his bed in the morning and brushing his teeth and bathing, should keep fast on that day viz., on the Śāthi day —2

That day he should honor a few Brāhmaṇas and feed them with delicious food at night. Mandāra prāṣāṇa should be offered to the Deva. On the following morning, that is, the saptami day, he should feed the Brāhmaṇas again, according to his means, after his morning ablutions. Then procure eight Mandāra flowers and prepare a golden image of the Sun carrying a lotus in his hand and place it in a copper-vessel containing sesamum, and prepare also an eight-petalled lotus and invoke the God Sun, thus —He should offer one mandāra flower on each petal —3-5

He should then salute the Sun and put some flowers and uncooked rice on the lotus leaf, in the Eastern direction by saying ‘Bhāskarāya namah’ in the South-East by saying ‘Śūryāya namah’ in the South, by saying ‘Ārkaṇa namah’ in the South-West, by saying ‘Ayānne namah,” in the West by saying —“Veda dhāmne namah,” in the North-West direction by saying “Chanda Bhānave namah,” in the North by saying “Puṣpe namah,” in the North-East by saying ‘Ānandāya namah’ —6-7

The devotee should place the image of the Male Puruṣa on the pericarp of the lotus, and after saying ‘Śāvātmane namah,’ white cloth should be put on the image, and entables, flowers, and fruits should be offered — 8

Then all these things should be given away to a Brāhmaṇa versed in the Vedas. He himself should take his meals, but then oil and salt should

*Mandāra is the name given to several species of plants, viz., Calotrope gigantea, Erythrina indica, and thorn-apple be avoided. He should observe the vow of silence while eating, and take his meals facing the East—9

This ordinance should be observed, according to the prescribed rites for a year, on the seventh day of a fortnight, each month, without giving way to miserliness—10

On the conclusion of the ordinance, the lotus of gold should be given away after being placed on a pitcher of water. One wishing to acquire prosperity, should give away a cow in addition to it—11

The following prayer should then be offered: 'I salute Mandarana, and Mandarabhavana, O Lord Sun! see me through this worldly ocean of troubles'—12

One who observes this Mandana Saptami fast in this way is freed from all sins and goes to heaven where he resides for a kalpa. This ordinance is like a torch that dispels all the sins like pitched darkness. One who keeps it up gets his desires fulfilled. One who reads or listens about this ordinance becomes freed from all sins—13-15

Here ends the seventy-ninth chapter dealing with Mandana Saptami vrata.

CHAPTER LXXX

Sri Bhagavan said—I shall now explain to you about the excellent Subha Saptami fasting, which frees the devotee from all diseases, sorrows and troubles—1

The devotee should observe this ordinance on the seventh day of the bright fortnight, in the month of Ashvina, after ablutions and morning prayers, when the Brahmana have done the svastivahana—2

A milch cow should be worshipped with incense, flowers and sandal paste and the devotee should say, 'O, One who has been born of the Sun and one who resides in the various climes, whose body is goodness itself, I salute Thee for the fulfilment of my desires'—3

After this, a quantity (of the Prastha measure) of sesame put in a vessel of copper, an ox of gold with incense, garland, molasses, various kinds of fruits, eatables and dishes made of milk and clarified butter, should be given away in the evening by reciting the mantra, "Arumâ Priyastâm"—4-5

The devotee should offer Paṁchagavyas as Prāśana. He should be free from all pride and sleep on the floor. On the following morning, he should get up and worship the Brāhmaṇas with devotion. Thus men should give away each month a couple of cloths, a golden ox and a golden cow, and, at the end of the year, sugarcane, molasses, bedding, pillows, utensils, and mattresses — 6-8

Afterwards, a quantity (of the Prashta measure) of sesame placed in a vessel of copper and a golden ox, should be given to a Brāhmaṇa vested in the Vedas, with the words, “Visvātmā Priyatām” — 9

One who keeps up this ordinance in this way becomes wealthy and renowned in each birth — 10

He is also honoured by the nymphs (i.e., Apsaras and Gandharvas), and resides in heaven as the Lord of Hosts (i.e., Gandas) till the end of the kalpa, after which he is born as a king — 11

Thousands of the sins accruing by the killing of Brāhmaṇas and by wilful abortion, are expiated by the reading of this sacred vrata of of Saptami — 12

One who reads this or hears it, even for a moment, or sees the vrata performed and things given away, is freed from all sins and becomes the Lord of the Vidyādhāras — 13

One who keeps up this Saptami vrata (ordinance), of sevenfold prescription, for a period of seven years, becomes the Lord of seven regions, turn by turn, after which he goes to the region of Viṣṇu and attains bliss there — 14

Here ends the eightieth chapter describing the Subha Saptami vrata

CHAPTER LXXXI

Manu asked — Lord! which is that ordinance, by the observance of which, separation from the dear ones ceases to be painful and which confers prosperity on the devotee and which saves men from the evils of this life — 1

The Lord said — The question put by you, O Manu! is beneficial to the world, and, owing to the sublimity of the subject-matter, is beyond the reach of heaven even, and, though kept secret from Suras and Asuras, now, I shall relate it to you on account of your intense devotion — 2

The Viśokadvādāst ordinance falls in the month of Āsvina. On the tenth day of the fortnight, the devotee should take some light food and commence the ordinance by observing the prescribed rites. — 3
CHAPTER LXXXI

On the Ekādaśi day, he should brush his teeth by turning his face towards the north or the east. Then he should worship the Lord Kesāva and the Goddess Lākṣmi, and fast the day “I shall take my meal consisting of many dishes next day.” With this thought, he should go to sleep, and, on getting up in the morning, he should bathe in Pañcagavya water, mixed with various medicines, and put on white clothes and garlands of white flowers. Afterwards, the worship of Lākṣmi and Nārāyana should be commenced with white lotus flowers — 4-5

The feet should be worshipped, after reciting ‘Viśokāya namah,’ the legs after reciting ‘Varmāyā namah,’ the knees after reciting ‘Śrīdāya namah,’ the thighs after reciting ‘Jaladāya namah,’ the private parts after reciting ‘Kandarāya namah,’ the waist after reciting ‘Mādhavāya namah,’ the stomach after reciting ‘Dāmodārāya namah,’ the ribs after reciting ‘Vipulāya namah,’ the navel after reciting ‘Padmanābhāya namah,’ the heart after reciting ‘Manmathāya namah,’ the breasts after reciting Śrīhariya namah,’ the hands after reciting ‘Madhujīte namah,’ the left arm after reciting ‘Chakrīne namah,’ the right arm after reciting ‘Gadīne namah,’ the throat after reciting ‘Vaikunthāya namah,’ the mouth after reciting ‘Yaṁyamukhya namah,’ the nose after reciting ‘Aśokamāhe namah,’ the eyes after reciting ‘Vāsudevāya namah,’ the forehead after reciting ‘Vāmanāya namah,’ the eye brows after reciting ‘Haraye namah,’ the locks of hair after reciting ‘Mādhavāya namah,’ the crown after reciting Viśvarūpīne namah,’ the head after reciting ‘Śārvātmane namah’ — 6-11

Thus worshipping Viṣṇu with sandal, fruits and flowers, an altar should be made on the ground after making a circle — 12

The altar should be a square in shape, and of the dimensions of a cubit, and should slant towards the north. It must be smooth and soft, surrounded by three small mud-walls — 13

The upper surface should be eight fingers high from the ground, and the mud-walls one finger high and two fingers thick — 14

[N B — One finger is a little less than one inch]

On it should be placed an image of Lākṣmi, made of river sand, and placed in a winnowing basket, and worshipped according to the rites hereafter mentioned — 15

Lākṣmi should be worshipped, after reciting the following mantras,

नमः दृष्ट्वे नमः शान्त्वे नमः लक्ष्मी नमः धिः भुजे ।
नमः दृष्ट्वे नमःसुप्रस्वे दृष्ट्वे हुष्ट्वे नमः भुजे ॥
Devyai namah, Sāntyai namah, Lakṣmyai namah, Śriyai namah, Pustya namah, Tuṣṭya namah Vṛṣtyai namah, Hriyai namah —16

The devotee should also say, 'O Viṣṇu goddess, destroy all grief, grant some boon, give wealth, and fulfill all desires' —17

After this, he should wrap up the winnowing basket in a piece of cloth, and worship Lakṣmi with fruits and various kinds of clothes and with a golden lotus —18

The devotee should drink the water purified by the Kuḍā grass, and carry on music and singing throughout the night, and, on the lapse of three quarters of the night thus past in vigil and prayer, the devotee should sleep in the last quarter, and then waking up, go and worship them, along with three couples of Brāhmaṇas and Brāhmaṇinis according to his means: if not three, at least, one couple should be worshipped. He should offer them sandal, flowers and clothes as well as bedsteads, with the mantra, "Namastu Jalaśayine". The night thus passed with watching, music and songs, the devotee, after bithing in the morning, should worship the Brāhmaṇa couples, as mentioned above. They should be fed according to his means, free from niggardliness. And then, after taking his meals, he should pass that day in listening to the Purāṇas —19-23

The devotee should observe the same rituals every month till the ordinance is over, after which, he should give away a bedstead, along with the gudha dhenu* (sugar cow), pillows, bedding, sheets and cloths —24

Then he should say, 'O Lord! as Lakṣmi does not forsake you, similarly, beauty, health, and pleasure may always be mine' —25

'As Lakṣmi does not go without Viṣṇu, let there always be happiness with me. Let my devotion always remain centred in Viṣṇu' —26

With the above words, the devotee should give away the bedstead, and gudha dhenu, the image of Lakṣmi and the winnowing basket, to the Brāhmaṇa —27

The following flowers are always desirable in this form of worship viz., 'Lotus, Kanera, Bāna, fresh Saffron flower, Ketaki, Sindhuvala, Jasmine, Gaḍhpatala, Kadamba, Kubjaka and Champaka —28

Here ends the eighty-first chapter describing the Vrata called Viṣoka 'Doddasas'

* Gudha dhenu has been explained in the next chapter
CHAPTER LXXXII

Manu asked—O, Lord of the Universe! pray tell me about Gudadhenu. How should it be made, and by what mantra should it be given away?—1

The Lord Matsya answered—O King! I shall explain to you the form of Gudadhenu, and the fruits of its gift, as well as the mantras, according to which it should be given away. It is the destroyer of all sins.—2

The floor should be plastered with cowdung, the Kusa grass should be spread on all sides, and then over it should be placed a black antelope skin of four hands in length with its neck towards the east. This is meant for the cow. A smaller deer-skin should be spread on the floor, near the first, and it should be meant for her calf. The cow should be made to face the east and the calf the north.—3-4

The image of Gudadhenu (Sugar cow) should be made of four maunds of raw sugar, and the calf of one maund of raw sugar, which is considered to be the first class, the image of the cow made of two maunds and the calf of half a maund of raw sugar is considered to be the next best. The image of the cow made of one maund and the calf of ten seers of raw sugar is considered to be the last best. The devotee is to choose between the three, according to his means.—5-6

The mouths of the images of the cow and the calf should be made of clarified butter, and both should be covered with five silk cloths. Their ears should be made of mother-of-pearl and legs of sugarcane and the eyes of good pearls.—7

The tendons, nerves, &c., of these images should be made of white threads, white blankets to represent their dewlaps, cheeks and backs should be made of copper, the white hair trimmed from a chamar (antelope hair) should represent the hair of the body.—8

The eyebrows should be made of corals, the udders of fresh butter, the tail of silk cloth, a vessel of bell metal should be placed to represent the milking vessel, the horns should be made of gold, the pupils of the eyes of sapphire, the hoofs of silver, the scented fruits in place of the nostrils. After thus making the images of the cow and the calf, the devotee should worship them with incense, lights, &c., with the following prayer.—9-10

'Godess, who is inherent in all beings, in the form of Laksmi and who also resides among the Devas, let that Goddess, in the symbol of a cow, may confer peace upon me. The Goddess who is known as Rudra-' the favourite of the Lord Śiva, in whose form she resides, may that very same Goddess in the symbol of the cow, dispel all my sins. The Goddess, who reclines on the breast of Viṣṇu, as Lakṣmī, who is present in the form of Śvāhā in the fire, and is called the power and the energy of the sun and the moon and Indra, the same Goddess, in the symbol of the cow may grant me wealth. She who is the Lakṣmī (wealth) of Brahmā, Kuvera, Lokapāla may grant me boons in the symbol of the cow. She who is Śvāhā, of the highest Purāṇa, is Śvāhā of the Devās, may she remove all my sins and bring me peace in the symbol of the cow. —11-15

The gudadhenu, thus invoked by the above prayer should be given away to the Brahmans. The same ritual is observed in giving away all sorts of cows. —16

O King! there are ten sorts of cows that are said to remove all sins, and I shall enumerate them to you. —17

The symbols of cows made of liquid should be placed in pitchers filled to the brim, and the symbols of the cow made of other substances should be arranged in a heap. In this matter of gift, some also like to make a symbol of the cow of gold. —20

Some sages have also said that the symbol of the cow made of fresh butter and ghee should be given away. The above-mentioned rituals should be observed in giving away all sorts of cows (described above). —21

The devotee should give away, with faith, these cows to attain prosperity and emancipation, on occasions of different festivals, accompanied with the invocation of mātrī. I have already explained in connection with this gūḍa dhenu gift, the gift of other symbolical cows. These gifts are destroyers of all sins, the givers of the fruits of innumerable sacrifices, and are very auspicious. —22-23

Of all the ordinances the one of Aḍokadvādaśi is the best, and the gift of gūḍa dhenu, as being an ingredient of that vrata, is, therefore, praised as the best. —24

It is most appropriate to give away the gūḍa dhenu, &c., on the days of equinoxes, and solstices, on the occasion of an eclipse and Vyasātāpuṭa
(i.e., when the Sun and the Moon are in opposite Ayana and have the same declination, the sum of their longitude being equal to 180°)—25

This Visokadvādaśī is most sacred and dispeller of all sins, and is auspicious. He who fasts on this Dvādaśī goes to Viśnu’s highest seat. He attains prosperity, longevity and health in this world, and, after death, he goes to the city of Viśnu, remembering him always at that critical moment. The virtuous devotee never gets grief or pain for a period of nine arbuda and eighteen thousand years. A married woman, observing this Visokadvādaśī vrata, with music and dance, obtains also the same benefits. Consequently, one, full of faith, should always have music and songs in honor of Hari, on the occasion of this vrata, for, thereby, he gets prosperity—26-30

One who reads, listens to, or sees the worship of Lord Madhusūdana or advises others to observe this ordinance, goes to the kingdom of Indra where he is venerated by the Devas for a period of one kalpa.—31

Here ends the eighty-second chapter describing Aśoka Dvādaśī and the subsidiary gift of gūḍa dhenu and other symbolic images of the cow.

CHAPTER LXXXIII

Nārada said—O Lord of the Universe! I wish to hear the benefits of that best of all gifts, that may be the giver of everlasting benefits in the next life and that may also be venerated by the Devas and Rṣis—1

Śiva said—O Sage! I shall explain to you the ten ways of the gift or dāna known as the Sumeruapavata gift, by virtue of which, the devotee attains the highest of the climes and is respected by the Devas—2

The blessings conferred by this form of charity cannot be attained otherwise, not even by the reading of, or listening to, the Purāṇas, Vedas, performing sacrifices and worshipping, or erecting temples to, the Devas—3

Consequently, I shall relate to you the ways of this form of charity serially. The following ten hills should be made and given away, viz—1 the hill of grain, 2 the hill of salt, 3 the hill of raw sugar, 4. the hill of gold, 5 the hill of sesameum, 6 the hill of cotton, 7 the hill of clarified butter, 8 the hill of jewels, 9 the hill of silver, 10 the hill of sugar—4-6

Now I shall explain to you the ways of giving away the different hills enumerated above. The hills made of grain, salt, &c., should be given—30 away on the following occasions — on the day of the sacred equinoctial and solstitial svañas, at the time of Vyaśpati, on the day of the conjunction of three tithis (tryahaspañā), on the third day of the bright fortnight, on the occasion of an eclipse, on the amavasya day, on the occasion of the sacrificial rites connected with the marriage ceremonies, and other festivals, on the 12th day of the bright fortnight, on the full moon day, and on the day of the moon being in a sacred asterism — 7-9

A four cornered (square) pandal should be erected with devotion, within a temple yard, in a sacred place, within the limits of a cattle-shed or in the devotee's own courtyard. It should face the north and be slightly slanting towards East and North, and the floor should be plastered with cow dung and covered with Kusa grass. In the centre should be made the hill, surrounded by posts as props. (Four hills should be made in the corners, with Sumeru in the centre). The hill of 1,000 dronas or 1,6000 seers of grain is the first best, of 8,000 seers of grain is the second best, and of 4,800 seers of grain the last best — 10-12

The Sumeru hill in the centre should be made of rice (vrihi), three trees of gold should be in it. Pearls and diamonds should be studded in the east side of the hill, cat's eye and topaz in the south, emerald and sapphire in the west and lapis-lazuli and ruby in the north. Pieces of sandalwood should be placed on all sides. So also a creeper of corals should surround it, and the surface and the bottom of the rock should be bedecked with oyster shells — 13-14

The images of Brahma, Viṣṇu and Śiva as well as of the Sun should be made of gold by holy Brāhmanas, and placed on the summit of the hill — 15

The four peaks should be made of silver, and silver should also be platted at the bottom. Sugarcane should be put in place of bamboo, the caves should be made of butter, and the streams, of clarified butter — 16

The clouds surrounding this hill on four sides, should be made of cloths of four colors, viz., those on the east, of white cloth, those on the south, of yellow, those on the west of pigeon-grey, and those on the north of red-colored cloths — 17

Fruits of different kinds, fine garlands of flowers and sandal should be put on on all the sides. Eight silver Lokapālas representing 1 Indra, 2 Agni, 3 Sūrya, 4 Varuṇa, 5 Ṛg, 6 Vāyu, 7 Kuvera, 8 Chandra N E., should be made and located in their ascribed places. The hill in this way should be decorated — 18,
The canopy should be made of five colours, and it should be garlanded with white unfading flowers. The Sumeru hill should thus be located in the centre, and its four spurs decorated with flowers, and sandalwood should be located in their proper places. Then the Mandarśchala hill should be erected with barley in the east and adorned with the row of fruits and on the top, should be planted a tree of gold, representing the Madra Kadamba tree—19-20

That hill should be adorned with a golden image of Cupid, arrayed with beautiful dresses, garlands of flowers and sandalwood. There should be on one side of it a vessel, containing milk, representing the sea of milk and on the opposite side, another vessel, representing the sea called Anupodha. The forests of the hill should be represented by silver trees, according to the means of the devotee—21

On the south, the Gandharādana hill should be made of wheat, putting some gold in it, on the top of which should be placed a golden image of Yajñapati and the lake Mānasarovara, of clarified butter and a garden of white cloth and silver should adorn it—22

On the west, the Hiranmaya hill of sesame should be made and adorned with sweet flowers. Silver, fig tree and swan of gold, garden of silver-flowers, a pond of curds representing the Sitodha sarovara and clouds represented by white cloths, should also be made—23

On the north, the Supārśva hill of urad pulse (Phaseolus radiatus) should be made. A golden vata tree and a cow of gold, should be placed on the top of the hill. A pond of honey, representing Bhadra sarovara, and a garden of silver trees, should also be made at the bottom of it. The Brāhmaṇas, versed in the Vedas and Purāṇas, and able to control their passions and of blameless character and sound bodies, should be made Homas performing Homa. The sacrificial pond should measure one cubit square in size and east of Sumeru hill. Sacrificial offerings should be made of sesame, barley, clarified butter, sacrificial fuel, and Kusa grass. The devotee should keep himself awake during the night and blow conches, etc., and sing. Now I shall describe to you the way of invoking the hills—24-26

In invoking the Sumeru hill, the devotee should say, ‘O hill! Thou art the best resort of all the Devas. O hill of immortals! destroy quickly all ill-luck in our houses and confer all prosperity on us as well as the highest peace. I have commenced worship with unalloyed devotion. Thou art the adorable Śiva, Brahmā, Viṣṇu, and the Sun. Thou art formless, with and beyond all forms. Thou art the seed of all, protect me, therefore, O Eternal One. Thou art the temple of the Lokapalas and of Viśvamūrti, the Great Omnipresent, as well as of Rudra, the Ādityas and Vasus, therefore give me peace. Since Thou art never bereft of the Devas or Devi or by Śiva, therefore take me across the mundane ocean of sufferings in safety."—27-30

After thus worshipping the Sumeru hill, the Mandarāchala should also be worshipped with the following words: "O Mandarāchala! Thou art embellished with the forest called Čaitrā-ratha, and the continent, called Bhadrāvā, therefore, soon bring happiness unto me. O, Gandhamādana! Thou art the crest jewel of the continent, Jambudvīpa, and art adorned with Gandharvavāna, therefore, grant me high renown. O, Hiranmaya hill, Thou art adorned by the Ketumāla continent as well as by the garden called Vaibhāra. The golden fig tree is on your summit, let my power therefore be everlasting. O Supārśva hill, Thou standest majestic, beautified by the northern Kuru country and the Savitri forest, therefore, let my prosperity be inexhaustible." After thus invoking those hills, the devotee should bathe in the morning and give away the best central hill, to the guru (preceptor) —31-35

The four corner hills should be given away, in due order, to the four Kittijās, and, O Nādā! twenty-four or ten cows should also be given away. —36

Nine, eight, seven, five or even one milk cow should be given away to the preceptor (guru), according to the means of the devotee —37

This is the way of the worship of all the hills. The same mantras and materials for worship should be employed in worshipping them all. The sacrificial offerings to the different asterisms, Lokapālas, Brahmā and other Devas should also be offered by applying their respective mantras. Diurnal fasts should be observed. In case the devotee cannot do so, he may take his meals in the night. O Nādā! Now listen to the Dāna mantras of all hills serially —38-40

Hear also the rituals of their being given away. "The (Anna) grain is Brahmā and is known as the giver of life. The grain nourishes the universe, consequently, it is Viṣṇu and Lakṣmī. O, Supreme of all the hills! Protect me in the form of a hill of grain."—41-42

One who gives away the hill of grain in this way, resides in Devaloka during the reign of a hundred Manus, and traverses through the skies seated in an aerial chariot in company of the nymphs and the Gandharvas. On the exhaustion of his merit, he is re-born in the family of a great king —43-45

Here ends the eighty-third chapter describing the gift of hills (i.e., heaps of grain).
CHAPTER LXXXIV

Śiva said—I am now going to tell you about the mount of salt, the donor of which goes to My region—1

The first best mount of salt is of 256 sees (of the measure of 16 dronas), the next best is of 128 sees (eight dronas), and the last is of 64 sees (i.e., 4 dronas)—2

The poor may make it of any weight rising from 16 sees (one drona) onwards. The four corner mounts (viśkambha) should be of the quarter measurement of this main mount—3

And Brahmā, along with the other Devas, should be arranged in the same way as mentioned before, and the golden Lokapālas should also be so located—4

The ponds and Kāmadeva and others should be made as before. The devotee should keep up all the night. I now explain to you the mantra of giving it away. ‘O Salt! Thou hast been born of the ocean of fortune, in consequence of which thou art styled as the best of all the flavours. Hence this gift of the mount of salt may protect me from the evils of this mundane world—5-6

‘There is no flavour in anything without a pinch of salt. It is always dear to both Śiva and Śivā (Gaurī). Hence, O Salt! give me peace—7

‘The salt that has sprung from the body of Viśnu is the giver of health. Therefore, O Salt in the shape of a mountain, carry me through the mundane ocean of troubles in peace’—8

One who gives away the mount of salt in this way, attains bliss after passing a Kalpa in the realm of Śiva and Pārvatī—9

Here ends the eighty-fourth chapter describing the gift of the mount of salt

CHAPTER LXXXV

Śiva said—I now relate to you about the gift of the mountain of molasses, the donor of which, honoured by the Devas, remains in heaven—1

The mount of 50 maunds (10 bhāras) of molasses is the first best, of 25 maunds (5 bhāras) the second best, and of 15 maunds (3 bhāras) the last best. The poor may make it of 7½ maunds even—2

The invocation, worship, the golden tree, the worship of the Devas, the four corner mounts (viśkambha), the ponds, the forest, the Devas, and the sacrifice, the keeping up of the night and the Lokapālas and the prehuminary ceremonies, all these should be done according to the rituals connected with the mount of grain, and the following mantras should be pronounced —3-4

'As Viṣṇu is supreme among the Devas, the Sāmaveda among the Vedas, Lord Mahādeva among the yogis, the sacred Ōm among the mantras, the Goddess Pārvati among the ladies, similarly, the sugarcane juice is superior to all' —5-6

'Therefore, O mountain of molasses, give me unbounded wealth, you are the brother of the Goddess Pārvati (the giver) of goodluck, and the abode of Pārvati, therefore grant me peace' —7

One who gives away the mount of molasses in this way, goes to the region of Pārvati and is honoured by the Gandharvás —8

After seven Kalpas, he becomes the sovereign of the seven Dvīpas. He remains also always healthy and never gets defeat from his enemies —9.

_Here ends the eighty-fifth chapter dealing with the description of the gift of the mount of molasses_

CHAPTER LXXXVI

I am now describing to you the ways of giving away the mountain of gold, which drives away all sins, and takes the devotee to the region of Brahmā —1

The mount of 4,000 tolas (1,000 palas) of gold is the first best, of 2,000 tolas (500 palas) is the second best, and of 1,000 tolas (250 palas) is the last. The poor may make, leaving pride aside, one of less weight, but greater than one pala, according to his means —2

The rituals prescribed for the mount of grain should be observed. The four corner mounts (viśkambha) should be given away to the sacrificing priests, as before, with the following words 'I salute you, O mount of gold, you are the seed, the womb of Brahmā, you are the giver of unbounded fruits. The gold is most sacred on account of its being born of Fire, therefore, O Nāgottama 'protect me'. One who gives away the mount of gold, according to these rites, goes to the blissful realm of Brahmā where he resides for a period of one kalpa, after which he attains emancipation —3-7

_Here ends the eighty-sixth chapter describing the gift of the mount of gold_
CHAPTER LXXXVII

Now I proceed to explain to you about the giving away of the mount of sesamum, by the virtue of which the devotee goes to the realm of Viṣṇu.—1

The sesamum mount of 160 seers (10 dhrānas) is the first best, of 80 seers (5 dhrānas) second best, and of 48 seers (3 dhrānas) is the last.—2

The four corner mounts (vīskambhas) should be located as before, and I am now telling you the mantra to be recited at the time of offering, O Nārada.—3

'Sesamum, kuṇa and mīsa were produced from the sweat of Viṣṇu, at the time of His killing the demon, Madhu, therefore, O mount of sesamum grant me happiness. In Hāyu and Kavya, (in the Deva as well as in Pitrī worship), sesamum is considered to be the best, therefore, O mount of sesamum, I salute you.'—4.5

One who thus gives away the mount of sesamum, attains similarity with Viṣṇu, and is never born in this world.—6

He gets long life, children and grand children and goes to heaven, where he is honoured by the Devas, Pitrīs, Gandharvas, &c.—7

Here ends the eighty-seventh chapter describing the mount of sesamum.

CHAPTER LXXXVIII

The Lord Śiva said—I shall now fully relate the method of the gift of the cotton-hill. By this gift, one attains the highest state.—1

It is best to make the mount of cotton for 100 maunds (20 bhāras), of 50 maunds (10 bhāras) is the next best, of 25 maunds (5 bhāras) is the last best. The devotee, if in straitened circumstances, may make one of 5 maunds (one bhāra) even, without exercising miserliness.—2

O Nārada! the rites prescribed for the giving away of the hill of grain should be observed in this also. On the lapse of the night of prayers, &c., the devotee should recite the following mantra giving away the hill of cotton.—3

'O Hill of cotton! you cover everyone in the shape of cloth, I salute you, kindly dispel my sins.'—4

One who gives away the cotton hill, according to these rites, goes to the region of Śiva where he resides for one Kalpa, after which he is born as a king.—5

Here ends the eighty-eighth chapter dealing with the gift of Cotton-Mass.
CHAPTER LXXXIX

Now I shall describe to you about the gift of the mount of clarified butter. It is like nectar, and its charity is the destroyer of all ills — 1

The mount of clarified butter, consisting of 20 pitchers, full of it, is the first best, of ten pitchers is the second best, and of five pitchers is the last best — 2

People with limited resources may make it of two pitchers even. The corner spurs should be duly located in the four sides, like the previous ones — 3

Vessels of uncooked rice should be neatly placed on the mouth of the pitchers, touching each other, and rising up into the form of a peak like a pyramid, and should be adorned, according to rules — 4

They should be surrounded with sugarcane, fruit and cloth, etc. The rest of the rituals are the same as those described for the hill of grain — 5

The devotee should keep himself awake during the night, perform Homa offerings and worship the Deities, and give away everything to the preceptor (guru) in the morning — 6

The spurs of the hillock (viṣkambha corner mounts) should be given away to the Rtvika priests, as before, after which the devotee should say with a peaceful mind ‘The clarified butter has been produced by the confluence of the fire and nectar, therefore, O Śankara, the Lord of the universe, be pleased. Brilliance is Brahmā which is present in the clarified butter, therefore, let there always be my protection, by virtue of this charity of the clarified butter hill.’ One who gives away the first best hill of clarified butter, decidedly goes to the kingdom of Śiva, in spite of his being a great sinner, and resides in heaven till the dissolution of the world where he roams about in an aerial chariot decorated with cranes, birds, small bells, perforated work and portholes in the company of Apsariś, Siddhas, Vidyādharas and the pitris — 7-10

Here ends the eighty-ninth chapter describing the gift of the mount of Ghee.

CHAPTER XC.

I am now going to explain to you about the mount of gems. The mount of one thousand pearls is the first best, of 500 pearls the second best, and of 300 pearls the last best. The spurs (viṣkambha) in the corners should be made and located in their proper places, the quantity consisting of one-fourth of the main mount —1-2

The eastern spurs of the mount, should be made with diamonds and cat’s eyes. The southern spur (Gaudhamadana mount) should be made of sapphires and topazes —3

The western spur, called the Vimalachala, should be made with corals and lapis lazulis, the northern spur to be made with topazes and gold. The rest of the rituals should be observed as laid down for the hill of grain. The trees and the images of gold should be made and invoked in the same way and worshipped with incense and flowers. After the night is passed, the devotee should give everything away to the preceptor (Guru), priests, &c., by uttering the following mantra —4-6

‘When all the Devas are dominant in the jewels, and you are the mountain of gems, you are of immortal stability. I salute you.—7

‘Lord Hari is pleased by the gift of precious stones, therefore protect me, O Lord! by virtue of this gift of gems.’—8

One who gives away the hill of gems, according to these rites, goes to the region of Visnu and is venerated by the Devas like Indra, &c., where after passing his blissful days for a very long time, he is re-born as an emperor on Earth, endowed with beauty, health and all good qualities —9-10

His sins of killing a Bia̓hmana are destroyed as the thunderbolt destroys the mountains —11

Here ends the ninetieth chapter describing the gift of pearls and gems

CHAPTER XCII

Now I shall explain to you about the mount of silver, by the gift of which the devotee goes to the realm of the Moon —1

The first best silver mount is of 40,000 tolas (10,000 palās) of silver, the second best of 20,000 tolas (5,000 palās), and the last best of 10,000 tolas (2,500 palās) —2

The devotee, in less favourable circumstances, should make a mount from 80 tolas (20 palās) of silver and upwards, as much as he can afford, and, as before, the four corner spurs should be one-fourth in dimension of the main central mount. —3

According to the rites mentioned before, the mounts should be made of silver and the Lokapalas of gold —4
Separate images of Brahma, Vishnu and the Sun (Arka) should be made and placed at the bottom of the hill, whatever has been ordained to be made of silver in other places, should be made of gold here—

The rest of the rituals, like Homa, vigil, &c., should be observed, as before. The devotee should keep himself awake during the night and give away the silver mount to the preceptor (guru), and the cornel mounts, after being decorated with cloths, &c., and worshipped, should be given away to the priests (Ritvijas). Afterwards, the devotee, holding a blade of kuśa grass in his hand, should recite the following mantra, with a peaceful mind—

'The silver is pleasing to the Pittis, and so it is to Vishnu, Indra and Śiva, therefore, O mount of silver! protect me from the ocean of sorrows of this world.'—

One who thus gives away the mount of silver, attains the benefit of having given away ten thousand cows, and goes to the region of the Moon, after being venerated by hosts of Gandharvas, Kinnaras and Nymphs, and resides there till the dissolution of the world—

Here ends the ninety-first chapter describing the gift of the mount of silver

CHAPTER XCII

I now relate to you the ways of giving away the mount of sugar in gift, by the virtue of which Vishnu, Śiva, and the Sun always remain pleased—

The first best mount of sugar is of 20 maunds (8 bhāras) of sugar, the second best of 10 maunds 4 bhāras and the last best of 5 maunds (2 bhāras).—

People of limited circumstances may make it from 2½ to 1½ maunds (one to one-half bhāra), and the four cornel spurs should be made one-fourth of the central mount.—

The rituals connected with the mount of grain should be observed here as well. The hills should be made with the images of Gods settled on them, and, as before, the three golden trees of Mandara, Pārijата and Kalpadruma, should be located on the Sumeru peak. These three trees should always be located on the gift of every kind of hill—

Harichandana and Santána trees should be located on the east and the west, respectively. This should be done in the case of the gift of every hill, and particularly in the instance of the one made of sugar—
CHAPTER XIII.

The image of Cupid should be located on the Manadarâchala peak facing the west, that of Kuvera facing the north, on the top of the Gandhamâdana, on Vîpulâchala, the incarnation of the Veda, in the form of the Swan, facing the east, facing the south, the (Surabhi) cow of gold on the Supârâva hill — 7-8.

The invocation, &c., should be done, as before, in the case of the mount of grain, after which the central hill should be given away to the Preceptor (guru), and the corner spurs should be given away to the priests (Ritvijâs), whilst reciting the following mantras — 9

'This hill of sugar is known as the essence of prosperity and nectar, therefore, let thou be the source of everlasting bliss to me, O Lord of hills O, mount of sugar! the drops of nectar that fell from the Devas when they were quaffing it, produced thee, O sugar, therefore, protect me The sugar has also been generated from the floral arrows of Cupid, thou at the mount of the very same sugar, therefore, save me from this sea of troubles in the world' — 10-12

One who gives away the hill of sugar, according to these rites, is liberated from all sins, and attains bliss. — 13

By the grace of Visnû, the devotee traverses through the sky seated in an aerial chariot, shedding lustre like the moon and the stars, after which he becomes the lord of the seven dvipas at the end of a hundred Kalpâs, and enjoys health and wealth for three arvuda of lives — 14-15

In observing the rites of giving away these different hills, the devotee should feed as many Brâhmanas as he can, according to his means, and, then, with their permission, should take his meals without salt and acid. He should send away the materials of the hills to the houses of the Brâhmanas — 16

Śiva said — In ancient times (Bṛhat Kalpa), there was a king named Dharmamûrti, the friend of Indra, who killed thousands of Daityas — 17

He eclipsed even the sun and the moon by his lustre, and he destroyed hundreds of enemies, and was ever victorious. In spite of his being a mortal, he had access to every region, and, roaming aboutether, he subjugated many of his foes — 18

His queen, Bhûnumati, was the most beautiful of all the ladies in the three regions. She was matchless, like the Goodess Lâkshmi, and excelled all the beautiful ladies of her time. She was dearer than life to the king. She shone like Lâkshmi, even in a group of 10,000 ladies. — 19-20
Thousands, aye, millions of Rājas, could not be compared to him
On one occasion, that remarkable sovereign, whilst seated on his throne, asked his Purohitā, the sage Vasāśṭha, with mind full of bewilderment—21

The King said—“O Sage! I be pleased to tell me, on account of what good deeds in my past lives, I have become so illustrious and wealthy in my present life?”—22

Vasāśṭha said—“Some time in the past, there was a public woman, named Lilāvati, who was devoted to Śiva. She gave to her preceptor (guru), a mount of salt, along with the trees of gold, &c., as prescribed in the rituals, on the fourteenth day of the bright fortuitous—23

In the house of Lilāvati used to live a Sudra servant, named Saunda, goldsmith by profession, who was very clever. He had made beautiful golden trees and images of Devas, with faith, and with marked skill, and did not charge anything for his labour. He never charged any wages. He thought that these were all meant for religious purposes—24-25

The wife of that goldsmith, O King! fixed those trees artistically on that mount, after polishing them well—26

Lilāvati, along with those two, whilst worshipping the mount with faith, showed great devotion to their preceptor (guru). After a long time, Lilāvati died, and by virtue of her charity, she was liberated from her sins and went to the kingdom of Śiva—27-28

The poor, but high-minded, goldsmith, who was in the house of Lilāvati, and who did not charge anything for manufacturing those trees of gold and images, has been born in your person—29

By the same virtue, you are so illustrious and have your sway over the seven continents. Your wife of the past life had polished up the trees and had fixed them up on the mount, in consequence of which she has now been born as your queen Bhānumatī—30

She is of matchless (polished) beauty, on account of her polishing those trees, and both of you had devotedly served in the gift of the mount of salt, consequently, you have obtained health, wealth and kingdom—31

You should give away in your present life the ten kinds of hills, according to the prescribed rites.” Acting on that advice of the sage Vasāśṭha, the king performed the gift of ten hills, beginning with Dhānyāchala, and went to the realm of Viṣṇu—32

One, who himself cannot perform, but merely touches, hears or even advises others to give these gifts, is liberated from sins and goes to the region of Viṣṇu. So, also, one who is poor, but who, full of faith, sees this Pūja performed by others—33

By reading this, evil dreams do not come, and their effects are removed. One who gives the gifts with devotion, undoubtedly consumes all worldly fears—34-35

Here ends the ninety-second chapter describing the glory of gifts of sugar hill in general

CHAPTER XCIII

Sūta said—in the days gone by, Saunaka asked Vatsampāyana, who was seated at his leisure, to explain to him the ways of the acquirement of all desires by the performance of Śānti and Puṣṭi rites—1

Note—The past Karmas of a man tend to produce either some bad or some good results. These Karmik tendencies are indicated by the aspects of the planets, at the time of one’s birth. The influences, which tend to the production of sorrow, are malignant, and those which tend to the production of happiness, are beneficial. The effects of Karmas being the results of actions performed in past lives, can naturally be modified by appropriate actions done in this life. Hence, the necessity of Śāntika and Puṣṭika rites. Those which pacify or neutralize the malignant influences are called Śāntika rites, and those which strengthen and augment the beneficent tendencies, are called Puṣṭika rites. As karmas by themselves are inert, but work through the agencies of the Lords of Karmas designated by the names of planets, hence the worship of the planets, or, their propitiation.

Vatsampāyana said—I shall now relate to you, listen to it attentive-ly what should be done by persons desirous of acquiring wealth, peace, longevity, and of freeing themselves from malignant influences and how the offerings to the planets should be made by a person desirous of Śānti and Puṣṭi—2

I shall explain to you, in brief, on the basis of all Śāstras, the ways of propitiating the planets—3

On an auspicious day as pointed out by almanacs and Brāhmanas, and after inviting the Brāhmanas, the different planets and their rulers should be located in their proper places, through a Brāhmaṇa, and hōma sacrifice should be performed.—4

The knowers of the Purāṇas and Śutus have described the planetary offerings as being of three kinds, viz.—1 of the thousand homas (fire oblations), 2 of a lac or a hundred thousand homas, 3 of ten millions of homas, that fulfil all desires. Hear the ways of performing the hōma with a thousand offerings, as told in the Purāṇas. This is called Navagraha yajña, or the sacrifice to the Nine Planets. An altar, measuring two vistati wide, within the sacrificial pond, should be made in the direction of north-east of the fire pit — 5-7

The vedā (altar) should be one vistati in height and square, facing the north. It should have two buttresses on which the Devās should be located. Afterwards fire should be lighted in the fire pit and the thirty-two Devās should be invoked in that fire — 8-9

The following are the nine planets, viz. — The Sun, the Moon, the Mars, the Mercury, the Jupiter, the Venus, the Saturn, the Rāhu and the Kēṭu. They always bring good to all creatures (to call some of them malignant, is a mere mode of speech)

(1) The Sun should be located in the centre, (2) the Mars in the south, (3) the Mercury in the north-east, (4) the Jupiter in the north, (5) the Venus in the east, (6) the Moon in the south-east, (7) the Saturn in the west, (8) the Rāhu in the south-west and (9) the Kēṭu in north-west. All the planets should be drawn with uncooked rice powder — 11-12

(10) Śiva is the Presiding Deity (adhīdevā) of the Sun, (11) the Goddess Pārvati of the Moon, (12) Skanda (Kārtikeya) of the Mars, and (13) Harā of the Mercury, (14) Brahmā of the Jupiter, (15) India of the Venus, (16) Yama (Dharmaśāja) of the Saturn, (17) Kāla of the Rāhu, and (18) Chitra-gupta of the Kēṭu, (19) Agni, (20) Water, (21) Earth, (22) Viṣṇu, (23) Indra (24) Andra (wife of Indra), (25) Piajāpati, (26) Sarpa, (27) Brahmā, (28) Ganesa, (29) Durgā, (30) Vāyu and (31) Ākāsa are the secondary presiding Deities (Pratyadhīdevās). All these make up 31, to which number adding the Twin Asvini-kumāras, the group becomes of 32. All of them should be invoked in the sacrificial fire by Vyāhriti — 14-16.

Note — Vyāhriti means utterance. A mystic word, viz. the Syllables, Śhuvah, Svah, Mahah, Jnana, tapah, Satyam, and Om.

The colours of these planets should be as follows — The Sun should be drawn in red, the Moon in white, the Mars in red, the Mercury and the Jupiter in yellow, the Venus in white, the Saturn and the Rāhu in black and the Kēṭu in smoke colour — 17

Their forms are of the same colour as indicated above. They should be dressed in the same colour of cloth and offered the same colour of flowers. Incense, highly fragrant, should be offered to them, and a nice canopy should be placed over the altar, which must be well decorated, by hanging flowers and fruits — 18

Rice, cooked in coarse sugar, should be offered to the Sun, clarified butter and rice cooked in milk and sugar to the Moon, mohanabhoga (pudding) to the Mars, milk and rice to the Mercury, rice and curds to the Jupiter, coarse sugar and rice to the Venus, rice, sesamum and pulses, cooked in milk to the Saturn, mutton to the Rāhu, and coloured rice to the Ketu.—19-20

To the north-east of that altar, a flawless pitcher of water painted with rice and curds (five powders) and decorated with pāñca-ratna (five gems), the leaves of the mango tree, fruit and cloth, should be placed, and Varuna should be located on it —21-22

The earth of the elephant ward, stable, chariot-house, ant-hill, tank, cattle-shed should be mixed with water, along with the different herbs and Ganges water, and the devotee should bathe in it, after reciting the following mantras ‘All the rivers, seas, tanks and rivulets, come to wipe out the sins of the devotee’ —23-25

O, sages! the Deities should be, similarly, invoked, and afterwards Homa offerings of clarified butter, barley, uncooked rice, and sesamum should be made to the fire —26

The wood of Arka (Calotropis gigantea), Palāsā (Buteafrondosa), Khadira (Catechu), Apāmārgha (Achyranthes-spera), Aśwatha (the holy fig tree), Uḍāmbāra (the fig tree), Śāmti (Prosopis spicigera), Kusa and Durva grasses are to be used for lighting the sacrificial fire. The Homa offerings, consisting of honey, ghee and curds of milk, should be made either 101 times or only 28 times to each planet.

The sacrificial twigs (of the plants named above), in all homas, should each measure a span in length (prādeśa), and should not contain roots, branches and leaves. Such a kind of fuel should be used by the wise in all sacrificial offerings —29

Note—Prādeśamātra A span measured from the top of the thumb to that of the forefinger

Particular kind of sacrificial fuel should be used for the particular Deity (named above), and offerings should be made, after uttering the particular mantras in low voice, with the name of the Deity for whom it is intended —30

The sacrificial twigs should be soaked in clarified butter and then thrown into the fire. Afterwards, the eatables, like charu, etc., should also be put into the fire. Ten offerings should be made at first to one’s own particular mantra. The completion of the sacrifice should be performed by the vyāhṛti mantras —31

The learned Brāhmaṇas should be placed, either facing the North or the East, and the cooked rice, charu (pudding), should be placed in front of each Devatā, with recitation of the proper mantras —32
After the Homa of cooked rice (charu), the remaining offerings should be made with the twigs (samidha), in honor of the planets, viz., offering (1) to the Sun should be made after reciting ‘Åkrüṣya,’ etc., (2) to the Moon after reciting ‘Åpyāsva,’ (3) to the Mars after reciting ‘Agnirmūrdhādiva,’ (4) to the Mercury after reciting ‘Agnevivasa-vudāsa,’ (5) to the Jupiter after reciting ‘Bṛhaspate pandraṭhena,’ (6) to the Venus after reciting ‘Śūkran te anyat,’ (7) to the Saturn after reciting ‘Śannodevibrhūṣṭa,’ (8) to the Rāhu after reciting ‘Kayāṇaḥ-chitrābhuvat,’ (9) to the Ketu after reciting ‘Ketunkrunva,’ (10) to Rudra after reciting ‘Āvorāja,’ (11) to Umā after reciting ‘Āpoḥṣṭa,’ (12) to Kārtika after reciting ‘Syonāpithvī,’ (13) to Viṣṇu after reciting ‘Idam Viṣṇu,’ (14) to Brahmā after reciting ‘Tamasana,’ (15) Indra should be invoked by reciting ‘Indramiddavatāya,’ (16) to Yama by reciting ‘Ayaṅgau,’ (17) to Kāla by reciting ‘Brahmajaṇānam,’ offering should be made (18) to Chitragnītja after reciting ‘Ajñātame,’ (19) to Fire after reciting ‘Agniḍūtamvṛmīmahe’ ‘Uduttamam Varunam’ is the mantra for (20) Varuna, ‘Prthivyantarikaṃ’ for (21) the Earth, ‘Sahasraśaṇapurusā’ for (22) Viṣṇu ‘Indrayendomarutvata’ for (23) Indra, ‘Uttānapare subhage’ for (24) the Goddess (Indrāni), ‘Prajāpati’ for (25) Prajāpati, ‘Namoṣu Sarpebhyaḥ’ for (26) Serpents, ‘Eṣabrahmāyaiśvargbhyaḥ’ for (27) Brahmā, ‘Anānam’ for (28) Viñāyaka (Ganesa), ‘Jātavedasunavāma’ for (29) Durgā, ‘Ādit-pratnasayaretasā’ for (30) the Ākṣara, ‘Krāṇāśaṭu mahānaḥcha’ for (31) the Vāyu, ‘Eṣasā apurvyā’ for (32) the Twin Asvinikumāras Mūrdhānamdivah is the mantra for offering the last libation, called the Pūrnāhuti, to complete the sacrifice — 33-48

Afterwards, the devotee, facing the east or the north, should get himself sprinkled with the water of the pitcher, by the prescribed mantras accompanied with music, blowing of conch and songs — 49

Four Brahmans, free from natural deformity and wearing garlands and golden ornaments, should bathe the devotee — 50

At that time they should utter the following mantras “Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Maheśa, all the three Gods may sprinkle you with the holy waters, and may Vasudeva, Jagannātha, Sankarsana, Pradyumna and Aniruddha lead you to victory — 51

“Indra, Agni, Yama, Nirūti, Varuna, Vāyu, Kuvera, Śiva, Brahmā, Seṣanāga and Dikpālas may protect you — 52

“Kirti, Lakṣmī, Dhrīti, Medhā, Puṣṭi, Śraddhā, Kiṣyā, Maṇi, Buddhā, Lajjā, Vapu, Śanti, Tuṣṭi, Kānti, who are called the Mothers, and are Dharmapatnis may come and sprinkle you with holy waters — 53
CHAPTER XCIII

The Sun, the Moon, the Mars, the Mercury, the Jupiter, the Venus, the Saturn, the Rāhu and the Ketu may also sprinkle you with holy waters, after being satisfied —54

The Devas, the Dānavas, the Gandharvas, the Yakṣas, the Rākṣasas, the Serpents, the Seers and Sages, the Cows, the Divine Mothers, the trees, the nymphs, the Nāgas, the Daityas, the weapons, the arms, the kings, the king’s vehicles, the herbs, the gems, the various parts of Time, the rivers, the oceans, the mountains, the sacred places, the clouds and the rivulets, may also sprinkle you with holy waters, for the fulfilment of all you desires” —55-57

Afterwards, the devotee should get himself sprinkled by the Brāhmaṇas, with the water mixed with different herbs and incense and then put on white clothes, and white sandal paste —58

Then the devotee should fasten his garments with those of his wife and worship the priests with devotion, and offer them appropriate fees, with full faith —59

A milch cow should be given away in the name of the Sun, a conch in the name of the Moon, a red ox in the name of the Mars, gold in the name of the Mercury, a pan of yellow garments in the name of the Jupiter, a white horse in the name of the Venus, a black cow in the name of the Saturn, a lion in the name of the Rāhu, goat in the name of the Ketu. The fees in each case must be a piece of gold, called suvaṇa (a golden coin), or cows adorned with gold, in the case of every one of these planets, or a suvaṇṇa coin in the case of each planet. If he cannot do that, then, he may give whatever may appeal to the fancy of the preceptor (guru). Everything should be given away, after reciting the prescribed mantras with fees, as noted below —60-63

"O Cow! Thou art worshipped by all the Devas, Thou art Rohini, Thou art the sacred pilgrimage, containing all the Devas, let there be Śānti to me. O Conch! thou art sacred amongst all, thou art auspicious amongst all auspicious things, thou art held by the Lord Viṣṇu, therefore let there be Śānti to me. O, Ox! thou art the symbol of justice, source of the world’s happiness, the conveyance of the Lord Śiva possessing eight forms, therefore grant me Śānti. O Gold! thou art the womb of the Golden Child (born of the golden egg of the Lord), and art also the seed of the Sun and the giver of everlasting rewards of good deeds, therefore grant me sānti. Since yellow raiments are beloved to Thee, O Vāsudeva (Krīṣṇa), hence, be pleased with me by their gifts, O Viṣṇu, and grant me sānti.

"O Viṣṇu, Thou, in the form of the horse, rose out of the ocean of nectar, and Thou art the eternal carrier of the Sun and the Moon, therefore, grant me sānti. Cow! Thou art the symbol of the Earth and Thou art the beloved of Kedāra, destroyer of all sins, so grant me sānti. O Iron! since all difficult works are under thy control, thou helpest in the forging of the plough and arms, &c., therefore grant me sānti. O Gold, thou art an ingredient of all sacrifices, thou art the eternal vehicle of the sun, therefore grant me sānti. O Cow! Fourteen regions are present in thy body, therefore give me wealth in this world, as well as happiness in the next. As the bed of Viṣṇu is never devoid of Lakṣmī, therefore, my bed may never remain unoccupied by my wife, by the virtue of my giving away this bed in charity. As there is always the presence of the Devas in all gems, so may the Devas grant me all jewels, by virtue of my giving away precious stones in charity. All the forms of charity do not come up to even \(\frac{1}{12}\)th of the gift of land, therefore, let there be sānti to me by virtue of gift of this land."—64-76

With devotion, devoid of miserliness, worship should be performed with jewels, gold, cloth, incense, flowers, and sandal — 77

One who worships the planets in this way, attains all his wishes and goes to heaven after death — 78

The particular unlucky planet should be worshipped with great care, according to the prescribed full rites. Other planets should, then, be worshipped with abridged rites. This is for a man of limited means, otherwise all planets should be worshipped with full rites — 79

The planets, cows, King and Brāhmaṇas, especially, are worthy of being worshipped. Those, who worship them, are nourished by them, and those, who insult them, are destroyed — 80

As the armour shields the warrior from the blows of arrows, similarly, the propitiation ceremony (sānti) protects them from the effects of the bad destiny — 81

The person desirous of acquiring prosperity should not perform any sacrifice without giving away the fees (Dakṣinā), since by the giving of handsome fees, even the Deva is propitiated — 82

I The ten thousand Homas.

Homa sacrifice with ten thousand offerings is prescribed, in the ceremony of the propitiation of the Nine Planets. The same number of Homa offerings should be made in connection with the nuptial, festive, yajña ceremonies as well as with the ceremonies of the installation of sacred images — 83

O Sage! the ways of performing the sacrifice of ten thousand offerings to ward off obstacles, &c., caused by one's past karmas, as well as the dangers arising from evil spirits, have been described. Now I shall explain to you the ways of performing the Homa sacrifice of a hundred thousands of offerings — 84

II The hundred thousand Homas

The learned have said that a sacrifice of a lac of offerings should be performed for the fulfilment of all desires. It is very pleasing to the Pitris, and is the giver of prosperity and emancipation — 85

The devotee should get the blessings invoked by Brähmanas, after selecting an auspicious day, according to the benign influences of planets and stars, and then make a pandal to the north-east of the house, or a square pandal, measuring 10 or 8 hands, should be made to the north-east of a temple of Śiva — 86-87

The altar should have a slant towards north-east, and it should be made with great care. The same north-east corner of the pandal, should be selected for the purpose of digging the fire pit. This pit should be a square, beautiful and according to rules. The pit should have girdles round it and of the form of the mouth of a yoni — 88-89

The girdle should be 4 fingers in breadth and of the same height, slanting from east to north. It should be even in other directions — 90

The sacrifice for the propitiation of the nine planets has been laid down for the peace of all. It is dangerous to make the sacrificial pond of more or less dimensions than prescribed. Therefore, it should be made carefully, as described above — 91

Brahmā has said that the sacrificial pit in the ceremony of a hundred thousands of Homa, should be ten times the dimensions given above. The dakṣinā to the priests should be ten times that given in the ordinary ten thousand homas — 92

To perform the sacrifice of a lac of offerings, a sacrificial pond of 4 hands in length and 2 in breadth should be made. Its mouth should be made of the shape of a conical-triangle. Three girdles should also be made to surround the pit — 93
To the north-east of the pandal, after leaving a space of three _vitastas_, the sacrificial pond should be dug. On the land selected for it, a square _altar_ slanting north-east should be erected—94

Viśvakarman has said that the buttress of the _altar_ should be 1½ _vitastas_, that is, half of the above measurement, and should have three girdles. The Deities should be located on this buttress—95

The first girdles should be 2 fingers high and the remaining two should be only one finger high—96

The breadth of all the three girdles should be three fingers, and the wall round the _altar_ should be ten fingers high. The Devas should be invoked on it, with flowers and uncooked rice—97

O Sage! the presiding (Adhi-devās) and the minor (Pratyadhi-devās) Deities should all face the east, and not the north or the west—98

Persons desirous of acquiring wealth, should worship Garuda also, in addition, by reciting the following mantra—'the chanting of the Sāmaveda, is Thy body, Thou art the vehicle of Viṣṇu and the destroyer of poison and sins, therefore grant me _sānti_.'—99

In the former manner, the pitcher of water should be placed, and then the _homa_ should be performed. The sacrifice of a lac of offerings being finished, if there remain any other sacrificial fuels, then these should be thrown into the fire, with the pouring of _ghee_ on the pitcher, in the form of a continuous stream as a Vasudhātā—100

The sacrificial ladle should be made of the fig tree. It should be of fresh, sappy wood, and straight, and free from rot. It should be one hand in length. This ladle should be placed on two supports, and clarified butter should be poured through it in a continuous stream into the fire—101

The hymns of the Āgneya-sūkta, Vaisnava-sūkta, Raudra-sūkta, Chandra-sūkta, Mahāvaiśvānara sūkta, Sāma and Yyeṣṭha Sāma should be recited, whilst so pouring—102

The bathing of the devotee with the holy waters and the Svastivāchana should be done as before, and the devotee should also give Dakṣinā separately, as before.—103

The Dakṣinā to the sacrificial priests should be given free from anger and bias, and with a calm mind. There should be four Brāhmaṇas, well-versed in the Vedas, to officiate on the occasion of the sacrifice of the Nine Planets, or only two such Brāhmaṇas, of peaceful disposition and versed in the Vedas, should be made officiating priests. This is in case of the sacrifice of ten thousand Homa offerings. The number of Brāhmaṇas need not be greater than those mentioned above —104-105

In the sacrifice of a lac of offerings, there may be eight or ten priests, or even four, according to one's means —106

The sacrificial material should be ten times more for the sacrifice of a lac of offerings, than what it is in the sacrifice in connection with the worship of Nine Planets. Eatables, ornaments, bedsteads, necklaces, sacred threads, rings, etc., should be given away, according to the means of the devotee —107-108

Dakṣinā should be given according to the means of the devotee. It should not be reduced through misanthropy. If he does not give any dakṣinā, through avarice or delusion, his family becomes extinct.—109

The devotee, anxious for prosperity, should give away also grain in charity, according to his means, because the ceremony without the gift of grain brings famine on the sacrificer and his country —110

There is no greater enemy of mankind than an ill-conducted sacrifice, for the priests, if not versed in the rituals, are destroyed, and the devotee is destroyed by not giving Dakṣinā, and the country is destroyed where food grain is not given in charity —111

A man in narrow circumstances should never perform a sacrifice of a lac of offerings, for the spending of even a small fortune in that case leads to disease and distress —112

The sacrifice, with devotion, according to prescribed rites, should engage even one, two, or three Brāhmaṇas, and the man in straitened circumstances may employ only one Brāhmaṇa, well versed in the Vedas whom he should properly honor and give full Dakṣinā —113

The sacrifice of a lac of offerings should be performed only by that man who possesses a large fortune, for the man performing such a sacrifice accurately, according to the prescribed rites, attains all his desires —114

The man who does so, is venerated by Vasu, Aditya, Marutgana, in the realm of Śiva, and attains emancipation after 800 kalpas —115

The man who performs this sacrifice of a lac of homas, with any object in view, attains his desire and goes to heaven, where he gets bliss —116

The man desirous of sons, obtains sons, one desirous of riches, gets riches, the devotee, eager for a wife, gets a beautiful wife, and if a maiden performs this sacrifice, she gets a good husband by virtue of it.—117
Further more, by the virtue of this sacrifice, a dethroned sovereign gets back his realm, the man hankering after prosperity gets prosperity, in fact, the devotee, desirous of anything, gets that thing. But the one, who performs it without any object in view, attains the Supreme Brahma — 118

III The 10 millions Homas

Lord Brahma has described the sacrifice of ten millions of homas, a hundred times more efficacious than the sacrifice of a lac of offerings. The money given away in Dakshina, and the effect and the result are a hundred times more than the last — 119

In performing this bigger sacrifice, invocation and dismissal of Devas should be done as before. The same mantras are to be used in ablutions, offering libations and giving charity. I shall now describe the special mode of preparing sacrificial pond, altar and pandal, pay attention to my words — 120

In the sacrifice of a crore of offerings, the receptacle should measure four hands and should be made of a conical shape, on a square base, and surrounded by three girdles, while the pond should have two openings — 121.

A wise man should make the first girdle two fingers high, the second three fingers, and the height as well as the thickness of the third one, should be four fingers. The thickness of the first and the second girdles should also be two fingers — 122-123

The receptacle should be one vitasti (half a cubit, or 12 fingers) in extent, but the height should be of 6 or 7 fingers. It should be raised in the centre as the back of a tortoise, and one finger high on the sides — 124

It should resemble the lips of an elephant in extent and in having a hole. Such will be the receptacle as regards all kinds of sacrificial ponds — 125

Over the girdles everywhere, an altar of 4 vitasti in measurement (i.e., 2 cubits or 1 yard) and of the shape of a peepal leaf, should be made. This is in the case of the sacrifice of a crore of offerings — 126

In this form of sacrifice the altar should be made square, measuring four vitasti and having three girdles. Their height and extent should be as indicated before — 127.

The pandal should be made of sixteen cubits in extent and should have 4 doorways. On the eastern gate, a Brāhmaṇa, proficient in the Rigveda, should be located —128

A Brāhmaṇa, versed in the Yajurveda, should be located in the south, one versed in the Sāmaveda in the west, one knowing the Atharva Veda in the north —129

Eight more Brāhmaṇas, well up in the Vedas and Vedāṅgas, should be made to officiate as Homa-offering priests. These twelve Brāhmaṇas should be sincerely honoured with cloths, sandal, garlands, and ornaments, as before —130

In the east, hymns from the Rātri-sūkta, Raudra and Pavamāna, and Sumanāgala mantras, for the peace of the universe, should be chanted by the Brāhmaṇa versed in the Rigveda and facing north —131

The Yajurvedi Brāhmaṇa, seated in the south, should recite the mantras relating to Śanti, God Indra, Saumya, Kuśmānda, &c —132.

The Sāmavedi Brāhmaṇa, sitting in the west, should sing the hymns of Suparna Vairāja, Agneya, Rudrasambhītā, Jyeṣṭhasāma, and peace chant —133

The Atharvavedi Brāhmaṇa, seated in the north, should read the following mantras —Śanti Sūkta, Saura, Sākunaka, Pauḍīka, Mahārāja —134

Five or seven Brāhmaṇas should perform the homa sacrifice as before, (the remaining Homakas helping them). The mantras relating to bath and the gift are the same as before —135

The Vasudhārā or the way of letting the stream of clarified butter fall in the fire from a vase is the only peculiar rite of the sacrifice of a lac of offerings (as mentioned before That should be done here also) One who performs this sacrifice of a crore of offerings, according to the prescribed rites, attains all his wishes and obtains the rank of Viṣṇu —136

He who reads or hears this description of these three sacrifices of the Grabhās (Planets), becomes purified of all sins and attains the rank of Indra —137

The benefits of this sacrifice are similar to those derived by the performance of 18,000 Āśvamedha sacrifices —138

Śiva has said that the sin of killing a crore of Brāhmaṇas and of making 10 crores of abortions, is washed off by the performance of this sacrifice —139
Magic and Sorcery

The sacrifice relating to the worship of the nine planets should be performed before the performance of the rites of Abhichāra (sorcery), Uchchhātana and Vasya Karma, &c — 140

[Note: Uchchātana = A magical incantation that causes a man to go away out of disgust. Vasya Karma = A magical spell that fascinates and subdues a foe.]

Otherwise, no rite has the desired effect, so this sacrifice of ten thousand offerings to the planets should necessarily be performed as a preliminary. — 141

In the sacrifice connected with Vasikaranam and Uchchātana, the sacrificial pond should be made of the measure of a handful (ell), it should be surrounded with three girdles, be circular in shape, and have one mouth, and the offering of the wood of Butea frondosa, sprinkled with honey, camphor, gṍrêchana and agar, dissolved in water, mixed with saffron, should be made — 142-143

An offering of woodapple (Baël) and lotuses, mixed with honey and clarified butter, should be made Brahmā has said that ten thousand offerings should be made in such sacrifices — 144

In a sacrifice for Vasikaranam, the offerings of woodapple (Baël) and lotuses should be made, and the Śumitriyāna Apa osadha mantra should be recited in offering Homa — 145

No sprinkling with holy waters or location of a pitcher of water should be made in these forms of sacrifices. A householder should bathe in the water mixed with herbs, dress in white, put on white flowers, worship the Brāhmaṇas with gold threads. They should also be given fine costumes and Dakṣinā of gold. A white cow should also be given — 146-147

This sacrifice subdues the worst of enemies, endears those who have no love, and dispels ills — 148

The sacrificial pond for the performance of the sacrifice intended for Abhichāra and Vidveṣana, should be triangular in shape, measuring one hand, surrounded by two girdles, and having openings towards the vertices — 149

[Note: Vidveṣana = A spell that causes friction.]

Then the Brāhmaṇas wearing red garland, red sandal, red sacred thread, red turban, and red raiments, should perform the sacrifice — 150

With three vessels containing the blood of the young crows before them, bones of the hawks in their left hand and sacrificial fuel in the other, and their hair loose, the Brāhmaṇas should perform the sacrifice, all the while thinking ill of the enemies at the time of making these offerings — 151

With the syanamantasa, ‘durmitriyastasmai santu hum phata,’ the razor should be sanctified, with this the image of the enemy should be cut piecemeal and offered to the fire — 152-153

Having performed the sacrifice of the Grahas, the proper Avichara sacrifice should be performed. Such is the rule for ‘Vidvesana’ sacrifice as well — 154

Such deeds only bear fruit in the present life and do not beget good results in the next, so a man, desirous of ultimate good, should not indulge in such deeds — 155

One who performs the worship of the stars, along with the prescribed sacrifices, without any object in view, goes to the clime of Vishnu, whence he never returns to this world — 156

One who hears or relates this to others, never suffers from any pain, owing to the evil influence of the planets or to the destruction of friends — 157

The children of the house in which these sacrifices are written down, never suffer from any ill, mental or physical, or any other calamity — 158

The sages are of opinion that this sacrifice of a crore of offerings begets fruits of many a sacrifice and dispels all ills, it is the giver of worldly prosperity and final emancipation. The sacrifice of a lac of offerings gives the benefit of the Saivismadhya sacrifice. The sacrifice performed in course of a twelve days and the sacrifice connected with the worship of stars, give equal benefits — 159-160

Thus I have told the mode of the sacrifices of the Nine Grahas and the Abhiseka in divine sacrifices (the sprinkling of the devotee with the holy waters). These are to be done to dispel all ills and hindrances to ceremonies of rejoicings. These purge all sins. One who reads or listens to it subdues all his foes and gets longevity and health — 161

Here ends the ninety-third chapter describing the mode of Navagraha homa janti.

CHAPTER XCIV.

Siva said — The image of the God Sun who causes the lotus to bud—should be made as seated on a lotus (Padmasana), with color like that of a lotus, with two hands, with a lotus in one hand and the other hand raised in the posture of giving blessings, and having seven horses in His chariot, drawn by seven reins — 1

The image of the Moon, the giver of boons, should be made in white color, dressed in white robes, seated on a white chariot, having a white horse for His conveyance, having two hands, one holding a club and the other raised, in the posture of giving blessings — 2

✓ The image of the Maṅgala should be made, having white hair, four hands, armed with a spear, a lance and club, with the fourth hand raised in the posture of giving blessings, wearing red robes and garland — 3

The image of the Mercury should be made yellow, dressed in yellow robes and wearing a yellow garland, with four hands armed with a sword, shield and club, and the fourth hand raised in the posture of giving blessings, and having a lion for His conveyance — 4

The Venus and the Jupiter should be made in white and yellow respectively. They should have four hands, holding staff, rosary, and kamandalu, and the fourth hand raised in the posture of giving blessings — 5

The Saturn should be of the colour and the lustre of an emerald, having a vulture for His conveyance and four hands armed with a lance, bow and arrow, and the fourth hand raised in the posture of giving blessings — 6

The image of Rāhu should be made, having a terrible mouth or appearance, seated on a blue-colored lion, having four hands, armed with a sword, a leather shield, a spear, and the fourth hand raised in the posture of giving blessings. The image of Kēṭu should be made of smoky color, with a vulture for His conveyance and having two hands—one hand holding a mace and the other raised in the posture of giving blessings, and having a distorted face — 7-8

All the planets should be made with a crown on their head, and the images should be two fingers high (or, of the height of one’s own finger). The mantras relating to the planets should be recited on the rosary 108 times each. (It may also mean that the size of the planets should be 108 fingers or digits in height. If the āṅgulī be one inch in length, the images will be nine feet high. If the measure of the āṅgulī be 3rd of an inch, then the height will be 8½ feet. The sense is obscure) — 9

Here ends the ninety-fourth chapter describing the iconography of the Planets.
CHAPTER XCV

Nárada said —O Lord, presiding over the Past and the Future, pray tell me about some other ordinance that may be the giver of happiness and emancipation —1

Hearing the above words of the sage, Lord Śiva, the knower of all things, understood the inclination of Nárada, and said “Nárada! this sacred bull, who is my principal attendant and who has become unified with me on account of his asceticism and knowledge of the Śruti and the Purāṇas, will explain to you the rituals connected with my ordinance (Māheśvara Dharma)”—2-3

Lord Mātaya said —Having said so, that Lord of the God of gods, vanished then and there Nárada also, being anxious to hear, asked Nandikesvara thus —O Nandikesvara, thou hast been ordered by Śiva, therefore, tell me the Māheśvara vṛata —4

Nandikesvara said —Hear with attention, O Brāhma! I shall tell you the Māheśvara vṛata. It is well-known in all the three worlds by the name of Śiva Chatudāsi —5

In the month of Mārgadāra, on the thirteenth day of the bright fortnight, the devotee should take his meals once and pray to Śiva with this Saṅkalpa mantra, “O Lord of all the Deities, I take refuge in Thee. Tomorrow, the Chatudāsi day, I shall observe a complete fast, without eating anything, and worship Śiva. I shall also give away a bull, made of gold, and then take my meals the next day.”—6-7

Having made this Saṅkalpa, the devotee should go to bed and then rise early on the next morning and worship Śiva along with His Consort (Umā), with white lotus flowers, sandal, etc —8

(1) The feet should be worshipped, after reciting नमः ‘Śrīvāya namah.’ (2) the head, after reciting नमः ‘Sarvātmāne namah’ (3) the eyes, after reciting नमः ‘Trumārya namah’ (4) the forehead, after reciting नमः ‘Haraye namah’ (5) the mouth, after reciting नमः ‘Indumukhāya namah’ (6) the throat after reciting नमः ‘Śrīkānsthāya namah’ (7) the ears, after reciting नमः ‘Śadyojātaya namah’ (8) the arms, after reciting नमः ‘Yāmadevīya namah’ (9) the heart, after reciting नमः ‘Aghorahṛidāya namah’ (10) the breasts, after reciting नमः ‘Tyatpuruṣāya namah’ (11) the stomach, after reciting नमः ‘Īśāntaya namah’ (12) the ribs, after reciting नमः ‘Anantadharmaṇāya namah’ (13) the waist, after reciting नमः ‘Jānabhūtāya namah’ (14) the thighs, after reciting नमः ‘Anante Vairāgyasinhāya namah’ (15) the knees should be worshipped, after reciting नमः ‘Anantavārvyājanāthaya namah’ (16) the legs, after reciting नमः ‘Pradānāya namah’ (17) the ankles, after reciting नमः ‘Vymātmāne namah’ (18) the hair, after reciting नमः ‘Vyomakesātmarāpāya namah’ (19) the back, after reciting नमः ‘Poṣṭyai namah’ (20) the ears, after reciting नमः ‘Poṣṭyai namah.’—9-13.
Then the devotee should give to the Brāhmaṇas a golden bull, along with a pitcher, full of water, white garments, Pañcharatna, various kinds of estables —14

Really good Brāhmaṇas should be invited and well-fed, after which curd mixed with clarified butter, saved from the sacrificial offerings, should be taken by the devotee, who should sleep on the ground, with his head towards the north. On the full moon-day, he should feed the Brāhmaṇas and then take his own meals in silence. Similarly, he should do on the fourteenth day of the dark fortnight —15-16

The worship should be performed in the same way all the fourteenth days of each fortnight of every month. Now the especial mantras to be recited in each month will be explained —17

Commencing with the month of Mārgasira, the mantras hereafter mentioned should be pronounced one by one —(1) Sankara naṃmah, (2) Karavraka naṃmah, (3) Tryambaka naṃmah, (4) Mahēsvara naṃmah, (5) Mahādeva naṃmah, (6) Sthāne va naṃmah, (7) Pasupataye naṃmah, (8) Nātha naṃmah, (9) Sambhava naṃmah, (10) Namaste Paramānanda, (11) Nāma Somārdhahārīna, (12) Bhimaya naṃmah I am at Thy Mercy. These names should be recited one by one, each month, from Mārgasira. The devotee should offer as Prasāna (1) cow's urine, (2) cow-dung, (3) milk, (4) curds, (5) clarified butter, (6) water mixed with kuśa-grass, (7) pañchagavyā, (8) woodapple (bael), (9) camphor, (10) agaru, (11) barley, (12) black-sesamum, on the Chaturdasi of each month —18-22

Note — The mantras to be recited in twelve months, beginning with Agraḥāyana, are given below —

(1) Sankara naṃmah — “Salutation to Sankara. I take refuge in Thee”
This should be pronounced in the month of Mārgasira.

(2) Karavraka naṃmah — “Salutation to Karavraka. I take refuge in Thee”
This should be pronounced in the month of Paṣaṇa.

(3) Tryambaka naṃmah — “To Tryambaka, in Māgha”

(4) Mahēsvara naṃmah — “To Mahēsvara, in Phālguṇa”

(5) Mahādeva naṃmah — “To Mahādeva, in Chaitra”

(6) Sthāne va naṃmah — “To Sthāne, in Vaśāśhṭha”

(7) Pasupataye naṃmah — “To Pasupataye; in Jyāśthā”

(8) Nātha naṃmah — “To Nātha; in Aśāśa”

(9) Sambhava naṃmah — “To Sambhava; in Brāvān”

(10) Paramānanda naṃmah — “To Paramānanda; in Bhaḍra”

(11) Somārdhahārīna naṃmah — “To Somārdhahārīna; in Āśvina”

(12) Bhimaya naṃmah — “To Bhimaya; in Kṛśṭi”

The worship of Śiva should be conducted from the month of Mārgaṣṭra onward, by offering the following flowers, turn by turn, viz. —(1)

Again, when the month of Kārttika arrives, the Brāhmaṇas should be fed with various kinds of eatables and offered garments, ornaments and garlands — (25)

Afterwards, the devotee should let loose a black bull, in conjunction with the Vedic rites. A golden image of Śiva and Pārvatī should be made and given away to a Brāhmaṇa, along with a bull and a cow. A bedstead, with the following things, should also be given away. Eight white pearls, sheets, pillows, and a vase, full of water — 26-27

The images of Śiva and Pārvatī should be placed in a copper vessel, full of rice, and then located on top of the pitcher of water, after which they should be given away to a Brāhmaṇa versed in the Vedas, observing ordinances and having a calm disposition — 28

It is best to give it to one acquainted with Sāmaveda. It should never and on no account be given to a hypocrite. Only one versed in the Vedas, knowing the Vedic principles, is fit to receive such an offering — 29

A Brāhmaṇa, free from deformity and of simple habits, should be worshipped, along with his wife, with garments, garlands and ornaments. These things might be given to the preceptor (Guru), if there be one, otherwise, to a really good Brāhmaṇa, free from all feeling of miserliness; for such a feeling leads one to the lower region — 30-31

One who observes the Śiva Chaturdāśī ordinance, according to these rites, gets the benefit of a thousand Āsvamedha sacrifices — 32

And the sins of killing a Brāhmaṇa and also against the parents, committed in this or in the previous life, are destroyed in a moment — 33

The devotee gets long life, health, domestic prosperity, and promotion in his husbandry. He then eventually goes near the Lord of four hands, whose chief attendant he becomes, and then after, passing crores of kalpas in the heaven, he becomes unified with Śiva — 34

Even the sage Brīhaspati, the Devas, like the mighty Indra, and Brahmā, cannot adequately describe the glories of this ordinance. Even I cannot do so with a crore of tongues. — 35

One who reads, hears or thinks about this ordinance becomes liberated from all his sins. The Divine Consorts also venerate it; therefore, a devotee should always observe it, free from all feelings of despise — 36.

The woman who observes this ordinance with the permission of her husband, son or the preceptor also attains bliss by the glory of Śiva. — 37.

_Here ends the ninety-fifth chapter describing the Śiva Chaturdāśī Vrata._
CHAPTER XCVI

Nandikesvara said —O Nārada! also hear the benefits that accrue to the devotee in his next life, by his relinquishing the fruits of this ordinance —1

O Sage! the ordinance (viṣṭa) should be commenced on any one of the following days, in the month of Mārgaśīrṣa the third, the twelfth, the eight or the fourteenth day of the bright fortnight, after invoking the Brāhmaṇas.—2

O Nārada! In other auspicious months also, the devotee should, to the best of his ability, feed the Brāhmaṇas with rice cooked in milk and mixed with sugar, and then satisfy them with Daksinā.—3

The prohibited grains of eighteen kinds and fruits and roots should be avoided for a period of one year, but there is no harm in taking anything in the form of a medicine. A golden image of Śiva and a bull should be made. The image of Dharmaśāja should be made similarly.—4

The following sixteen kinds of fruits should be made in gold, according to the means of the devotee, viz. —pumpkins, citrons, egg-plants, bread-fruits, mangoes, hog-plains, wood-apples, India-grains, cucumbers, cocoa-nuts, the holy figs, the jujubes, the lemons, the plantains, saffron, and pomegranates —5-6

The following should be made of silver, according to the means of the devotee, viz. —Muni (a kind of root vegetable), Emblica officinalis rose apple, tamarind, Karaundā, Kankolaberry, cardamom, cotton, bamboo, Kutaja, Śamī, Udumbarā coconuts, grapes, two kinds of egg-plants —7-8.

The fruits of the following should be made of copper, according to the means of the devotee —Palms, Agasti grandiflora, Kāyaphala, Gāmbhārī, esculent root, the red esculent root, a bulbous root, svarnakṛśā, cucumber, chitravalli, Śālma, mango, liquorice, kidney-bean, fig tree, patola (a species of cucumber) —9-11.

Two pitchers of water, covered with cloth, should be placed on grain, and a bed should also be arranged and covered with cloth —12

On some sacred day, the devotee should give away all these things as well as three food plates, the images of Dharmaśāja, Śiva, with that of the sacred bull and a cow, to a peaceful Brāhmaṇa couple who may have a big family, having first worshipped them —13

"As the numberless Devas dwell in all kinds of fruits, so let my devotion be to Śiva, as a consequence of my performing this vrata of relinquishing the fruits of my actions."—14
"Siva and Dharmarāja are known to be the great Givers of boons; let Them therefore confer boons on me for giving away these likenesses, together with these appropriate fruits in charity"—15

"As in the devotees of Siva are always (to be found) endless fruits, so let me also have fruits endless, in life after life"—16

"I do not make any (invidious) distinction between Siva, Viṣṇu, Sun, Brahmā, let the Lord Siva, the soul of the universe, bless me with eternal happiness"—17

The articles (to be given away) should be given to the Brāhmaṇa, having first decorated him. The devotee may also give a bedding, with all its requisites, if he had the means to do so, otherwise he may only give away the fruits mentioned before. The golden images of Siva and Dharmarāja being given to the Brāhmaṇa, with the pitchers of water, he should feed himself on food devoid of oil, by observing the vow of silence, and should also feed the Brāhmaṇas, according to his means—20

This is the way of a devotee of Viṣṇu, Sun or a Yogi or a Bhagwat to relinquish the fruits of their actions, as laid down by the Brāhmaṇas versed in the Vedas—21

"O Sage Nārada! this ordinance should be observed, to the best of their ability, by the womenfolk, too. There is no ordinance like this that can give such everlasting boons in this world, as well as in the next—22

"O Sage! the devotee remains in the region of Siva for as many thousand Yugas as there are atoms of gold, silver and copper, in this world, when these latter are ground to a powder—23

This ordinance washes off all the lifelong sins of the devotee. He never has the pain of losing his son, and he attains the region inhabited by Gods—24

The poor man who hears or reads this, either in some sacred place (place of a God), or in the house of a pious man, goes to the region of Siva where he gets into the place of Deities and enjoys, after being liberated from all his sins—25

Here ends the ninety-sixth chapter describing the Vrata of Relinquishment of all results (of one's actions).

CHAPTER XCVII

Nārada said—Nandikesvara! Pray describe to me the ordinance that may be the giver of peace, health and everlasting benefits to the people.—1.
Nandikesvara said — That which is the eternal abode of the soul of the universe, is known as the Sun, the Fire and the Moon in this world; by the worship of these a man attains happiness. The devotee observing it should always take his meals at night time only on Sundays. — 2-3

In the case of the asterism Hasti falling on Sunday, the devotee should take his meals only once on Saturday, purging his heart of all vanity. — 4

On Sunday night, the devotee, after feeding good Brähmanas, should draw a lotus of twelve petals with red sandal. To the east of it he should place, after salutations, the Sun (Sūrya), to the south-east Divākara, to the south Vivavāna, to the south-west Bhaga, to the west Varuna, to the north-west Mahendra, to the north Āditya, to the north-east Śanta. In the forepart of the lotus, the horses of the Sun should be inscribed, in the south the Aiyamā Devas, in the west Mārtanda, and on the northern petal Ravi Bhāskara on the pericarp of the lotus. — 5-9

Afterwards, red flowers, red sandal, sesame, mixed with water, should be poured on the lotus, and the following mantra should be recited at the time. — 10

"O Divākara (the giver of day)! You are the soul of time, creation and the Vedas. You have your face turned to each direction. You are of the form of Indra and Agni, therefore shelter me." — 11

"Agnumile namastubhamasatavyojya cha bhāskara" "Agni aṣṭāḥ varada na aste jñātām pate." With this mantra Arghya should be offered, and the Deity dismissed. He should take his meals at night free from oil. When a year has elapsed in this way, he should make a lotus of gold and an image with two hands. — 12-13

He should then give away in charity a milk cow, with her horns covered with gold, the hoofs with silver, along with her calf, and a milking vessel of bell metal, while the lotus and image should be placed in a pot of copper completely full of molasses. — 14

The devotee, after worshiping the Brähmana with red cloth, sandal, garland, incense, etc., should bestow his gifts, viz. — the lotus and the image, etc., on him, he having a large family, and being free from deformity and pride, and able to restrain his passions and the object of charity in many other vratas. — 15

At that time, the devotee should utter the following words —

"Nāmaḥ namah pāpavītānāya,
"Vīśvātmāne saptānāmānāya,
"Śāmargyājurdhāmidhā Vīdbatre,
"R♭havabhipataya jagatsavītre,"
"O Dispeller of sins, the Soul of the universe, your chariot drawn by seven horses, the vase of Rīka, Yaju and Sāma Vedas, the boat of the ocean of universe, I salute Thee oft and often"—16

One who observes these rituals and keeps up this viyāta for a year, is freed from all sins and goes to the solar region fanned by chānæra—17

On the consumption of his store of piety he becomes the sovereign of the seven Dvipas, and never gets pain, suffering or disease. He becomes most powerful and virtuous—18

O Nārada! the woman who is devoted to her husband, God and preceptor, and observes this ordinance, and eats at night only on Sundays, undoubtedly reaches the solar region, which is honoured by the Devas—19

The person who reads or hears, or approves of the reading of this ordinance, also goes to the region of India where he is served by the Devas, and remains there for innumerable kalpas—20

Here ends the ninety-seventh chapter describing the Sunday ordinance (Vrata)

CHAPTER XCVIII

Nandikeshvara said—Nārada! I shall now describe to you the way how the ordinance of Sankrānti, which in the next world gives everlasting boons of all kinds, is to be brought to a close—1

The Sankrānti ordinance should be observed on the day of equinoxes or solstices. The day, prior to Sankrānti, the devotee should have his meals only once, and, on the following day, he should bathe in water mixed with sesame, after brushing his teeth—2

On the day of the Sankrānti, the devotee should draw on the earth a lotus of eight petals with sandal, in the centre of which penchairs should be made, where the presence of the Sun should be invoked—3

The Sun should be located in the pencharp, Āditya in the east, and salutations should be made in the south, after reciting "Ūṣṇārchiṣe namah, Ringmandalāya namah "Savitre namah" in the south-west, "Tapanāya namah" in the west, Bhaga in the north-west should be located and worshipped constantly Mārtanda should be located in the north and Viṣnū in the north-east. These should be adored with incense, flowers, fruits and eatables, on an altar—4-6

A golden vessel of clarified butter, with a pitcher of water, should be given away to the Brāhmaṇa, and the lotus should also be made of gold, according to the means of the devotee, and given away to the Brāhmaṇa.

Afterwards, the Arghya, consisting of water, sandal and flowers, should be placed on the floor as an oblation to the Sun, by reciting the following mantra: “Viśvāya Viśvāmapāya Viśvadhāmme Svayambhubhe Namānanta namo dhatे Riksām Yajusāmpati.” This ritual should be observed each month, or at the end of the year. All the twelve vratas should be done at the same time — 8-9

Then libations of rice, cooked in milk and sugar, should be poured into the fire and Brāhmaṇa should be satisfied with estables. On that occasion, 12 pitchers of water, with a few gems, 12 golden lotus flowers and 12 milch cows of gentle disposition, or only 8, 7 or 4 such cows (in the last case, the cows being dressed and garlanded), according to the means of the devotee, should be given to a poor and deserving Brāhmaṇa, after their horns being covered with gold, then hoofs with silver, along with milking pots of bell metal. In case, the devotee be a very poor man, he may give only one milch cow — 10-11

Afterwards, an image of earth, along with that of the serpent Śeṣa, should be made in gold, silver, copper or even of kneaded flour, according to the means of the devotee, and given away to the Brāhmaṇa, along with a golden image of the Sun. As far as possible, no miserliness should be exercised in this ritual, for the man doing so, in spite of having riches undoubtedly goes to hell — 12

Nārada: One who observes this ordinance, enjoys in heaven the honour and respect by all the Gandharvas, for as long as Indra and other gods, earth and the seven oceans, the Himālayas and other mountains survive — 13

His piety being consumed, the devotee is born, in the beginning of creation, a sovereign of good family, endowed with all kingly virtues and blessed with handsome form (devoid of deformity) and many a child, wife, friend and relation — 14

One who reads about this Sūrya Sankrānti with devotion, or hears or advises others to read it, is honoured by the Devas in the realm of Indra — 15

Here ends the ninety-eighth chapter describing the mode of bringing the Sankrānti vrata to a close.
CHAPTER XCIX

Nandikeśvara said — Nārada! I shall now relate to you Viṣṇu vrata, known as the Vīhūttī-Drāḍāśī vrata, which is held in veneration by all the Devās" — 1

On the tenth day of the bright fortnight, in the month of Kārttika, Chaṭtra, Vaiśākha, Mārgaśīra, Phāḷgūṇa or Asāḍha, the devotee should have a light meal, and in the day time, after performing his evening prayers, make the following resolution — 2

"Oh God, on the eleventh day I shall keep a rigid fast and worship Janārdana. I shall break the fast on the twelfth day, in company of the Brāhmaṇas — 3

"O Keśava! let there be no hindrance in the observance of my fast." He should utter "Om namo Nārāyaṇaya namah" (Om, Salutations be to Nārāyaṇa), before retiring to bed — 4

On getting up in the morning, he should recite Gāyatri 108 times, and then worship Lord Viṣṇu with white sandal and flowers — 5

The feet should be worshipped after reciting "Vīhūṭtayya namah," the knees after reciting "Āśhākāya namah," the thighs after reciting "Śivāya namah," the waist after reciting "Vīvamūrttayya namah," the male organ of generation after reciting "Kandarpāya namah," the hands after reciting "Ādityāya namah," the stomach after reciting "Dāmavāya namah," the breasts after reciting "Vāsudevāya namah," the chest after reciting "Mādhavāya namah," the neck after reciting "Uṭkantihīna namah," the mouth after reciting "Śiddharāya namah," and the hair after reciting "Keśavāya namah," the back after reciting "Śrāṅgadharāya namah," the ears after reciting "Vaiḍāya namah," the head after reciting "Śarvātmane namah," with His other names, viz., "Śaṅkapāṇye namah," "Chakrapāṇye namah," "Aṣṭipāṇaye namah," "Gadāpāṇaye namah," and "Padmapāṇaye namah." — 6-9

A golden fish should be made and also a lotus of gold, according to the means and wishes of the devotee, and a pitcher, full of water, should be placed in front of it — 10

Afterwards, a vessel, full of molasses and covered with a white cloth, together with some sesame, should be placed. The devotee should keep up the night with the recitation of Itihāsas — 11

On the following morning the golden fish and lotus, along with the pitcher of water, should be given away to some good Brāhmaṇa with a large family — 12
At that time, the devotee should pray "As Thou, O Lord Visnu, art never devoid of any prosperity (Vibhūti), so please extricate me from the meshes and manifold calamities of this world"—13

The devotee should give away one in each month of the year the golden images of the ten incarnations (of the supreme God) as well as of Dattātṛeya and Vedavyāsa, along with a lotus of gold. During this period the devotee should avoid the company of rogues and the wicked—14

After observing the fast like this for twelve months, on each Dwādaśī, the devotee at the conclusion of the year, should give away to his preceptor a bedding, a mount of salt and a cow—15

A man of means may also give away a village or a house and honor his preceptor with diverse raiments and ornaments—16

Other Brahmans should be feasted, according to the means of the devotee and satisfied by being given clothes, jewels, money, ornaments, cows, &c. A man with limited means should give only as much as he can afford—17

A very poor man, but having sincere devotion to Lord Mādhava, may worship Lord Visnu for a couple of years with flowers alone—18

One who observes the Vibhūti-dvādaśī ordinance like this, liberates himself from all sins and also frees hundreds of his ancestors. He is not oppressed with grief, disease or poverty during thousands of births. He is always born as a devotee of Visnu or Śiva, and, after spending 108 thousand yugas in heaven, is born as a king—19-21

Here ends the ninety-ninth chapter describing the Visnu vrata

CHAPTER C

Nandikāśvara said—In the days gone by, during the Rāhantara Kalpa, there lived a mighty king, as illustrious as the Sun, who was known by the name of Puṣpavāhana—1

O Nārada! Brahmā, being pleased with his asceticism, presented him with a lotus of gold that could move about at will—2

(With its help) the king began to wander about at his pleasure in the seven dvīpas as well as in the abode of the gods, in company of his citizens—3

At the beginning of the kalpa, the kingdom of this king, who lived in the lotus, was the seventh dvīpa—on account of the great praise and honour given to it by the people, it came to be known as Puskara—4.
CHAPTER C

The King was called Puṣpavāhana by the Devas and the Dānavas on account of his having received the lotus for his conveyance —5

Owing to his powers, acquired by the practice of penances, no place in the three worlds was inaccessible to him, seated on his lotus given by Lord Brahmā. His queen, Lāvaryavati, was worthy to be honoured by thousands of ladies. In beauty and womanly virtues, she had no equal. She was like the Goddess Pārvati, the noble Consort of the Lord Śiva —6

The king became the father of ten thousand virtuous princes, who all were renowned in archery. The king began to wonder at his incomparable prosperity. One day, seeing the great sage Pracheta, approaching, he addressed him thus —7

"O Sage! how is it that there is such an abundance of prosperity in my house? How have I got a queen who is venerated even by the Devas, and who has no equal even among the goddesses? Why has Brahmā become so much pleased with my little asceticism as to present me with such a lotus, (vast wonderful), that when myriads of kings, with ministers, elephants, people, and chariots entered into it, they appear small indeed, like so many galaxies of twinkling stars with the moon herself in the immeasurable expanse of the firmament —8-9

"Hence, O Lord, what is the use of being born in the separate womb of the mother? To obtain endless (good) results, I have performed many a religious rite. Now please tell us what is of ultimate good to me, my wife and sons" —10

Hearing the above words of the king, the sage, after meditation, spoke the following words, about the wonderful former lives of the king —

"King! Previously you were born in the house of a hunter, and you led a life of sin from day to day —11

"Your body was hard, rough and also offensively stinking. Snakes coiled all over it. You had no friend, nor sons, neither kinsmen, nor sisters, nor parents. All were abused and cursed by you. This beloved consort of yours was also against you —12

"Then the land was visited by a terrible drought, when you were overwhelmed with hunger, but could not get grain, fruits, flesh or any kind of eatables to quench it, though you searched for them everywhere —13.

"On that occasion you came to a tank, full of muddy banks, but which was abundantly full of lotus flowers. You culled a heap of lotuses out of that tank and carried them home to Vālidā (the city in which you lived) —14
"You wandered about the whole city to sell those lotuses, but could not find a purchaser. Eventually you were overpowered with hunger and fatigue — 15

"And you went and sat with your wife in the courtyard of some one whence in the night you heard some nice and auspicious sound — 16

"You went to the spot whence the sound was heard with your wife. There you saw the worship of Lord Visnu conducted in a pandal — 17

"The worship in question was the concluding chapter of Vībhūti-dvadaśī ordinance, in the month of Māγha, which was kept up by a courtesan, named Anangavati. At that time, she was giving away the mount of salt, the bedding along with other things, the decorated image of the merciful Lord Visnu and the golden Kalpa tree, to her preceptor. On seeing all that, you said to yourself, 'What would I now do with these lotus flowers, I should better offer them to Viṣṇu' — 18-20

"O King! thus devotion came to the hearts of both of you, and you worshipped the Lord as well as the mount of salt, the bedding, and even the earth with your lotus flowers — 21

"The courtesan was very much pleased with your devotion and offered you 300 gold coins which both of you did not accept, as you were both then filled with sattvo-guna (i.e., your hearts became pure,) at which the courtesan became still more pleased with you, had four kinds of delicious foods brought and asked you to eat. You again declined to partake of her hospitality, and said, 'We shall have food at some other time. We are exceedingly glad to-day with your acquaintance and the keeping fast. Hitherto we have been carrying a vicious life and have been sinners all along.' By her contact you had then acquired some virtue — 22-25

"In that way, you kept up all the night with that courtesan and, on the following morning, she gave the mount of salt and the bedding as well as villages to her preceptor and to a dozen Brāhmaṇas, garments, ornaments, kamandalu and cows — 26-27

"After that, she fed her friends, poor men, blind men, misers, comppeers and kinsmen, and at the same time she also honoured in the same way and dismissed you both — 28

"King! owing to this worship of Keśava by lotus flower, the same hunter and his wife have been born in the persons of yourself and your consort. You have been freed of all your sins by the virtue of your little self denial and purity of heart. Hence this wonderful lotus moving at will. This has been given to you by Vâmanasvarasvamedha, the Lord of creation, in the person of four-faced Brahmā, because he was pleased with you—29-31

"That courtesan is now the rival of Rati, the wife of Cupid, and is known as Priti. She is the giver of happiness to the womanfolk, and is venerated by the Devas—32

"King! Even now abandon this Puskarā-ājīva and observe the vibhūti-dvādaśī fast on the banks of the Ganges, so that you may attain Nirvāṇa"—33

Nandikeśvara said—"Nārada! That sage vanished then and there, after telling all that to the king, and the latter observed the ordinance, as dictated—34

"Nārada! The devotee, observing this ordinance, should keep up the penance and perform the rites with molasses of any kind whatsoever, as prescribed, for 12 months, and give alms to the Brāhmaṇas, without any feeling of miserliness. Keśava is pleased with devotion alone—35-36

"One who reads, listens to or produces in others a desire to observe this ordinance, which dispels all sins, remains in the heaven for a hundred crores of years"—37

Here ends the hundredth chapter describing the Vibhūti-dvādaśī-vratam

CHAPTER CI

Nandikeśvara said—"Nārada! Hear, I am now going to tell you about the sixty ordinances, as explained by the Lord Śiva and which dispel great sins—1

The ordinance, known as, (1) Deśa-Vrata, is the dispeller of all sins. The observer of it should have his meal only in the night for a year, after which he should give away one cow, quad and trident, all made of gold along with a pair of clothes, to a Brāhmaṇa having a large family. One who does so becomes united with Śiva and lives in his region—2-3

The devotee keeping up the (2) Rudra-Vrata should, for a year, have only one meal a day, after which he should give away one bull of gold and a cow of sesamum. This observance is also the destroyer of ills and helps the devotee to go to the region of Śiva, and raises him to the rank of Śiva—4

One who gives away a bull and a blue lotus, made of gold, as well as a vessel full of sugar, and lives on nightly meal only for a year, eating in a secluded place, obtains the rank of Visnu. This is known as (3) Līlā-Vrata — 5

He, giving up of all unguents and giving away of nice and clean cooking utensils, in the four months, beginning with Āśāḍha leads the devotee to the realm of Visnu. This observance is known as (4) Prītī-Vrata, because it pleases everybody — 6

One who observes the (5) Gaurī-Vrata, in the month of Chaitra, by invoking the pleasure of the goddess, with the words, “Gaurī me privatām,” and by giving up honey, milk, curds, clarified butter, molasses, and similar articles, gives fine cloths, and the vessels full of sugarcane juice, &c., and worships the Brahmāna with his wife, goes to the realm of Pārvati — 7-8

The (6) Kāmu-Vrata, the destroyer of all woes should be observed on the thirteenth day of Paua. The devotee should take his meal at night and give away to a Brahmāna, a golden tree of Aśoka, ten fingers in height after covering it with a cloth and pieces of sugarcane. He should invoke the pleasure of Pradyumna, with the words “Pradyumnah priyatām” at the time of giving it away. By doing so, the devotee resides without care and anxiety in the region of Visnu, till the end of the kalpa — 9-10

(7) Śiva-Vrata should be observed during the four months of Āśāḍha, &c, in course of which the devotee should not get his nails, &c., trimmed. He should avoid the use of brinjals and give away to a Brahmāna a pitcher full of honey, clarified butter and golden brinjal in the month of Kārtika. By doing so, he goes to the realm of Rudra — 11-12

One who abstains from flowers during winter (i.e., the seasons of Hemanta and Śūdra) and in the month of Phālguna, and gets these flowers of gold made according to his means and gives them away in charity at dusk, after invoking the pleasure of Śiva and Visnu, with the words “Priyatām Śiva-Kesavam,” attains final beatitude. This is known as (8) Saumya-Vrata — 13-14

(9) Saubhāgya-Vrata should be kept up by avoiding, on the third day of every month, beginning from Phālguna, the use of salt for a year. At the conclusion of the ordinance, he should give to a Brahmāna couple a properly equipped bedstead, a house with all its necessary appurtenances, after showing due honour to them, and should invoke the pleasure of the goddess, with the words, “Bhavānt priyatām.” By doing so, he resides for a hundred kalpas in the realm of Pārvati — 15-16

The devotee who maintains the vow of silence in the evenings for a year and at the end of it gives a jar of clarified butter, a pair of clothes, sesamum, and a bell to a Brähmana, goes to the domain of Sarasvatī—the Goddess of letters—and is liberated from the cycle of birth. This is known as (10) Sārāsvatī ordinance—the giver of beauty and learning—17-18

One who worships Lakṣmī—the Goddess of wealth—and keeps the fast on the fifth day of a month, for a year, and at the end of it gives away a cow, along with a lotus of gold, goes to the kingdom of Viṣṇu and is always born in good circumstances. This is called the (11) Sampada-Vrata and is the destroyer of all ills—19-20

One who washes the floor in front of Viṣṇu or Śiva for a full year and then gives away a cow with a pitcher of water, is born a king on this earth, ten thousand times, and at the end goes to the realm of Śiva. This is known as (12) Ayuv-Vrata, and is the giver of all desires—21-22

One who takes his meal once a day, in silence, bereft of vice for a full year and salutes the prepuce tree, the sun and the Ganges together, and at the end of the ordinance adores the Brähmana with his consort, having given them a golden tree with three cows, attains the benefit of Advamedha sacrifice. This is called the (13) Kṛtu-Vrata—the giver of fame and prosperity—23-24

The observer of the (14) Śima-Vrata should make an altar of cow-dung bathe Śiva or Viṣṇu with clarified butter, worship them with uncooked rice and flowers, for a year. At the end of the year, the devotee should give away a lotus of gold, eight fingers in height, with a cow of sesamum to a Brähmana versed in the Śima-Veda. As a result, the devotee is respected in Śiva loka—25-26

One who takes only one meal a day on the 9th day of a month and then gives to a virgin, according to his means, a pair of clothes embroidered with gold and raiments of silk, and a lion of gold to a Brähmana, gets a handsome form and he is never defeated by his foes and lives for a considerable time in the realm of Śiva. This is known as (15) Vira-Vrata—the giver of all prosperity to women kind—27-28

One who takes milk only on each full moon day, for a year, and at its conclusion, after performing Śrīdha, gives away five milk cows, along with pitchers of water and cloths of tawny colour, goes to the domain of Viṣṇu, where he saves hundreds of his ancestors and becomes the King of Kings at the end of a kalpa. This is called (16) Pitṛ-Vrata—29-30

One who voluntarily gives drinking water to the needy, from the beginning of Chaitra for four months, and after it gives away a big water jar (Manika), with grain, clothes, gold and a pot containing sesameum, goes to the region of Brahmā and becomes a king at the end of a kalpa. This is called the (17) Ananda-Vrata — 31-32

One who bathes in Panchāmrta for a year, and then gives away a conch, Panchāmrta and a cow to a Brāhmaṇa, goes to the realm of Śiva and becomes a king at the end of a kalpa. This is called the (18) Dhṛṣṭi-Vrata — 33-34

One who reads, or relates about these sixty ordinances, remains the lord of Gandharvas, for a period of one hundred Manvantaras — 84

Nārada! I have related to you about the sixty ordinances, now let me know what more you desire to hear, which is for the benefit of the world. I shall tell you all. What may I not say to my favoured ones?

Here ends the one hundred and first chapter describing the 60 Vratas and their results.

CHAPTER CII

Nandikesvara said — Nārada! There cannot be purity of body and mind without bathing, therefore to keep the mind refreshed it is essential to bathe first of all — 1

"Om Namo Nārāyanāya" is the principal mantra, by the recitation of which the tirtha should be conceived in the water in which bath is to be taken, whether that water is taken out from the main source (e.g., river), or well, tank, etc. — 2

[Note — (a) Tirtha — A holy place, a place of water
(b) Namo Nārāyanāya — Salutations to Nārāyan
(c) This means that a person bathing at a well or elsewhere — other than in the sacred waters, e.g., the Ganges, the Narmadā, &c — if one recites the above formula with devotion and philosophically conceives and invokes the presence of some sacred tirtha in his bathing water, his fervent devotion fulfils his object. A good bath in a pure and running stream is essential to refresh the mind thoroughly. The Ganges, the Narmadā, are undoubtedly the best of the rivers for the purpose from many points of view, and consequently so much sanctity is attached to such invigorating streams. A true Aryan is expected to bathe daily in such streams, but every one is not so situated as to have the benefit of such a bath daily. Those, therefore, who are not so placed, may bathe as stated above which would fulfill their duty of bathing unavoidably in a place other than a tirtha, for under the influence of a fervent devotion they will feel as if they were bathing in some sacred waters, and the feeling of sanctity that attaches in the mind of an Aryan to invigorating streams would be kept evergreen which would take him oftener to such tirthas.

Briefly speaking, therefore, a man should bathe daily to refresh his mind. He should bathe in a pure and fresh stream, as far as possible, barring which he should work up his devotion to help him in not breaking the rule and in keeping his mind refreshed and his desire fixed on some sacred stream.

He should put on the rings of kusa grass and rinse his mouth with a little water—according to the prescribed form—and then with a calm mind he should conceive within a square, measuring four hands, the sacred Ganges and invoke Her there thus—“O Ganges! Thou art born from the foot of Viṣṇu, thou art a Viṣṇu force, and loved by Viṣṇu, Thou art Viṣṇu-devata, ward my sins off from the time of my bath to death. The Śrī crowes of tirthas of heaven, earth and sky are absorbed in Thee, as stated by Vāyu—3-5.

O Ganges! the Devas call Thee Nandini, Nalini, Dakshā, Prithvī, Vibhāga, Viśvakāyā, Amriti, Śrīvi, Vidyādhau, Suprāṣānti, Viśva-praśādini, Kseṣā, Jāñnavi, Śantu, Śantiprādayani, these, too, are thy epithets, and one who recites these sacred names with true devotion, at the time of his bath, finds Tripāthagāminī (going three ways) Ganga there.”—6-8 (Note—Nandini—Lit gladdening. An epithet of the Ganges, for Her waters are so refreshing and Her flow so pleasing.

Nalini—Lit a lotus plant. A place abounding in lotuses. The intoxicating juice of the coconut. The Ganges, for Her waters are so invigorating.

Dakṣā—Lit one who moves or acts quickly. The Ganges, because Her stream is so rapid and Her waters infuse freshness and vigour so quickly.

Prithvī—Lit Earth, one of the five elements. The Ganges, because She is so invigorating. There can be no life without five elements, and the life cannot be sustained without there being some vigour.

Vibhāga—Lit a bird. An arrow. The Ganges, because she flows so swiftly.

Viśva-kāyā—This is a compound word made up of Viṣva—universe and kāyā—Capital, abode. Principal, Body. The expression Viśva-kāyā—Capital, abode, body or principal (tirtha) of the universe, and is an epithet of the Ganges, for she is the Capital of all the Aryan tirthas. She is the abode of pure Aryan, who in their lifetime pass their days in contemplation on Her banks and their remains ultimately find an abode in the sacred waters. She is the principal tirtha of the universe. She is the body of the universe, in the sense that water is one of the 5 elements in the body, and the water, as such an element, means purest water. The Ganges water being so best can be compared with the purest water as one of the elements.)
Viśvakāya, as one word, may also mean produced from the body of Śiva. A for Viśva is and epithet of Śiva also. It is said that the Ganges fell on the head of Śiva from the heaven, and then she moved on to the world below, which is a simple fact, for the clouds hang about in the heavens and discharge themselves in form of snows on the lofty peaks of mountains. The Kailāsa peak in the Himalayas is the region of perpetual snows, where the snow being crushed by its own weight flows downward, and reaching a certain level is converted into water which in its turn flows onwards in form of a river. Now, Kailāsa is the abode of Śiva, and the Ganges has its source in the Himalayas near it. The snows of Kailāsa being the chief feeder of the river, Ampita.—Lit. imperishable, beautiful, agreeable, final beatitude, nectar of immortality, beverage of the Gods, sweet. An epithet of the Ganges, because she is imperishable, beautiful, agreeable in the sense of refreshing. She is considered by the Aryans to be the giver of final beatitude. Her water is sweet and is often compared with the Nectar of the gods. The Ganges, on account of her purificatory properties, is regarded as such.

Śiva.—Lit. final beatitude, born of Śiva.

Vidyadharī.—Lit a class of demi-gods. The Ganges, on account of her purificatory properties, is regarded as such.

Supraśāntā.—The giver of tranquility. Serene.

Viśva Prasādini.—The purifier of the universe.

Ksema.—The giver of happiness and comfort.

Jānīvī.—The Ganges, when brought down from heaven by the austerities of Bāgavī, was forced to flow over earth to follow him to the lower regions. In its course it inundated the sacrificial ground of the King Jānīvī who got very much vexed and swallowed the stream, but his wrath was appeased by the prayers of the Gods, sages and Bāgavī, and he discharged the current from his ears. The Ganges is therefore regarded as his daughter and is called Jānīvī.

Sānti-pradāyini.—The giver of peace.

Sāntā.—The peaceful.

One should hold water in both the hands, and after 7 times reciting the mantras mentioned above, sprinkle it on his head 3, 4, 5 and 7 times and then bathe, after rubbing some earth on his body with proper invocation thus—

"O Earth! trodden by the horse (Asvākrāntu) and the chariot (Rathākānti) and belonging to the base of the temple of Viṣṇu (Viṣnu-kānti) dispel my sins stored from generations."—10

"O Earth! Kri-ṇa hast dug Thee out by assuming the form of the wild boar with a hundred hands. Thou art the element employed when empowered by the mantra of Kaśyapa in the creation of all beings, by Brahma. By your contact (as you encircle my body) purify my body of all sins.—11

"O Earth, in Thee are all things. Thou givest us nourishment Thou art the source of all lokes (worlds). I salute Thee."—12

After thus taking his bath, one should again rinse his mouth and change his clothes, putting on white garments and present libations of water as follows. -13
CHAPTER CII

"Devas, Yakṣas, Nāgas, Gandharvas, Apsaras, Asuras, ferocious serpents, suparnas (a class of bird-like beings of a semi-Divine character), trees, jackals &c., the beings living in the air, the beings living in water, the beings traversing in the sky, the beings without any one to offer them libations, the pious ones, I offer you all these libations. Libations to the Devas should be made with the sacred thread on the right shoulder—13-15

Then libations should be offered with devotion to the manes, sons of Brahmā and the Rṣis—"Sanaka, Sananda, Saudāna, Kapila, Bodhu, Pañchasikha, receive and be gratified with the libations I offer you"—16-17

Afterwards, Manjhu, Nīla, Angulī, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Piṭchetā, Vaśisṭha, Bhrigu, Nārada, Devamīs and Brahmānīs should be offered libations with uncooked rice and water—18

Then, with the sacred thread on the left shoulder and reclining on the left knee the Pithis, Agnevāta, Saumyā, Havīṣmanta, Usmapa, Sukālina, Bhrīsaḍa, and Ājyapa, should be offered libations with water, sesamum and sandal, &c—19-20

After reciting the names which are synonyms of Yama, viz., Dharmārāja, Mrityu, Antaka, Vaivaswata, Kala, Savabhūtaksaya, Audumbarn, Dadhna, Nila, Parameṣṭhi, Vrīkodara, Chitta and Chitragnupta libations should be offered to him, and then after holding the Kuda in hand as prescribed, libations to the manes should be offered by the wise—21-22.

After reciting the names and the gotras of fathers and maternal grandfathers, libations should be offered to them, after which the following mantis should be uttered with devotion—23

"Those who may be my kith and kin, those who may have been my kith and kin in some other previous birth, may feel gratified by the libations that I offer them"—24

After this, the devotee should again rinse his mouth and draw the figure of a lotus in front of him on which libations of water (arghya), mixed with uncooked rice, flowers and red sandal should be offered to the Sun, after which His (Sun's) names should be recited—25

"I salute Thee, O Sun! Thou art Viṣṇu, Thou art the mouth of Viṣṇu, Thou hast thousands of rays, Thou art full of lustre and potency"—26

"O Śiva! O Lord of all, O Father of all! I salute Thee. O Lord of the universe, whose body is painted with sandal, I salute Thee"—27
"O Thou, seated on a lotus, salutations be to Thee, adorned with earrings and bracelet, O Lord of all the worlds! Thou bringest light to the worlds! I salute Thee."—28

"Thou seest good and bad deeds of every one, always Thou pervades all! O Satya Deva! salutations be to Thee, Thou, O Bhaaskara! be propitious to me—29

"O day-maker! I salute Thee." After thus saluting the Sun, the devotee should circumambulate three times, and then, after touching a Brhadhrana, cow and gold, should go to the temple of Visnu—30.

Here ends the one hundred and second chapter describing the method of bathing

CHAPTER CII

Nandikeswara said—Nara! I shall now relate to you what the sage Markandeya narrated to Yudhisthira about Prayaga, in the days gone by—1

Yudhisthira, the son of Kunti became the Lord of the world after the great Mahabharta war. He was very much depressed by the grief of the death of his kinsmen. He said to himself—"King Duryodhana, the master of armies of eleven akshauhinis, and the other kings who were his allies, are slain, causing me much pain and anguish, and we, five brothers, sons of Pandu, are alive under the shelter of Lord Krishna—2-4

"I have killed Bhishma, Drona, the mighty Karna, the King Duryodhana, our kinsmen and other kings, who considered themselves brave soldiers and heroes! O Govinda! what is now the good of my life, and how and why should I rule the empire?—5-6

"Are you!" Thus oppressed with his thoughts, the mighty King Yudhisthira became very much despondent, and his head bending downwards he fainted. When he came back to his senses, he fell into thought, "Which could be the best religious act that would wash off all my sins, and which could be the sacred place of pilgrimage that would purify me and enable me to go and reside in the world of Visnu?—8-9

"How possibly can I make enquiries on such points from Sri Krishna, because he has been so much instrumental in the great war! How can I ask Dhritarashtra about these things! I have slain all his sons to the number of one hundred."—10.

Being thus overpowered with grief, Yudhisthira began to weep bitterly and the good men that were there also fell down on the ground, along with Draupadi and Kunti, and began to weep. —11-12

At that time, the great sage Markandeya was in Kāśi and he knew how much the king was upset with grief. He therefore instantly went to Hastinapura and appeared at the gate of the palace of Yudhishthira. —13-14.

The gate keeper, on seeing the great sage Markandeya, immediately reported his arrival to the king, who, without the least delay, repaired to the door to accord him a fitting reception, and said, "O Sage! you are most welcome. By your having so kindly graced me with your presence, I feel that the mission of my life has been fulfilled and that my family has been liberated from all sins. O Sage! the manes of my deceased ancestors have also become gratified by your presence, and I feel myself purified in your presence." —15

Nandikeśvara said, "O Nārada! After thus acceding him a welcome, the king washed his feet and seating him on his throne, he worshipped the great sage. —18

Markandeya said, "King! what ails your mind so much? Pray tell me at once without the least reserve the cause of your mental agony." —19

Yudhishthira said, "O great sage! my thoughts over my doings for the gaining of this kingdom haunt me and choke me with intense grief." —20

Markandeya said, "King! hear the duties of an ideal Kṣatriya. It is no sin for a wise man to fight, and for a king there is absolutely no sin to wage war to acquire his kingdom. Do not therefore allow yourself to be carried away by any such feeling that you have committed a sin." —21-22

On hearing these words of the sage Markandeya, Yudhishthira fell prostrate at his feet and begged him to tell something that would wash off all his sins. —23-24

Markandeya said, "King! I tell you the way how to destroy all your sins. Hear it with attention. It is very great merit for pious people to go to Prayāga. —25

Here ends the hundred and third chapter describing the greatness of Prayāga.

CHAPTER CIV

Yudhishthira said, "Brāhmaṇa! I am desirous of hearing what Lord Brahmā had said in the days gone by. —1

How should people go to the sacred place of Prayāga? Pray also tell me what benefits do they reap who die, bathe and live there? —2
Märkanḍeya said —Son! I shall tell you the chief benefits from a pilgrimage to Prayāga, as I have heard them from the good sages in the past.—3

From the site of the sacred Prayāga, in the town of Pratisthāna up to the deep pool of Vāsuki, the Kambala, Aśvatara and Babu Mūlaka, consecrated to the Nāgas, form the Prajāpati-kṣetra, which is renowned in the three worlds.—4

People who bathe there go to heaven. People who die there are liberated from the cycle of birth. Those who live there are guarded by the Devas, Brahmā, &c. O King! there are several other sacred tīthas that drive away sins which I would not be able to enumerate even in the course of centuries, consequently, I shall briefly confine myself to the narration of the virtues of Prayāga.—5-6

The Ganges is guarded by 60,000 bows, the Yamuna (Jumna) by the Sun drawn by his seven horses, the sacred place Prayāga by Indra, and the circumference of it by Lord Viṣṇu, along with other Devas.—7-8

The Ākṣayavāta tree is guarded by Siva, and the Devas protect the sacred places that dispel sins.—9

O King! the sūtras cannot go to that sacred place. All minor sins are washed off merely by the remembrance of that sacred place.—10

All the sins of a man disappear by the sight, remembrance, or the rubbing on the body of the clay of that place.—11

O King! there are five deep channels in Prayāga. The Ganges flows in the middle of them. The sins disappear the moment one enters the boundary of Prayāga.—12

The mere remembrance of the Ganges, from the distance of a thousand yojanas, melts away all the sins. The doers of the evil deeds even attain emancipation by the mere mention of the sacred name of the Ganges.—13

The sins disappear by the utterance of the name of the Ganges, the sight of Her leads to prosperity, and the bathing in and drinking of Her sacred waters purifies one's soul along with those of his ancestors, for 7 generations.—14

Those who speak the truth, keep themselves free from anger and the vice of killing or causing pain to living beings, are wise and learned, are the lovers of the cow and Brāhmaṇa. They are liberated from their sins and attain the fruits of their desire by bathing at the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamunā.—15-16

Those who maintain the sexual purity for a month in that sacred place, protected by the Devas, and offer libations of water to the manes of the deceased ancestors and to the Gods, always attain what they desire, wherever they are born —17

The Goddess Yamuna—the daughter of the Sun, renowned in all the three worlds—is present in Prayâga, and the place where she meets is the abode of Siva —18

The merit of a pilgrimage to the Ganges at the sacred place of Prayâga, does not fall to the lot of every one, O King. The Devas, the Dânava, the Rûsis, the Siddhas and the Chârânas—they all go to heaven by bathing at Prayâga —19

Here ends the one hundred and fourth chapter describing the greatness of Prayâga

CHAPTER CV

Markandeya said —King! Besides this, I shall now tell you about the great virtues of Prayâga, by the mere hearing of it one is rescued from all sins —1

The sacred place of Prayâga is highly beneficial to the distressed, the poor whose faith is firmly fixed. No one should raise any controversy about it —2

The good sages say that the diseased, the meek and the old who give up their lives at the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamuna go in a vimâna, of the lustre of the gold, or that of the Sun surrounded by the celestial nymphs, and all his desires are fulfilled. The departed spirit till it thinks of re-birth, is honored in the heaven wearing precious stones and seated in a vimâna, streaming with myriads of bunting and flags, surrounded by the celestial nymphs singing beautiful songs melodiously —3-6

On consuming his store of virtue he is re-born in the house of a wealthy man where, too, he recollects the greatness of Prayâga and goes there —7

One who thinks of Prayâga in his own country, in the forests, in some foreign land, or even in his own house, on the point of one's death, goes to the world of Brahma. This is the saying of the good sages —8

He goes to such regions where the earth is full of gold, where he would obtain all the fruits of his desire, where reside the Rûsis and the sages. There, in their company, he enjoys on the banks of the Ganges, surrounded by thousands of beautiful women, sages, pilgrims and the Gandharvas. Leaving the heaven, he is born as a King of Jambudvîpa —9-11
Then, constantly thinking of good deeds, he undoubtedly becomes wise and wealthy — 12

One who is devoted to virtue with all his mind, speech and deeds, and makes gifts of cows at the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamunā, and makes gifts of gold and jewels, &c., in course of Deva or Pitri worship, attains great merit and virtue — 13-14

A Brāhmaṇa should, however, avoid, as far as possible, the accepting of any gift at sacred places. He should be on his guard, that is, should not yield to temptation — 15

One who gives away a pale-red milch cow after getting her horns plated with gold, her hoofs with silver, along with a milking pot of bell metal, cloth and jewels, to a virtuous and dispassionate Brāhmaṇa, well-versed in the Vedas, at the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamunā, goes to and resides in the heaven for as many years as there are hairs on the body of that cow — 16-19

At the time of his re-birth, the very same cow saves him from hell. He is born in Uttara-Kuru, and enjoys a long life. One who makes a gift of only one milch cow of his many thousands, that same cow helps the donor, his son, wife and kinsmen, to cross the sea of troubles with ease — 21

For this reason the gift of a cow is said to be the best of all charities because a single cow protects the donor from all great sins. A cow should be given to a good Brāhmaṇa — 22

Here ends the hundred and fifth chapter dealing with the merit resulting from the gift of the cow (gōdāna) at Prayāga.

CHAPTER CVI

Yudhīstīra said — Sage! I feel I am gradually being freed from my sins by the virtues of Prayāga that you have been pleased to relate to me. O, blessed saint, now be pleased to explain to me how one should go to Prayāga — 1-2

Mārkandeya said — King! I shall now relate to you what you wish to hear, exactly as I have heard from the sages and have seen them doing on such an occasion — 3

One who drives to Prayāga, on a conveyance, drawn by bullocks, makes himself liable to a fearful hell, and his libations are not accepted by the manes of his ancestors — 4-5

The bathing of his children there and then drinking the sacred water, does not do them any good — 6
CHAPTER CVI

One who gives alms to the Brāhmaṇas, with any feeling of conceit, does not derive any benefit. It is not therefore wise to visit a sacred place on any conveyance — 7

One who gives away his daughter (in marriage), according to the prescribed rites, between the Ganges and the Yamunā, according to his means, never goes to the fearful hell. He is born in the Uttara-Kuru and gets a good wife and dutiful sons, and enjoys long life — 8-9

O king! on account of these things, the giving away of charity at sacred places, according to one’s means, enhances his merits and makes him entitled to live in heaven till the dissolution of the world — 10

One who departs from his body, near the Aksayavata in Prayāga, goes straight to the region of Śiva — 11

It is the very same Aksayavata which does not perish, in spite of the combined fury of all the suns that reduce the rest of the world to ashes — 12

The Lord Viśnu is present there, and worships constantly near the Aksayavata, even when the world becomes extinct — 13

O King! The sacred place lying between the Ganges and the Yamunā is venerated even by the Devas, Asuras, Sages, Rṣis, Gandharvas. One should therefore go there with devotion, for Brahma, Devas, Rṣis, Sages, Lokapalas, Śādhyas Devas, Pītus, Sanātkumāras, etc., the greatest of the sages Angrī, etc. Brahma Rṣis, serpents, supernat, oceans, rivers, mountains, vidyādhara, Lord Viśnu Himself, along with Brahma, are present there — 14-18

It is said that the site of the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamunā forms the middle or the waist of the earth. This Prayāga tirtha is known throughout the three worlds — 19

The remembrance of this sacred place or the hearing the name of it or the touch of its soil, liberates one from his sins, so also from bathing there. One who sprinkles the water of that place, has the benefit of performing Āśvamedha and Ṛtajasūya sacrifices — 20-21

You should not be dissuaded from going to Prayāga, my son! even by the preachings of the Devas — 22

At the sacred Prayāga, there are sixty crores and ten thousand holy places, all gathered there — 23

The man dying at Prayāga derives the same benefits as one does by truly devoting himself to yōga — 24

Those who do not go to Prayāga are like the living dead, O Yudhīsthira! — 25
Those who go to Prayâga, in accordance with the rules laid down, are freed from their sins, as the Moon liberates Himself from Râhu — 26

He who bathes in and drinks the water of the Yamunâ, at the high banks presided by the Nagâs, Kambala and Ásvatara, is freed of all his sins — 27

The man by going to the shrine where resides Lord Siva, liberates from bondage his ancestors and posterity for ten generations — 28

By the sprinkling of the holy waters over his body on that spot, he gets the merits of an Ávamêdha sacrifice, and resides in the heaven till the end of the world cycle — 29

On the eastern bank of the Ganges, there is a well, by the name of Samudra-Kûpa, and the place Pratîsthâna (modern Jhusi) which is renowned in the three worlds. If one resides there for three nights, observing sexual purity and keeping himself dispassionate, he is freed from all his sins and gets the merit of the performance of Ávamêdha sacrifice — 30-31

Note — The mention of samudra-Kûpa in modern Jhusi fixes the date of this portion of the Pârâsa. The well called Samudra-Kûpa was sunk by Samudra-Gupta, and so this Mahâtmya must have been written after the Gupta.

The Hamsapraptana tirtha (the shrine where swans alight), that lies on the north of Pratîsthâna and on the east bank of the Ganges, is renowned in all the three worlds. By bathing there the devotee gets the benefit of Ávamêdha sacrifice and resides in heaven, as long as the sun and the moon shine in the firmament — 32-33

One who dies at the sacred Urvâstramana, whose high bank becomes white by the swans that dwell there, goes to heaven and enjoys with the Pitrâs for a period of sixty thousand and six centuries — 34-35

And O King! he is always in company of that famous celestial nymph, Urvâstî, and is venerated by the Rîṣis, Gandharvas, and the Kinnaras, &c. — 36

After consuming his store of virtue, he becomes the lord of ten thousand towns and of hundreds of maids, like Urvâstî, in whose midst he revels as their husband — 37-38

He wakes from his bed by the music of the sweet jingling of the waist chains and anklets of the ladies, and, after enjoying fully all his luxuries retires to that shrine again. — 39

One who wears white raiments and has his meals only once a day and preserves his sexual purity, becomes a king and gets hundreds of beautiful wives, adorned with fine ornaments. He rules over a vast territory whose boundary reaches to the seas — 40-41
And, after enjoying the result of his wealth and of the practising of his charities, he again returns to that spot — 42

One who, preserving his sexual purity, observes a fast till the evening, at the Sandhya Vaṭa, attains Brahmāloka — 43

One who dies at Kosi-dvīthi, remains in Svarga for a score of years — 44

And, on coming back to the world after exhausting his virtues, is born a very handsome person in a most wealthy family — 45

One who goes and sprinkles water over him at the Daśāsvamedha tirtha in the Bhūgaratī pāli, to the north of the abode of Vāsuki, attains the benefit of Asvamedha sacrifice, and, in his next birth, is born as a very rich, pious, handsome, wise and generous man — 46-47

The merits accruing from truth speaking and abstention from inflicting injury to another, are obtained by a pilgrimage to Prayāga — 48

The place where the Ganges alone flows, is as sacred as Kurukṣetra, and the place where she flows touching the Vindhyā range, is tenfold more sacred — 49

The spot where the Ganges flows touching many tirthas is undoubtedly a most holy place — 50

The Ganges exercises her elevating influence over mankind on earth, over the serpents in the lower regions, and over the Devas in Svarga, consequently, she is also known as Tripathágāmini — 51

Those whose bones are deposited in the Ganges, remain in Svarga for as many thousand years as there are bones deposited — 52

The Ganges is the most sacred of all the Tirthas, the best of all the rivers, and is the giver of emancipation to the vilest sinners — 53

The Ganges is easily accessible everywhere, excepting at Gangā-dravāra, Prayāga and Gangā Sāgara. Those who bathe at the above mentioned 3 places, go to heaven and are never reborn — 54

There is no other source of bliss to the sinner as the Ganges — 55

The Ganges has fallen from the head of Lord Śiva, who is the sacred of the most sacred and propitious of the most propitious — 56

Here ends the one hundred and sixth chapter dealing with the greatness of Prayāga

CHAPTER CVII

Mērkandeya said: O King! I shall now relate to you further the greatness of the holy Prayāga by listening to which a man undoubtedly gets liberated from all sins — 1
On the banks of the Ganges, towards the west, lies the sacred Mānasa-śrīthas, where by keeping up a three days' fast, the man gets freed from sins and attains all his desires — 2

The merits acquired by the giving away of cows, land and gold are attained by the mere remembrance of this āśrama — 3

One who resides on the banks of the Ganges, with or without any object in view, and dies there, goes to heaven and remains far away out of the sight of hell — 4

Such a man sits in a vimāna, adorned by decent birds like swans and flamingoes, where celestial nymphs sing lovely songs. Thus he enjoys long life in heaven — 5

On coming back from heaven, he is born in the house of a very wealthy man — 6

During the month of Ṭagga, sixty thousand āśrāmas and sixty crores of sacred streams are to be found at the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamunā — 7

The merits of giving away a lac of cows are attained by bathing at Prayāga for 3 days — 8

One who, at the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamunā, lights cowdung fires all round and sits in the midst of them, enjoys healthy body, with all his limbs in the best condition — 9

He remains in heaven for as many years as there are han on his body — 10

And when he is re-incarnated on earth, he becomes the emperor of the world. After enjoying these, he again remembers the very same āśrama — 11

One who immerses into the sacred waters at the junction of the Ganges and the Yamunā, during the time of the lunar eclipse, goes to the world of the Moon where he enjoys in His (Moon’s) company and remains in heaven for sixty thousand years, and is freed from all his sins — 12-13

At the end, he leaves the world of India where he was venerated by the Rishis and Gandharvas, etc., and is born in a rich family — 14

One who uplifts his legs and balances himself on his head, swings over the flames of fire, resides in heaven for a hundred thousand years — 15

And, on being born again, he becomes Agnihotri when, after various enjoyments, attains the same āśrama again — 16

(One who cuts and offers his flesh to the birds, goes and resides in the domain of Chandra (Moon), and, on being born again, becomes a very pious king, — 17-18 )
CHAPTER CVIII

Full of wisdom, knowledge, beauty and sweetness of speech, After enjoying life, he again goes to that Tirtha—19

On the northern bank of the Yamuna, to the south of Prayaga, there is the most sacred Rinamochana tirtha,—2

Where, by residing for a night and by bathing there, one remains no more liable to pay any debts, and goes to heaven and never runs into debts—21

Here ends the one hundred and seventh chapter dealing with the greatness of the Prayaga tirtha

CHAPTER CVIII

Yudhishthira said, "Bhagavān! my mind has become purified by hearing the greatness of Prayaga narrated by you—1

O, Rishi! now be good enough to tell me that great virtue that may lead one to some higher world and be the source of everlasting bliss after washing off all his sins—2

Mārkandeya said—King! Now hear how one can attain everlasting bliss by going to Prayaga—3

He enjoys the full bloom of his health and attains the benefits of Advamedha sacrifice at every step in his pilgrimage to Prayaga—4

Such a man gets emancipation from bondage for his manes and posterity for ten generations—5

Yudhishthira said—The way of getting everlasting happiness just explained by you, is very simple. It is the source of so many blessings—6

"The merits of an Advamedha sacrifice are acquired with very great difficulties. How can one attain similar merits in such a simple way? Pray remove my doubts, O blessed one—7

Mārkandeya said—King! I have heard what Brahmā first said to the sages—8

The circumference of Prayaga is five yojanas in extent, and by the treading on its ground one acquires the merits of Advamedha sacrifice at every step—9

One who passes away at Prayaga, liberates seven generations of his ancestors and fourteen of his coming generations from bondage—10

King! Knowing this greatness of Prayaga, you should devote yourself unflinchingly to that sacred Tirtha, because those devoid of devotion and leading a life of sin cannot attain the benefits of this holy tirtha which is guarded by the Devās"—11
Yudhishthira — "O Sire! how do they get the benefits of the sacred titha who yield to their desires, whether such be feelings of affection or greed of worldly objects —12

And what is the fate of the man who not knowing the difference between proper and improper, carries on a trade? Pray explain all this to me —13

Mārkandeya said — King! hear the rare greatness of the holy place The man who has restrained all his passions, attains emancipation by bathing for a month at Prayāga —14

Hear what Prayāga does to a man who treacherously kills another! He undoubtedly frees himself from his sins by living on alms and bathing 3 times a day, for a period of three months —15

(One who repays to a holy place unintentionally, goes to heaven, and, after spending all his store of virtue there, is born in a well-to-do family) —16

One who goes to a sacred place intentionally, always remains happy and rescues all his ancestors from hell —17

O incarnation of Dharma and knower of all, in compliance with your repeated enquiries, I have unfolded to you the ancient virtue for your benefit —18

Yudhishthira said — O Sage! I was not born in vain, my family has been redeemed, I have become delighted by meeting you. Indeed, you have shown me very great kindness —19

O Pious one! I have been liberated from my sins by meeting you, and I now feel myself sinless —20

Mārkandeya said — By your own destiny your soul has become elevated, and your family has been redeemed. By the narration of the greatness of Prayāga one’s store of virtue is increased, and his sins are decreased by listening to it —21

Yudhishthira said — O, Great Sage! Pray tell me, as seen or heard by you, the greatness of the Yamunā —22

Mārkandeya said — The Yamunā, the daughter of the Sun, renowned in all the three worlds is known as the great river of that name —23

The Yamunā has come from the same source as the Ganges, and She also dispels all sins by the mere utterance of Her name, from a distance of 1,000 yojanas —24

The virtue is attained by bathing in, drinking the waters and relating the greatness of the Yamunā. The sight of Her gives happiness —25
CHAPTER CIX

His seven generations are purified by once plunging into and sipping the holy waters, and emancipation is obtained by dying there — 26

On the south of the Yamunā lies the Agni tīrtha and Dharmaśāya tīrtha Naraka is situated on her western bank — 27

One goes to heaven by bathing there, by dying there he is not born again. Similarly, there are thousands of tīrthas on the southern bank of the Yamunā. I am now describing the Tīrtha on the northern bank known as the Niranjana tīrtha of Āditya, where the Devas, along with India, perform sandhyā three times a day and worship the tīrtha, otherwise they do the same — 28-30

You should also get yourself devoutly sprinkled with its holy water. There are many other tīrthas, by bathing into which a man goes to heaven. Those who die there are not re-born. The Yamunā, too, has been described to be sacred like the Ganges, but the latter is held more in veneration as the older of the two, by all classes everywhere — 31-32.

Yudhīṣṭhīra! you should sprinkle yourself with the holy waters of each tīrtha, by doing which all the sins of life will be consumed — 33

One who reads or hears this Mahātmya, in the morning, is freed from all his sins and goes to heaven — 34

Here end the one hundred and eighth chapter describing the greatness of Prayāga tīrtha

CHAPTER CIX

Mārkandeya said — The thousands of tīrthas that I have heard described in the Brahma Purāṇa by Brahmā, are sacred, purifying and givers of emancipation. There is one Somatīrtha which is the most sacred and the dispeller of all sins, where by mere bathing one gets the deliverance of hundreds of his ancestors, one should, therefore, unavoidably bathe in it — 1-2

Yudhīṣṭhīra said — Naimisāriya tīrtha on earth, Puśkara in Ākāsa, and Kunḍakṣētra in the three worlds are the most famous. How do you then extol the greatness of Prayāga only and leave the rest? I feel it difficult to put my faith in your words, which seem to me to be not good without any proof. How does one attain emancipation, virtues and various kinds of happiness by residing there for a few days only? Pray do remove my doubts, from what you have seen and heard — 3-5

Mārkandeya said — Anything in which faith cannot be put, should not be uttered, even if it is based on the direct perception of a person without faith and whose mind is vitiated by sin — 6
Those who are faithless, unchaste, evil minded and wicked, are great sinners (You must have some sin) that is why you have said so Now hear the greatness of Prayāga, which I shall tell you as I have heard and seen it directly or indirectly Whatever else is seen, heard or not seen should be clear to you if you meditate on them with concentration, taking the Śāstras as your ground of evidence—7-9

Therefore, a man inclined to doubt gets pain and not Yoga. The latter is attained in thousands of lives.—10

A man attains (true) Yoga after performing thousands of Yogas, and not by giving away thousands of gems to the Brāhmans, but one dying at Prayāga undoubtedly gets all the benefits.—11-12

King! Now hear this main reason in good faith. Though Brahma is omnipresent in every being, He is deemed to be particularly present in Brāhmans, other things being called abhiṣakta. He is, however, worshipped in all the beings—13-14

Therefore, O, Yudhiṣṭhira! the learned adore the holy Prayāga among all other thithas. This Prayāga is indeed to be worshipped as the King of all thithas—15

Because Brahmā also thinks of the same holy place everyday, that is why wise men after attaining the sacred Prayāga do not feel inclined for anything else—16

O, Yudhiṣṭhira! whoever wishes to be classed among the mortals after becoming one with the Devas? You will surely understand by these examples why I have described Prayāga to you as the most sacred and a ready dispeller of sins among the various thithas—17

Yudhiṣṭhira said—I have heard the greatness of Prayāga and am wondering, by what virtue the holy thirtha is obtained and how one goes to reside in heaven?—18

(I venture to enquire from you the means by which the giver of charity enjoys the world, with a store of happiness, by constantly being born in it—19)

Märkandeya said—King! Brahmā has said that the wicked who desire the earth, the cow, the fire, the Brāhmaṇa, the Śāstras, the gold, the water, the women, the mother and the father, do not reach to the higher regions—20-21

Similarly the attainment of Yoga has been said to be very difficult.
Those who follow a sinful life go to the worst region in hell—22
CHAPTER CX

The one who steals elephants, horses, cows, bullocks, jewels, pearl and gold, and then gives them in charity, never goes to heaven where the giver in good faith enjoys himself. They become addicted to many a sinful act and go to hell —23-24

Similarly I am telling you about Yoga, Dharma, chief traits of a donor, the truth and the untruth and good and evil fruits, as enunciated by the Lord Sun in ancient times —25

Here ends the one hundred and ninth chapter describing the greatness of the Prayāga tīrtha

CHAPTER CX

Markandeya said —King! Hear from me something further about the greatness of Prayāga. The sages have said that Naumisa, Puṣkarā, Gotrītha, Sindhusāgarā, Caya, Chitrakatīrtha, Gangasāgarā and other sacred hills &c, along with 30 crores of other tīrthas are present there —1-3

In their midst are the three Agnikundas and the Ganges runs in the middle of them. The daughter of the Sun, the Yamunā —venerated by all the tīrthas, has appeared in Prayāga and meets the Ganges at the confluence —4-5

The middle of the waist of the earth is said to be between the Ganges and the Yamunā and no other tīrthas are even equal to 1/4th of its greatness. It is said by Vāyu (or in Vāyu purāṇa?) that the 3½ crores of tīrthas of Heaven, Ākāsā and the earth are to be found in the Ganges —6-7.

Prayāga is the place where both Kambala and Āvataara reside. This place of enjoyment is described as the altar of Prayāpatī —8

There the incarnate Vedas and yajñas (sacrifices), O, Yudhishthura!, adore Brahmā, as do ascetics, the sages. The Devas, and the kings adore Prayāga by performing sacrifices. There is nothing more sacred than Prayāga in all the three worlds —9-10

The tīrtha of Prayāga is by its own virtue sacred of all the tīrthas. The place having the Ganges along with 3 crores and 10,000 tīrthas is the holiest of all. The whole of Prayāga is sacred owing to its being situated on the banks of the Ganges —11-12

Know this to be the truth. The good should dim it into the ears of their friends, pupils and the servants, that Prayāga is blessed, is the giver.
of heaven, is the very personification of bliss and truth, is sacred, and is the giver of Dharma, the dispeller of all sins, and is not (fully) known even to the great sages. The twice born by reading this Mahâtmya become purified and go to heaven—13-15

One who, with a pure heart, listens everyday to the greatness of this tirtha, remembers his past lives and enjoys heaven.—16

The good only attain this titha, therefore, O, Yudhisthira, you should also bathe in these tirthas after discarding all misgiving O, King! I have explained all this as asked by you, you have saved your ancestors by putting all these questions to me—17-18

O, Yudhisthira! The tirthas enumerated before do not reach even a tenth the Sanctity of Prayâga—19-20

Here ends the one hundred and tenth chapter describing the greatness of Prayâga tirtha

CHAPTER CXI

Yudhisthira said—"O' Sage! How is it that you have been telling me only all about Prayâga? Pray explain it to me so that my family may get salvation—1

Mârkandeya said—King! You should bear in mind what has just been told you about Prayâga, for Brahmâ, Visnu and Śiva, the Lord of Devas are eternal—2

Brahmâ creates the universe, Visnu fosters it and at the end of the kalpa, Śiva destroys it. At the time of the destruction of the universe, Prayâga is saved. One who looks upon the sacred Prayâga as the Lord of all creatures, becomes omniscient and blessed.

Yudhisthira said—Seer! Pray tell me why is it that Brahmâ, Visnu and Śiva are present in Prayâga?—6

Mârkandeya said—Yudhisthira! I shall tell you the reason of Brahmâ, Visnu and Śiva's residing there"—7

The circumference of Prayâga is five yojanas, owing to the absence of sin, Brahmâ resides towards the northern portion of the tirtha to guard it, Visnu stands personified in Venmâdâhava, and Śiva has fixed Himself in the form of the sacred banyan tree. Besides them, the Devas, the Gandharvâs, the ascetics and the seers guard the boundary of the holy place after driving away sin from there. It is the place where a man after getting rid of his sins does not see hell at all—8-11
CHAPTER CXII

Brahmā, Visnu, Śiva, the seven Dvipas, the ocean and the mountains, safely there dwell, and besides them other Devas also dwell there till the end of the world —12-13

King! Brahmā and other Devas have created the universe by placing themselves under the protection of Prayāga Prajāpati Indra-ksetra is known as Prayāga —14

O Yudhisthira! this Prayāga is most sacred. Now you should rule over your empire, along with your brothers, after being cleansed of all your sins.—15

Here ends the one hundred and eleventh chapter describing the greatness of Prayāga.

CHAPTER CXII

Nandikesvara said —Nārada! Having placed full belief in the words of the Sage Mārkandeya, Yudhisthira along with the other Pāndavas went to Prayāga where after saluting the Brahmans they offered libations of water to the Pitrīs and the Devas &c —1

There in a few moments, Śikṣipata also turned up, when He and other Pāndavas anointed Yudhisthira and proclaimed him Emperor —2-3

At the same hour, the Sage Mārkandeya also appeared there, and returned to his hermitage after pouring his blessings on Yudhisthira. After that the virtuous Yudhisthira, with an easy mind, began to rule over his empire after bestowing great charity —4-5

One who reads this Māhātmya in the morning, and remembers Prayāga every day, attains bliss and goes to the world of Śiva, after being free from his sins —6

Vāsudeva said —O, King! hear what I say. You will undoubtedly rise to heaven, if you will remember Prayāga every day —7-8

One who goes to, or resides in, Prayāga goes to the world of Rudra, after being freed from all his sins —9

The Brāhmaṇa who is contented and does not accept gifts, and is chaste and devoid of conceit, attains the merits of a pilgrimage to this tīrtha —10

One who is free from the feeling of anger, is truthful and regards all the beings like himself, also attains the merits of a pilgrimage to this tīrtha —11
O, King! The Yajnas, defined by the Seers and the Devas, cannot be performed by a man of limited means. Consequently the benefits accruing from such sacrifices are attainable only to the well-to-do and not to the poor—12-13.

Therefore, O, Yudhishthira! also hear from me the means by which the poor attain the benefits of such sacrifices—14.

The sages have said that it is highly beneficial to go to the sacred places.—15

O, King! ten thousand tirthas and three crores of rivers go and dwell in the Ganges during the month of Māgha—16

O, King! you will also repeat visiting Prayāga, after performing sacrifices and ruling over your dominions with a balanced disposition—17

Nandikesvara said—After having described the glory of Prayāga, that great Seer Mārkandeya disappeared there and there, then the King Yudhishthira attained great happiness by going to, and bathing at, Prayāga along with his retinue following the prescribed rules—18-19

O, Narada! you are also in Prayāga. Sanctify yourself by sprinkling the holy waters—20

Sita said—O Rishi! After thus narrating the whole thing to Narada, Nandikesvara vanished at the spot, and the former instantly went to Prayāga—21

Thereafter, bathing and giving alms to the Brahmans, he returned to his abode—22

Here ends the hundred and twelfth chapter describing the greatness of Prayāga.

NOTE

There is no better account of Prayāga in the English language than the handbook, named, Prayāg or Allahabad, published by the Modern Review office of Calcutta, in 1910. It is indispensable to visitors to that holy city. The following passages are reproduced from that brochure bearing on the antiquity of Prayāga.

The name by which modern Allahabad was known in ancient Hindu writings and which is usually in use among present-day Pandits and pilgrims is Prayāg. It was so called because the god Brahmā of the Hindu Trinity had performed many sacrifices (yaga) here.
Prayāg bears the title of Tirtha-rāj—the holiest of holy places. It acquired this title because, according to a legend, when all the holy shrines were placed on one scale of the balance and Prayāg on the other, the former kicked the beam.

The confluence of the Ganges and the Jumna finds appreciative mention in the Rig-veda—the earliest sacred record of the Aryan race. In the Rāmāyana and the Mahābhārata, the two great epics of the Hindus, Prayāg has attained an established sanctity in the eyes of the saints and heroes whose deeds have been celebrated in those national encyclopaedic chronicles.

Several of the Purānas—especially the Matsya and Padma Purānās—speak eulogistically of the merits of a pilgrimage to Prayāg.

The Prayāg Māhātmya—"the greatness of Prayāg"—a popular work which wholly dwells on the merits that the pilgrim gains by his pilgrimage to Prayāg, is a portion of the Matsya Purāna. It is in twelve chapters. Another and bigger work, bearing the same name, claims its origin to the Padma Purāṇa. It is in one hundred chapters. But the genuineness of this latter compilation is doubted.

The Prayāg Māhātmya of the Matsya Purāṇa, on the other hand, is accepted as authentic. It is the scriptural hand-book of the pious pilgrim to Prayāg. It is his guide on the occasion of his visit to Prayāg. If he cannot read it himself in the original Sanskrit, it is read to him and explained in the vernacular, by a professional Pandit, who has daily audiences of groups of men and women who listen to his Kathās—recitations with expositions—that he delivers from his platform. Most of the religious observances practised by the pilgrims have their authority in that book. And so long as the Prayāg Māhātmya will hold sway over the Hindu pilgrims, Prayāg will continue to be their Tirtha-rāj.

The following from the Prayāg Māhātmya is a favourite verse descriptive of the paraphernalia that attends that august sovereign of the holy shrines:

सियालिते पत्र ताह चालमे
नयी विनानते दुमि-मामुनते।
शीवात्तथा वर एव सावादः
स सीतेश्तो जगति प्रयागः।
"Shines in his glory the King of shrines Two noble-born maids—Gangā and Yamunā—daughters of the ascetic Jahnu and of the Sun—wave their white and blue chauris (the woolly tail of the yak) The imperishable holy banyan tree serves as the azure-coloured royal umbrellas over Prayagraj’s head."

To understand this concept of the Pauñānik band, one has to bear in mind, that in the winter and summer months, the two streams are clearly distinguishable by their colours—the fair stream of the Ganges mingling with the blue waves of the Jumna.

In some fine stanzas (Canto XIII, stanzas 54–57) of the Raghuvamsa, the poet Kālidāsa dwells on this phenomenon. These stanzas may be translated as follows:

[Ramā addressing his spouse Sītā says] Lo! My darling of faultless limbs, how the Ganges mingled in current with the waves of the Yamunā looks! At one place it looks like a string of pearls interspersed with sapphires beaming neighboring things with their blue lustre, while at another place, it looks like a garland of white lotuses, the interstices of which are studded with blue ones. At one place it looks like a flight of the white swans, fond of the Mānas lake, in company with the China geese of dark colours, while at another place it looks like a painting of the earth ornamented with white sandalpaste wherein the ornamental leaves of the fringes are made of black aloes. At one place, like the moonbeam variegated by darkness attached to shade, at another place like a white streak of autumnal clouds, with parts of the blue sky slightly visible through the chinks, and at yet another, like the body of the God Śiva anointed with cosmetics of ashes and adorned with the ornament of black snakes.

The antiquity of the religious practices observed at Prayāg, enjoyed in the Prayāg Māhātmya, has been testified to by a foreign chronicler of a different faith. The Buddhistic Chinese traveller Hsiueng Tsang, who has left a record of his travels in India, visited Prayāg in the middle of the seventh century of the Christian era. His observations confirm the fact of the existence of the Aksamayātā (Imperishable Banyan Tree) that was still standing and from the branches of which some pilgrims leaped down to die, it being the privilege of Prayāg to impart impunity from the sin of suicide. The victims of self-slaughter cherished the belief, that they would attain in their next mundane existence, the object they desired at the time of their voluntary ending of their lives. The bathing at the confluence of the rivers and the alms-giving to Brahmans were noted by him, thirteen hundred years ago, as it is by the modern tourist.
CHAPTER XCIII

The itihaśa said—Sir, How many spheres (dvipas) are there of the world, as well as how many oceans and mountains are there? How many zones (varsas) are there, and what are the rivers mentioned as flowing in them?—1

What is the extent of the Great Earth and of the Lokāloka mountains? What are the circumference and size of the moon and the sun, and what is their course?—2

Pray be good enough, O knower of truth, to explain all this to us at full length, because we are always anxious to hear all this from you.—3

Sūta said—The Dvipas are several thousands in number, and out of them seven are important ones. To describe them all, in this place, in their entirety is not possible.—4

I shall explain to you something about the moon, the sun, the planets, along with the seven only of the important Dvipas, giving their dimensions as established by human calculation.—5

The things which are "inconceivable" should be established by reasoning. The definition of "inconceivable" is this, viz., "a thing not understood by common people (by their common sense)."—6

I shall now proceed to tell you something about the seven varsas (zones) and about Jambudvīpa. Now listen to the entire extent of Jambudvīpa in terms of Yojanas.—7

Its breadth (diameter) is 100,000 yojanas, and many countries and beautiful cities are to be found in it.—8

It is full of Siddhas and Čāranas, and is adorned by mountains, full of ores of all metals, streaming out (as lava) from the different sides of rocks.—9

Besides these, it is beautifully embellished by various rivers flowing from the mountains. There are these six ranges of mountains, running from east to west, demarcating the six varsas.—10

Stretching to the sea on both sides, east and west stand (1) the Himālaya, full of snow (hima) and (2) Hemakūta, full of gold (hema).—11

Then comes the great (3) Nīsadha mountain, which is beautiful to look at on all sides. Then there is the golden mountain (4) Meru, with its four colours on its four sides, said to be bleak and barren. Its extent is 24,000 yojanas on four sides.—12

It has a circular form, divided into four quadrants. Its sides (quadrants) are of various uniform colours, with properties conferred upon it by Brahmā (the Lord of creatures). — 13

On its navel peduncle (east quadrant) sprung from the self-born unmanifested) Brahmā there is white colour. Consequently, it is said to have Brahmāncal properties — 14

On its southern quadrant, there is yellow colour, on account of which it is said to have the properties of the Vāsya caste. On its western quadrant, there is the colour of the wing of a black bee, owing to which it is said to possess the properties of Śadvās — 15

Its northern quadrant is naturally of red colour, therefore it has the properties of Kṣatriyās. Thus the four colours and castes have been enumerated — 16

The mountain Nāla is studded with lapis-lazuli. The mountain Śveta is yellow and full of gold. The mountain Śrutatin is made of gold (satakumbha), and has the colour of the tail of a peacock — 17

These mountains are the kings among their kind, and are the abode of Siddhās and Chātanās. Their inner diameter is 9,000 yojanās — 18

The vaśā Itāvdrāta stands in the middle and encircles the Mahā-Meru on all sides. Its expanse is 24,000 yojanās — 19 *

In the centre of this (Itāvdrāta) stands the Great Meru, shining in its majestic glory, like the fireblaze, devoid of smoke. Its southern portion is called the Dakṣāṇa Meru and the northern the Uttāra Meru — 20

Each of these seven vaśās (zones) has a boundary mountain of its own, which from north to south extends to 2,000 yojanās, and the southern ones are 2,000 yojanās in circumference — 21

The sum of the breadths of these vaśās and mountain ranges is breadth of the Jambūdvipa, as mentioned above. Of these Nila, Nīladha are the longest, and those that come after them diminish in length — 22

So are Śveta, Hema Kūta, Himavān and Śingāvān. Ṛṣabha (Meru) is said to have the same extent as Jambūdvipa — 23

Hema-Kūta is shorter (than Meru) by 12,000 yojanās, and Himavān is shorter (than Meru) by 20,000 yojanās. The great Hema-Kūta is 88,000 yojanās — 24

The Mount Himavān is 80,000 yojanās, from east to west. The dvipa (Jambūdvipa) being spherical, this difference in extent of the mountains has sprung up — 25

* It should be 84,000 instead of 24,000 or chaturstrimśat, instead of chaturvrimśat.
As there is a distribution of the mountains, so there is a distribution of the Varṣas (along with them) one after another. Many peopled districts are in them. These varṣas are seven in number — 26

They (the varṣas) are surrounded by precipitous and insurmountable mountains. All the seven are mutually inaccessible by different rivers — 27

In those regions, various species of animals are found everywhere. This varṣa of the Himavat is known as Bhārata — 28

Beyond that, up to Hema-Kūṭa, is the land (varṣa) of the Kumpurusas, and from the borders of Hema Kūṭa up to Nisadha is the Harivarṣa — 29

Note — Kumpuruṣa — Low man. A mythical being, with a human head and the form of a horse.

Nisadha — Haid. Name of a mountain. Name of a country governed by Nala.

Harivarṣa — One of the nine divisions of Jambudvīpa.

The other limit of Harivarṣa is Meru, and further on is Ilāvrita, beyond which extends Ramyaka to the Nila mountain — 30

Next to Ramyaka stands the Sveta mountain in whose region is Hiranyaka (varṣa) and next to it, is Śringadāka, which is also known as Kuru — 31

On the north and south there are two bow-shaped continents, extending over 400 yojanas, and Ilāvrita stands in the middle of them — 32

Half of it is Dakṣina Ilāvrita and the rest of it is Uttaṇa Ilāvrita — 33

Between them is Meru in Ilāvrita, to the south of Nila mountain and to the north of Nisadha — 34

The Mount Mālyavān, stretching north to south, which is 32,000 yojanas in length enters the sea on the west — 35

Mālyavān is a thousand yojanas from Nila to Nisadha and Gandha Mādana, is 32 yojanas — 36

Within their circumferences is the square and lofty golden Sumeru mountain, which is of fourfold colour, like the four castes — 37

There are different colours on its sides. On the east it is white, on the south, it is yellow, on the west, it is like the wing of the black-bees, on the north, it is red. These are the different colours — 38

Note — Bhringi — A poisonous plant, a fig tree.

The Mount Meru shines out like the rising sun or the blaze of fire without smoke, in the heart of those Mountains, like a divine king. — 39.
That Sumeru is 84,000 yojanas high, 16,000 yojanas deep underground and 28,000 yojanas broad —40
Its circumference is double its breadth. It is a great divine mountain, abounding in celestial medicines —45
It is surrounded on all sides by lands of golden effulgence. On this king of mountains, the Devas, the Gandharvas and the Rakṣasas enjoy and carry on their pastimes in the company of Apsāras —42
That Sumeru is adorned by the Bhūta and Bhāvāna worlds, and has four realms on its sides, viz — Bhadrāśva (in the east), Bhāratā (in the south) and Ketumāla in the west and the sacred Kuru on the north —43-44
The subjacent hills are —
Mandara, Gaudhamādana, Vipula, and Supārśiva, all full of precious stones —45
And on these mountains there are four lakes and forests known as Arunoda, Mānaasa, Sitoda and Bhadra —46
And there are big trees of turmeric, rose-apple, Aṣvattha on the Gaudhamādana and banyan on the Vipula —47
Amaragandaka is west of Gaudhamādana which is 32,000 yojanas, equally on all sides —48
There reside the well-known Ketumālas, the doers of blessed deeds —there everybody is like the destructive Fire of high spirit and great strength —49
The ladies of that place are beautiful like the lotus and lovely. On that mountain there is a divine jackfruit tree, looking effulgent through its leaves —50
The people of that region live up to 10,000 years by drinking the juice of those fruits. To the east of Mālyavān flows the river Gandaki which is 32,000 yojanas in length —51
The inhabitants of Bhadraśva (khanda) always remain happy and the Bhadramāla forest lies in the same clime, where there is a huge and black mango tree — 52
The people of that place are white in complexion and very sturdy and strong. The womenfolk are the most beautiful, like white lily, and very agreeable to look at —53
They possess the radiance and colour of the moon, their faces are like the full moon, and their body cool, as the moon, smells like lotus —54.
They live up to 10,000 years in good health. By drinking the kalamango juice, they always remain in full bloom of youth — 55.

Sūta said —Riṣis! Brāhma has thus described the nature of the continents to the Riṣis, and the same Brāhma who had previously favoured me (with describing the same). Now, what am I to narrate to you next? — 56

All the self-restrained seers, hearing these words of Sūta, became curious, and said with great joy — 57

"Sage! Be pleased to say all about the two countries, eastern and western, which have been already mentioned by you and of the northern varṣas and mountains, besides which, we are also desirous of hearing the account of the men living on those mountains." On being thus urged by the seers, Sūta again resumed the string of his narration — 58-59

Sūta said —Listen to (the account of) the varṣas which have been already referred to by me to the south of the Nila and to the north of Nīsadha — 60

That is Ramanaka (varṣa), and the inhabitants of that place are very handsome and given to amicable delights, and of pure birth — 61

There, too, is a huge banyan tree, and the people of that place, live by drinking the juice of the fruits of it — 62

These best of men of great parts live happy — 63

To the north of Śveta Mountain and to the south of Śrīṅga (Śrīṅgin) is the Hiranyavat continent (varṣa) where flows the river Hiranyavati — 64

The people of Hiranyavat are very strong and of high spirit. They are of pure and noble birth and are a good-looking and happy lot — 65

These first-class men live up to the age of 11 thousand and 1,500 years — 66

In that continent, there is a great bread-fruit tree of nice foliage, by drinking the juice of the fruits of which men live on — 67

The Mount Śrīṅga (Śrīṅgin) has three lofty peaks. One of them is full of precious stones, the other one is studded with gold and the third one, full of all gems, is adorned with the world — 68

The country situated to the north of this Śrīṅga, to the south of the sea, is the renowned Kuru varṣa where the saints (siddhas) have fixed their abode — 69

It also has trees producing sweet fruits, and the water of the rivers is like divine nectar. Those beautiful trees produce raiments and ornaments by their fruits—70

Some of these beautiful trees are the givers of all the fruits of one's desires, and the others are called Karuna, always beautiful to look at, produce milk (juice) with the six tastes and sweet as pañchāmṛta (the five best products of cow’s milk), productive of nectarlike milk—71.

The whole land of that place is full of gems and is inlaid with fine gold dust. There, the wind is most pleasant and salubrious and noiseless—72.

The people falling down from Devaloka are born there. They are of pure and noble descent, having permanent youth—73.

There, the daughters and the sons are born as twins, and husband and wife like the manifestations of Gandharva and Apsara. There, they drink nectarlike milk of trees overflowing with them—74.

The twins are born in a day. They grow together and are possessed of like beauty and character. They die together—75.

They are attached to each other with the fondness of the ruddy geese. They are healthy, without bereavement, and happy—76.

These great souls live for 11,000 years, and are ever devoted to their own wives—77.

Sūta said—O Rishis! The nature of these continents of the Bhārata-varsa has been brought to your notice. O greatly pious ones! What more do you wish to hear now?—78.

The Rishis, being thus asked by the enlightened son of Sūta again questioned him, being desirous of hearing something more in answer—79.

Here ends the one hundred and thirteenth chapter dealing with Jambudvipa and its mountains and varṣas.

CHAPTER CXIV

The sages said—We wish to hear from you an account of this Bhārata-varsa, which was peopled by Svāyambhuva and the rest of the fourteen Manus. O Blessed one! Do tell us about their creation—1-2.

On hearing these words of the seers, Sūta of the Purāṇas and son of Lomaharsana after a deep consideration, began to answer the queries of the seers of thoughtful mind—3-4.

Sūta said—I shall tell you about the people of Bhārata-varsa. Manu came to be known as Bhārata by his creation and protection of the people (of Bhārata) — 5

According to Nānakta, that place is Bhāratavārśa where human beings can obtain heaven, emancipation and a middle course of the two — 6

There is no field of action for mankind without Bhāratavārśa Bhāratavārśa has nine divisions, Viz — Indradvīpa, Kādera, Tāmraparnī, Gābhastimāna, Nāgadvīpa, Saumya, Gandharva, Vāruna, and the ninth is this place, surrounded on all sides by the ocean. The whole of the dvīpa is a thousand yōjanas in extent, from north to south. It is gradually broader from Kumārī (Cape Comorin) to the mouth of the Ganges, whence it has risen to a height of ten thousand yōjanas in an oblique direction — 7-10

The Mlechhas live on its outskirts. The Kīrātas and the Yavanas inhabit the east and the west of it — 11

Note — Kīrāta = A degraded mountain tribe

Yavana = Foreigner, especially the Greeks

The Brāhmaṇas, the Kṣatriyas, the Vaśyās, and the Śudras inhabit in its centre and carry on (i.e., inside this boundary) their occupations of rituals (sacrifice, &c) trade, commerce, &c — 12

They all pursue their respective duties by adhering to the varṇa-dharma, Artha and Kāma — 13

Here exist the āśīrāmas in their due order in which the five fold desires of men are fulfilled (viz., niskāma dharma as well as the four ordinary desires, consisting of dharma, artha, kāma and mokṣa). Here, men engage in activities for the sake of obtaining Heaven and emancipation — 14

The Mānasavāpīpa is also called Trīyag-yāma (i.e., obliquely situate) One who conquers it entirely, is called Samrāta — 15

This lōka is known as the conqueror of Antarikṣa which in its turn is known as Svarāt. I shall explain this at full length — 16

There are seven principal mountains in this continent, Viz., Mahendra, Malaya, Sahya, Śaktimāna, Rkṣavān, Vindhya and Pāryāṭra, and there are thousands of smaller ones adjacent to each of these — 17-18

Some of these are known to have fine peaks and tablelands, covered with many kinds of trees, &c. The smaller ones are less productive, and are distinguished from the bigger ones by contrast — 19

The Mlechhas and the Aryan reside there mingling with each other without distinction, and they drink the waters of many rivers, such as the Ganges, the Sindhu, the Sarasvatī, the Sutlej, the Chandrabhāgā, the Yamunā, the Sarayu, the Airāvati, the Vītatsā, the Devikā, the Kuhu, the Gomati, the Dhantapāpā, the Vāhudā, the Disadvatī, the Kauśikī, the Trītiyā, the Naḍchalā, the Gandākī, the Ikṣū, the Lauhitā (all these having their source in the snow-clad mountains of the Himālayas)

The Vedaśmrītī, the Vetravatī, the V_clr=vtṛaghṛtī, the Sindhu, the Parṇāśā, the Narmadā, the Kāveṭī, the Māhi, the Parā, the Dharvati, the Rupa, the Vīḍuṭā, the Veṇumati, the Sīrā, the Avanti, the Kuṇṭi (all these rivers having their source in the Pārśvāṇa mountain)

The Mandakini, the Daśārī, the Chitrakūṭā, the Tamāsā, the Pippaltī, the Śyenī, the Chitratpalā, the Vimalā, the Chaṇḍalā, the Dhutavāhini, the Saktimanti, the Śuni, the Lajja, the Mukutā, the Hradikā (these having their source in the Rupavatī mountain)

The Tāṭi, the Payāśi, the Nirvindhyā, the Kaśiprā, the Rasiabhā, the Venā, the Vairānti, the Viśvamalā, the Kumudvatī, the Toyā, the Mahāgaurī, the Durgamā, the Silā (these rivers of cool water having their source in the Vindhyā mountains)

The Godāvari, the Bhimarathī, the Kṛṣṇaventī, the Banjulā, the Tungabhadrā, the Suprayogā, the Vāhyā, the Kaverī (these rivers in the south having their source in the Sahya mountains)

The Kṛtaṇāla, the Tāmrarpanī, the Puspajā, the Utpalavatī (these rivers of the cool water having their source in the Malayaśchāla mountain)

The Trīśā, the Itśukulī, the Ikṣudā, the Trīdā, the Chala-tāmrarpanī, the Mūlit, the Śarvā, the Vimalā (these having come from the Mahendra mountain), the Kāsikā, the Sukumārī, the Madangā, the Mandavāhini, the Kripā, the Pāśini (these having come from Saktimanta) —20-32

All the rivers named above are sacred, and fall into the sea, and their waters are pure and sacred, and every one drinks from them. They are the mothers of the universe and purge the sin of the world —33

From these rivers thousands of rivers are branched off, and into them thousands of tributaries fall

On their banks are situated the following (janapadas) places Pāṇchāla, Kuru, Śālva, Jāṅgala; Surasena, Bhadrakāśa, Vāhāya, Paṭṭachara, Matsya, Kīrāta, Kulya, Kuntala, Kāśi, Koḍala, Avanti, Kalinga, Muka and Andhaka. Thus I have described almost all the countries of Madhyadesa.

Note.—Madhyadesa is the central region, the country lying between the Himālaya and the Vindhyā. The Gangetic doab. Surasena = Name of country about Mathura
CHAPTER CXIV

Matya = Another name for Virāta—the country lying to the west of Dholpur
Kantala = S W portion of Hyderabad, Deccan
Avanta = Country to the N of Narmada
Kallaga = Northern Sakara
Andhaka = Telangana

Now the following are between the Sahya mountain and the Godavari, most charming lands in the whole world, where there are (the mountains) Gobardhana, Mandara and Gandhamadana as well as the celestial trees and herbs, for Rāma’s benefit—37-38

These were brought down by Bharadvāja Muni, for Rāma’s good, and by him was created a pleasant country decorated with flowers—39

Bāhlika, Vātadāna, Ābhira, Kālatoysaka, Purandhra Sudra, Pallava, Ātt Khandika, Gândhāra, Yavana, Sindh, Sauvitra, Madraka, Saka, Druhya, Pulinda, Pārada, Hārmurtika, Rāmaṭha, Kantakāra, Kaiteyā, Daśānmakā, Prasthala, Daseraka, Lampaka, Talagāna, Sainika, Jāngala, and other places peopled by the Bharadvāja Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas, Vaidyas, and Sudras—These places (janapadas) are on the north. Now hear of those on the east—40-43

Note—Bāhlika = Balkha, Sindh = The country of the Upper Indus, Saka = The countries on the N - W Frontier, Kaiteyā = Bordering on the Sindh Desa

Aśātīrī Bhiṣēkpadopakāme tāpītā, Prakābete!
Aśātīrī dēśe dēśeśā īlucīsākā ākṣhhāːātī!

Ābhira—South of Śrī Konkana and on the Western bank of the Tāpti is the land of the Ābhiras on the Vindhyā hills

Aṅga, Vanga, Madguraka, Antaragiri, Vahīrgiri, Plavanga, Mātanga, Yamaka, Mallavarnaka, Suhma, Uttar Pravijaya, Marga, Vāgeya, Mālava, Prāgjyotisa, Puddra, Videha, Tāmrāliptaka, Sālva, Magadha and Gonadā—44-45

Note—Aṅga = Near Bhagalpur, Vanga = Also called Samatāla, Eastern Bengal, Vidhā = Country lying to the N = E of Magadha, Magadha = Bihar.

Those lying to the south (or in the Daiśināpatha) are—Pāṇḍya, Kerala, Chola, Kūlya, Setuka, Sutika, Kupatha, Vājivasaka, Navarāstra, Māḥīṣa, Kaliṅga, Kāruga, Aisika, Ātavya, Śavara, Pulinda, Vindhya, Pusika, Vidarban, Dandaka, Kultya, Sirāla, Rupasa, Tāpasa, Tattirika, Kārakara, Vāsika and the countries on the banks of the Narmadhā

Note—Keralā = Modern Malabar, The strip of land between Western Ghauts and the sea north of the Kāveri Chola = Tanjore, Pāṇḍya = Tinnevelly Vidarba = Berar, A district in the Deccan between the Narmadā and the Godāvari

The following countries he on the west—Bhārukachha, Sāmāheya, Śārasvata, Kēchika, Saurāstra, Ānarta and Arbuda—46-51.

Note—Śaurāstra or Anarta = Kathiawar, Arbuda = Abu
The following countries are on the western extremity of the Vindhyā-chala—Mālava, Karuṣa, Mekala, Utkala, Aundra, Māsa, Dasārma, Bhoja, Kiskindhaka, Towala, Kosala, Traipura, Vaidśa, Tumura, Tumvara Padgama, Naisadha, Arupa, Saundikera, Vithhotra, Avanti—52-55.

Note—Mālava=Malwa Utkala=Oriasa Kiskindhā=A city in the Deccan Dasārma=The country through which the Dasan flows Kosala=The country along the banks of the Sarayu Traipura=Tevur Avanti=Country to the north of the Narmada

The following countries are situated on the mountains—Nirāhāra, Sarvaga, Kupatha, Apatha, Kuthuprāvarana, Urna, Darva, Samudgaka, Trigarta, Maṇḍala, Kṛṣṭa and Amara—56

There are four ages of the world, viz—Satya, Tretā, Dwāpara and Kaliyuga. I am now going to give you an account of each—57

Note—The duration of each age respectively is 1,728,000, 1,320,000, 864,000 and 648,000 years of men, the four together comprising 4,820,000 years which is equal to a Mahāyuga. The regularly descending length of the Yugas represents a corresponding physical and moral deterioration in the people living in each age, the present age being Kaliyuga—the Iron Age

The Lord said—King! Hearing this, the sages, desirous of hearing the narration, began to enquire from Sūta, the son of Lomaharṣana—58

The seers said—Sūta! You have told us about Bhāratavarṣa, now be pleased to tell us something about Kimpuruṣa Varṣa and Harivarṣa, besides this, be good enough to tell us about the Jambudvīpa, &c., as well as about their people and the trees that grow there—59-60

Thus exhorted by the Brāhmaṇas, Sūta began to relate to them what was in accordance with the Purāṇas and approved by the Rhis—61

Sūta said—Rūṇa! As you desire to hear these things, listen to me attentively. The Kimpuruṣa of Jambudvīpa is as great in magnitude as the Nandana-Vana—62

Note—Nandana-Vana=The garden of Indra

Kimpuruṣa—The people of Kimpuruṣa-Khanda have a complexion like that of heated gold, and they live up to 10,000 years—63

A stream of honey flows from a Plakṣa tree, in that sacred Khandā, which the Krūmaras residing there drink—64

On account of which they remain so healthy, without any grief and happy, and cheerful in their minds. The people have a yellow complexion like shining gold, and the women folk are known as Apsaras—65

Harivarṣa—Beyond Kimpuruṣa is Harivarṣa, the inhabitants of which are silvery white in complexion. They are the fallen people of Devaloka. They all drink the juice of the sugarcane—66-67,
They do not get old, and consequently they live for a very long time. Their average age is 11,000 years — 68

Ilavrita-Khanda is in the middle, where there is no strong sunshine and of which men have little knowledge — 69

The sun, the moon, as well as the stars are seldom seen in Ilavrita. The people of that place are handsome like the lotus and their eyes are like the same, and their body, too, emits a scent like that of the lotus. They seldom get excited and drink the juice of the roseapple, (jambuphala). They, too, are the fallen people of Svarga and wear silvery white garments, and live up to 13,000 years — 70-73

To the south of Meru and north of Nisadha stands the roseapple tree (jambuvíkasa), which is called Sutanásana. It is a huge tree, and always abounds in flowers and fruits, and is frequented by the Siddhas and Chúranás — 74

Jambudvipa is so called after this huge tree. It rises to a height of thousands of yojanas — 75

The tree is so high and big that it seems to cover all the heavens, and the juice of its fruits flows in the form of a river — 76

It flows round Sumeru, and then waters the root of the tree, and people of Ilavrita drink it with great pleasure — 77

By drinking it, they neither get infirm, nor do they ever feel hungry, tired or miserable — 78

There is to be found a kind of gold, called the Jámbunáda, which is the ornament of the Devas. It is red like the Indragopa (insect). The fruits of this tree produce the best juice of all the fruits of trees of other Varás. This tree exudes a gummy sap, like gold, which is also the ornament of the Devas — 79-80

By the grace of God, the soil of that place swallows the excreta of the people and the dead — 81

The Rákṣasas, and the Písácás live (in the dales) of Himavata. The Gandharvas and the Apsaras are the inhabitants of Hemakúta — 82

Seṣa, Vasuki, Takṣakas and the Nágas, all haunt the Nisádha mountain, and the 33 blessed Yájuyás (Devas) sport on Mahámeru. On the Nila mountain, where sapphires abound, live the Siddhas, Mahárjas and Dánava. The Sveta range is said to be the resort of Daityas — 83-84

Sríngáván, the best of the mountains, is the haunt of the Pitris. These are the nine continents in the world. The changeable (plains) and the fixed (mountains) are inhabited by various creatures Men and Devas see numerous increase in them They cannot be counted, but should be taken on trust, by one who wishes his own good—85-86

Here ends the one hundred and fourteenth chapter in Bhuvanakosa describing the Kosa Vargas

CHAPTER CXV

Manu said.—Janårdana! I have heard the doings of the son of Budha and have also heard the ways of performing sacred Śrâddha that dispels all sins I have heard the benefits of giving away a milk cow, a black deer skin, and the ways of letting loose a bull (at the end of funeral rites), but O Kådava! my curiosity is awakened on hearing about the beauty of the son of Budha Pray now tell me what I ask By virtue of what acts did he become so handsome and prosperous? How is it that Urvasî became so much attached to him in preference to all the Devas of the three worlds as well as the beautiful Gandharvas?—1-5

Hearing those words of Manu, the Lord said—King! Hear the actions, in virtue of which the King Purûravâ became so handsome and happy In his previous life, the King Pururavâ was the lord of Madra, known as Purûravâ—6-7

At the close of the Chåksusa Manvantara, the king was in the Chåksusa dynasty, endowed with all the royal qualities, except beauty alone.—8

The Råis asked Sûta how the Madra King, Purûravâ, became Lord of the Earth, and what act of his deprived him of his beauty—9

Sûta said—Seers! In the village of Dvija, on the bank of a river, there was a Brâhmaṇa named Purûravâ, who in his after life became the King of Madra, named Purûravâ, because in his former life of a Brâhmaṇa, he always observed the Dwaddafast and worshipped Janårdana, with the desire of getting a kingdom But though he kept the fast, he bathed, with his body rubbed with oil—10-12

He obtained the kingdom of Madra by the virtue of his fast, but became, ugly on account of his rubbing his body with oil, before bathing on fast days—13

Hence, one, who observes a fast, should not rub his body with oil on that day before bathing, and if he bathes after rubbing his body with unguent, he becomes ugly in his next life—14
CHAPTER CXVI

This is about the previous life of the King Purûravâ of Madra. Now I shall tell you something about him, after he became the lord of Madra—15

In spite of his royal qualities, he was not loved by his subjects, on account of his ugliness—16

He then decided to go and practise penances for the attainment of personal beauty, in the Himâlayas, after making over charge of his realm to his ministers—17

That far-famed king, with his own enterprising spirit as the only companion, went on foot to that home of all the tithas (i.e., Himâlayas), and at the end saw the renowned and beautiful river Aiравatî.—18

The king, whose fame was like that vast icy region, saw that river of the mighty Himâlayan torrent, whose waters are cold like the rays of the moon and white like snow—19

Here ends the one hundred and fifteenth chapter describing the Hermitage (Tapôvana)

CHAPTER CXVI

Sûta said—O Rishi! The King saw the glorious, blessed and sacred river of Haimavatî where the Gandharvas abound and which Indra worshipped—1

The King Purûravâ was greatly charmed to see that beautiful river, the waters of which were intermingled with the rut of the celestial elephants, the middle of which was shaped like the bow of Indra. It was the home of many ascetics, was worshipped by a multitude of Brâhmans, and was of golden colours. Its surface is covered with a row of snow-white flamingoes, and seemed to be fanned by kedâ châmara. Many a pious one sprinkled its water on his head. It appeared to the king to be beautiful, and subject to waxing and waning like the moon, and the giver of great joy—2-5

The rapid running stream of cold water, the best of daughters of the Himalayâs, full of ripples and tasteful like nectar, full of birds, honoured by the Tâpasa and Brâhmaṇas, the sacred river destroys all sins and raises men to heaven—6-7

She is the senior consort of the ocean, adored by the seers, the producer of ardent zeal in all, the most beautiful, the giver of universal happiness and relief, the guide to heaven, the waters of which flow up to Gokula, most pleasing, devoid of moss and reeds, and decorated with lotuses, the geese and the cranes throwing out their melodious notes at rapid succession, having deep whirlpools as her navelpit, having little islands hither and thither looking as her thighs, the blue lotus flowers looking like her eyes, the blooming lotuses supplying her mouth, the crystal waters her dress, the cranes her beautiful lips, the train of Balākās (cranes) her row of teeth, the restive shoals of fish her eyebrows, the elephants of her waters (water spouts) her breasts, and adorned with the singing geese and the lotus flowers that looked her jingling anklets and bracelets respectively —8-12

Charmed with the beauty, the Gandharvas sport every noon in her with their Apsarās. Her waters are highly perfumed by the mixing of the sandal and other scents (kunkums), used by the Apsarās, and also with the various aroma of the trees on its bank, they are so constantly rippled with the wind that the reflection of the sun is difficult to be seen, while her banks are broken here and there as the elephants of the Devas strike them with their tusks —13-15

Such a magnificent stream, in which flows the ichor of the Airāvata, the elephant of India, and the sandal perfume of the consorts of the Devas, is swarmed by a train of sweetly buzzing bees —16

The ascetics, the seers and the Devas, in company of the Apsarās, derive happiness on her banks, where the humming bees were attracted by the aroma of sweet flowers of the trees on her banks and where the intoxicated deer gratify their passions —17-18

The celestial women, with their face like the lotus, and the moon, become sanctified by a bath in her water and are honoured by the Devas —19

The water of this river is not disturbed by the Devas, Pulindas, (kings) and tigers, &c., is decked with lotus flowers, illumined by the reflection of the moon and stars. The king continued his journey while seeing this river, which satisfies the desire of the sages. On her banks, the groups of Devas and Brāhmaṇas were sitting under the branches of trees, whose kāsa flowers look like the rays of the moon —20-22

The king, who is famous like the moon, saw that the river was inundated with many rivulets and was the dispeller of sins of the devotees and worshipped by many sages, which gives nourishment to the people, as a mother does to her sons, and which is surrounded by the Devas, and by other people, seeking their own benefit, which is sported by the lions and the elephants, whose waters are full of Pārijāta trees, and which is never increased or decreased by the heat of the sun —25

Here ends the one hundred and sixteenth chapter describing the celestial river Ārāvati

CHAPTER CXVII

Sūta said —Rūṣiḥ 1 when the king's fatigue was removed at the sight of the holy water of that river and by the contact of its wind, he trudged along, and sometime after had a view of the majestic Himalayas —1

That mountain touching the skies with many of its gray (white ?) peaks was accessible to the sages, although not accessible to birds —2

Besides this the Himalayas resounded with the thundering sound of the rivers falling down in cascades and which rendered all other sounds inaudible. They, the Himalayas, looked charming with their reservoirs of cold water —3

The blue forests of Devādāru trees looked like its lower garment, clouds formed its upper garment, the white cloud the turban, while the moon and the sun the diadem. Its body was covered with snow, (which served the purpose of an unguent), while the presence of minerals here and there seemed to impart it with sandal. It gave out coolness even during the hot weather. It was decorated with massive rocks, at places imprinted red with the foot-prints of the nymphs (Apsārās), with places lit up by the sun, enveloped in darkness at others, drinking water somewhere through its deep chasms, adorned elsewhere by the multitude of playful Vidyādhāras, and the chief Kunñaras at places looking beautiful with the flowers of Heaven (Saññāna, &c) fallen from the Gandharvas and the nymphs (Apsārās), while they were busy in drinking, and elsewhere covered with the beds of flowers pressed down by the Gandharvas rising from their slumber, and thus looked beautiful —4-10

At places it was covered with blue grass, without a breath of wind, and spots abounded with pretty flowers. This mountain is the refuge of the ascetics and most inaccessible to lovers. Herds of deer graze at the foot of rocks, whose trees are broken down by the tusks of elephants who, bewildered by the roars of the lion, were making noisy uproar, and could not be seen to be at rest —11-13

In whose valleys and bowers were ensioned meditating seers, and precious stones from whose stores adorn the three worlds —14,
It is the refuge of the great, and always served by the great. The great see this mountain great in jewels and precious stones — 15

The hermits accomplish their course of asceticism in short duration. All the sins vanish merely by the sight of this mountain. The wind makes the landscape pleasant by blowing the sprays of water of its waterfalls — 16-17

(If it is) decorated somewhere with summits bristling with waterfalls, at other places, with peaks, which, owing to hot sun shining are inaccessible, except by the wind — 18

At places it looked beautiful, with clusters of the great overshadowing Devadārus which, owing to their thickness, looked like clusters of bamboo. At other places were huge icicles, hundreds of thundering waterfalls and fountains, as well as caves, with their mouths sealed with snow — 19-20

The great King of Madra roamed about, seeing that beautiful valley, and (after a time) sat down for a time at a certain place — 21

Here ends the one hundred and seventeenth chapter dealing with the description of the Himālayas in Bhuvarna Kūsa

CHAPTER CXVIII

Sūta said — Sages! King Purāravā suddenly came to one of the beautiful places that mountain inaccessible to ordinary human beings — 1

The country where the Arāvati river has its source, is also sombre in appearance, like the clouds, on account of its plentiful trees and thickets — 2.

It abounds with the following varieties of trees, flowers, grass, creepers and plants —

Śala, Tāla, Tamāla, Kārnīkāra, Sāmala, Nyagrodha, Āsvathā, Śirā, Śimāpa, Śleṣmātaka, Amalaka, Harītaka, Bibhītaka, Bhūrja, Muṇjaka, Bāna, Saptachahada, Mahānimbha, Nimbā, Nṛgūndi, Hari, Devadāru, Kāleśaka, Kedmakā, Chandana, Vīlva, Kapittha, Raktachandana, Māta, Āmra, Arūṭa, Aṅkūta, Abdaka, Arjuna, Hastikarna, Sumanāsa, Kovidāra, Prāchunāmlaka, Dhanakā, Samaršakā, Kharjura, Nārikela, Priyāla, Amrātaka, Lāguda, Tantumāla, Dhava, Bhavya, Kāsmtraparni, Jāṭiphal, Pūgapahala, Katphala, Lavali phala, Mandāra, Kūsama, Kūsumāmakā, Yavāsa, Śamiparṇāsa, Vetas, Ambuvetas, Naṇgī (of deep red color), Hiṅgu,

Some of the blooming lotuses looked like the rising sun, some like the moon and the sun: Some looked like bright gold, and some resembled the San [hemp, or Crotalaria juncea] flower—40

The place was full of growing lotuses, of which some looked like the leaf of a Sīrīda (Sūka); some having five colours, others many.—41

There were Kumuda flowers, too, pleasing to the sight of the observer and looking like the moon lotuses, resembling the glow of fire, and like mouth of an elephant were there also—42

The species of blue lotus, Kabhāras, the Gunjātaka berry, Kāsera, Śrīgātakā, Mṛnāla (a species of lotus), Rāyotpala (a kind of lotus), various kinds of fruits, flowers and roots thriving in water as well as on land, various species of rice fit for the use of the Rásis, abounded on that mountain — 43-44

King! There is no such grain, grass, pot-herb, fruit, berry, and herb that did not thrive on that mountain — 45

The varieties of berries and fruits, grown in the world of the serpents, in the world of men, and the products of water and of forest, all flourished on that mountain — 46

The King of Nādra, Pururavā, by virtue of his asceticism, thus saw all those fruits and flowers of the season there — 47

He also saw the following birds and animals living there — The peacock, the wood-pecker, the sparrow, the cuckoo, the goose, the swan, the lapwing, the wagtail, the osprey, the Kalakāta, the civet cat, the gokṣara-vadaka, the kumbha, the parrot, the crane, the Dhātuka, the ruddy-goose, the Kātuka, the Tātibha, the Bhata, the Putra-priya, the heron, the Goccharma, the Girivartaka, the pigeon, the Kamala, the Sāṅkā, the Chikora, the quail, the duck, the Raktavartma, the Prabhadraka, the cock, the blue jay, the fowl, the Kunkumchuraka, the large bee, the porpoise, the Bhulinga, the Dūdima, the crow, the gallinule, the Dātyūha, the skylark, the bees, and several other birds, etc — 48-54

The king also beheld the following wild beasts — The dog, the deer, the leopard, the lion, the tiger, the elephant, the rhinoceros, the wolf, the bear, the ape, the monkey, the rabbit, the agile cat, the buffalo, the cow, the bull, the Chamara, the Sriwara (a species of deer), the white mule, the Urabhra, the ram, the antelope, the blue ox, the doe, the sāmbara, the wild boar, the horse, the ass, the donkey. Besides them, he also saw the beasts, which are naturally hostile to one another, living in mutual friendship. He was very much amazed to see this. Sometime ago, the sage Atri had his hermitage there — 55-61

On account of the glory of that sage, the place was full of plants, and animals which, though naturally hostile, did not exercise hostility to one another — men and Rakṣasas — 62

There all carnivorous beasts lived on fruits and milk. In such ways their character was built up by the influence of the Great sage Atri. — 63.

King Pururavā himself passed several days on the slopes of those mountains, where cow-buffaloes and she-goats gave out milk, and where even the thorns had the flavour of ambrosia. Everywhere, O king, the rocks are full of streams of milk and curds. — 64-65.
CHAPTER CXIX.

The King Pururavá was charmed to see that mountain, and also he saw the beautiful rivers and streams—66

There were hot and cold water springs and cozy caves at every turn, for it was worth being made use of—67

Snow did not fall within a radius of five yojanas, and valleys were not visible near the peaks, for the thick clouds incessantly pour forth perpetual snows there—68-69

Close to it, on a different peak, thick clouds pour out diurnal showers of rain. Its rocks are extremely beautiful. The land of this enchanting hermitage (of Atri), was the giver of all desires and the trees of which bore fruits successfully, for they were worthy of being eaten by the Devas—70-71

That mount is, indeed, the dispeller of all sins, and is adorned by the Devánganas and the buzzing bees—72

The spot shines white, like the rays of the moon, on account of heaps of ungathered ice, while here and there, the frolicsome herd of the white monkeys played about—73

The hermitage of Atri is almost impassable to a human being, owing to the pile of snows and inaccessible mountains surrounding it—74

The King Pururavá, by virtue of his devotion and by the grace of God, reached the sacred hermitage—75

That Lord of Madra saw that exquisitely enchanting, blessed hermitage, which is beautified with hundreds of flowers, and which removes all fatigue, and which was built by Maharáj Atri himself—76

Here ends the one hundred and eighteenth chapter describing the Hermitage (of Atri)

CHAPTER CXIX

Súta said—There were two great snowclad peaks, shining with variegated colours, and in their midst was a huge summit, covered with perpetual snows, never warmed (by the sun's rays) and where there is no cloud. Below on the west are trees also—1-2

The king entered the hermitage, his curiosity awakened on seeing a picturesque cave encircled by creepers—3

About 400 cubits (palva) of that cave was enveloped in darkness, and further off, it was full of light of its own, where there was a dome-like round place, very high and sombre. The sun and the moon did not shine there—4-5
It was bright like the day time, all night and day (probably owing to the presence of radium there) and there was a beautiful lake, more than 2 miles in length — 6

On all the four sides of the lake, there were charming rock beds, full of trees of gold and silver and coral (colour) — 7

The flowers and leaves were glowing gems, and it was full of lotuses whose petals were of ruby, whose anthers were diamond, and endowed with sweet scents, whose leaves were of emeralds, sapphires and lapis-lazuli, and whose pericarps were of gold. Not only was the bed of the lake of diamond, but it was full of various gems. There were to be found shells (cowries, oysters and conches), terrible crocodiles, fishes and tortoises. There were to be found pieces of emerald slabs, thousands of diamonds, rubies, sapphires, topazes, karkotakas, pieces of Tuthaka stone (copper sulphate), pieces of ivory, diamonds of the first water as well as of inferior kind, yellow stone, Sāryakánthimani, Chandrakánthimani, Syamantaka, Surūra golaksha, crystal, Comeda, Dhāllmarakata, Pittaka, lapis lazuli, Saugandhika (a kind of ruby), Rājamanī, Brahmamanī, Mukhyamanī, and starry pearls of various kinds — 8-18

Its water is also lukewarm, and removes all feelings of cold. The site of the lake, in the midst of lapis lazuli stone (Vaidūryamani), looked beautiful indeed — 19

It is a beautiful square piece of land, measuring 800 cubits (200 Dhava), and has been formed by the asceticism of the sage Atri — 20

King! The entire locality was full of gold (or looked like gold), as the entrance cave was. There was a certain place in that beautiful region, where, below the rock, flows a lovely pond of cool water adorned with lotus flowers — 21-22

This pond, O King, was in shape a beautiful square and resembling the sky in clearness, the water of which is most delicious, cold and perfumed — 23

Without injuring the throat and without overfilling the stomach (or belly), it gives pleasure to mind and body — 24

In the centre of the pond, the sage Atri, by virtue of his austerities, has built a palace, which can be reached by a golden bridge, studded with precious stones — 25

The palace was of silver, white like the rays of the moon, its stairs are of beautiful Vaidūryamani (lapis lazuli), its pillars of the coral and sapphire, its altars (or quadrangles) are studded with emeralds Markataman. The reflection of the diamonds made it very beautiful and pleasant to the sight. In this (enchanting) palace, the Lord of all, the serene Janárdana, decorated with every ornament, reposed in the midst, all the luxuries of the luxurious, with one of his knees drawn up and the foot placed on the King of Serpents, the other (foot) resting on the lap of Lakṣmī (the Goddess of wealth). While thus sleeping on the coils of Śesā, the Lord had one of His hands, adorned with bracelets, on the hood of the Snake, another, stretched out, supported His sacred head (laid) on the back of his fingers, the third one resting on the knee-cap of the half raised leg, touched his navel. Now hear how the fourth hand was placed. It held a celestial (santāna) flower and was raising to the nose — 26-33

(The graceful Deity of happiness—) Lakṣmī—is devotedly shampooing Her Lord of the Universe in His Serene repose with Her lotus hands.
He was adorned with the garland of santāna (kalpa) flowers, and with necklace, bracelets, rings, &c (Hāra, Keśu, Angada, Angulaka), while His head, glittering with the decorations of precious stones, rested on the hood of Śesā — 34-35

King Pururavā went in front of the God, and made his salutation to the One, who was of mysterious character, consecrated there by Atri, worshipped by the seers, adored by the ascetics, always offered the Kalpa santāna flowers, covered with divine sandals, offered the incense, his right side covered with the best sappy fruits, offered by the anchorites (Siddhas) and having a bed of lotus flowers for His pillow — 36-38

The king saluted the Sacred One with his knees and head touching the ground, and pleased the Lord by his recitations of the hymns in His praises, containing his thousand names, and repeatedly circumambulated Him. He rested a little in that hermitage. Then, taking his residence in a beautiful cavern, outside the entrance to the cave, commenced his austerities and worship of Madhusūdāna — 39-41

The king, in process of time, gave up every kind of food, engaging himself only in the worship of Fire to whom he offered various kinds of fruits, flowers, incense, roots and cow's milk, after bathing thrice a day and sustaining himself on the water of the pond — 42-43

He slept, without any bedding, on the bare floor in the cavern, and lived only on water, having discarded all the eatables — 44

The king did not experience any ailment in course of that period of life and most marvellously carried on his devotion of Viṣṇu by residing in that hermitage for sometime — 45

Here ends the One hundred and nineteenth chapter describing the Himālayan cave (Ayatana)
CHAPTER CXX

Sûta said — Then that king, giving up all food and the use of garments, saw the pastimes of the Gandharvas and the nymphs (apsaras)—1

He, after offering the garlands made of various flowers to Viṣṇu, presented them to the Gandharvas, and he saw, but did not take any notice of the pastimes of the nymphs (apsaras), while gathering flowers in the gladness of the heart — 3-4

Some of the nymphs, while gathering flowers, became entangled in the creepers and were forsaken and left behind by their companions and lords — 4

Some of them, exhaling lotus-scent, had their faces surrounded by the buzzing black bees and were freed of them by their lovers, while others had their eyes moistened with the juice of flowers which was removed by the breath of their lords — 5-6

Some offered the heap of flowers collected by them to their husbands, and some decorated their hair with the garlands of flowers woven by their lords — 7

Some apsaras (the very sight of whom produces love in men) collected the flowers and wove garlands of them, and then by their lords had their tresses of hair decorated with them, and considered themselves very fortunate — 8

Some were called away by their lords to dabble into amorous pastimes with them, to a solitary bower, full of beautiful flowers — 9

Some culled the flowers out of the branch bent by their lords and looked upon themselves exceedingly fortunate and happy — 10

Some, while enjoying the company of their lords, undisturbed in the grove of lotuses, cast sidelong glances towards the King Pururâvâ — 11

Some of the nymphs overpowered their lords by sprinkling water on them, and then became pleased when they, in their turn, were overcome by their lords — 12

When the maidens ran down, their lords became sad, and it was seen that as they heaved sighs, their breasts rose and fell — 13

Some looked as handsome as the lotus surrounded by black bees, as their tresses of long hair streamed on their faces after being loosened by their lords in course of the pastime — 14

Some of them became concealed in the lotus groves that resembled their eyes, and were found out by their lords after a long search — 15

Some kept their lords in a close embrace for a long time, on the pretext of feeling cold after their bath — 16.
Some, of an enchanting smile, thrilled the observer (lord) with amorous feeling by wearing the finest wet garment on her person — 17
Some apsara was laughing at her lord, who fell down into the water as the garland was torn which he was pulling — 18.
With their knees having been scratched by their companions, some bent low and modestly took shelter for a long time in the company of their lords — 19.
Some began to dry her wet hair by turning her back on the sun and was seen from a rock by her lord with eyes full of love and desire — 20.
At that time the lake with its water full of garlands of the nymphs fallen in it and mixed with the saffron washed out of their breasts, looked beautiful like a maiden after amorous enjoyment with her lover — 21.
Pururavâ saw the group of Devas, Gandharvas and the consorts of the Devas worshipping Viṣṇu after their bath — 22
He also saw some of the nymphs sitting in the bowers of the creepers and dressing and decorating themselves, their minds being engrossed with (the thoughts of) their lords — 23
Some while looking at the mirror heard the news of their lords through their maids with rapt attention — 24
Some at the hint of the maid began to put on their ornaments hurriedly without being conscious that they put them wrongly, their mind was so engrossed with passionate desire — 25
Pururavâ also saw some of the nymphs sitting on the blue grass amidst nicely smelling flowers and drinking wine there, some of these beautiful nymphs made their lovers drink from their own hands, while others drank the wine offered by their lords — 26-27
Some whilst drinking water saw the reflection of her lotus eyes in it and afterwards began to enquire from her lord where her two lotuses disappeared, and on being told by him that they were undoubtedly drunk by herself became bashful as she realised with pleasure his meaning — 28-29
Some of them (with beautiful eyebrows) drank with great relish the desire producing wine offered by their lords after they had drank of them — 30
The king also heard in that drinking place the songs of the nymphs with stringed accompaniments — 31
Those nymphs, O King, dance on music before Lord Viṣṇu in the evenings — 32.
And as the night advanced they coming out of that cave began to retire into their beautiful caverns where they pass the night in the pleasant company of their husbands, reclining on the plushy mattresses strewn with various kinds of sweet flowers and decorated with lovely sweet scented creepers—33-34.

King Pururavā thus saw all the pastimes of those nympha on that mountain, went on with his devotion, his mind firmly fixed on Viṣṇu.—35

The train of the Gandharvas in company of their consorts went to the king, and said—"King! You have come to this region resembling the heaven, we shall grant you the boons of your desire after which it would be left to your pleasure either to stay here or to go back to your country"—36-37

The King Pururavā said—"All of you have superhuman powers, your presence is never in vain I therefore beseech you to give me the boon that I may please Viṣṇu"—38

They all unanimously gave the desired boon and the king stayed there for another month, worshipping Janārada in a happy mind—39

He became a great favourite of the Gandharvas and their consorts, who were pleased with his firm devotion (to Viṣṇu)—40

After a month, that king entered a lovely hermitage, decorated with innumerable gems, where he lived on water alone till the end of the bright fortnight in the month of Phālguna, when he heard the following words of Viṣṇu in a dream—"At the close of the night you will find the Sage Atrī, in whose company you will get your desire"—41-43

That king, powerful as Indra, having thus dreamt, got up early in the morning and with his senses under control, had his bath, and having performed daily duties worshipped Janārada, after which he came across the great sage Atrī—44-45

He then told him of his dream and heard the following words of the Devas—46

"King! It is just what it should be, there is not the least doubt about it" Thus getting the boons of his desire from Lord Viṣṇu, he worshipped the Lord and poured his oblations in the Fire and attained his object—47-48

"Here ends the One hundred and twentieth chapter dealing with the description of Aśva hermitage"
CHAPTER CXXI

Sūta said — To the north of that hermitage, on the back of the Himālaya, in the centre, stands the Mount Kailāsa the residence of Śiva which is full of Kalpa trees and the peaks of which are studded with gems. Kuvera also resides there with his Guhyakas — 1-2

Note — Guhyaka = A class of demigods who are the attendants of Kuvera and the guardians of his untold treasures.

Kuvera, the Lord of Alakāpuri enjoys the company of the nymphs there. Here is a lake shining like the Devas and is covered with the aroma of Mandāra flowers, and watered by the cold and sweet springs of Kailāsa. From this source runs the sacred Mandākini. On it stands the picturesque Nandana forest of vast dimensions. To the N E of Kailāsa is the Chandraprabhā Mountain shining like gems and full of metallic ores and thickets of sweet smelling flowers — 3-6

The famous Achhoda lake is situated near it from which flows the sacred river Achchhoda on whose banks is the Chandra-ratha forest. Manibhadra resides on that mountain with his attendants — 7-8

Manihhadra is the formidable general of the army of the Yaksas and is always followed by his retinue of Guhyakas. The sacred Mandākini as well as the Achchhoda flowing through the earthly plains enters the sea. Towards the S E of the Kailāsa is the Sarva-śadhi (full of every kind of herbs) Mount of red arsenic (manabśilā) facing the Chandraprabhā Mountain. The Mountain Hemāśringa (near it) shines red like the sun, below which there is a large lake of red water out of which comes a big river called the Lauhitya on the banks of which is the great heavenly forest known as Vesaka. Manihadhara Yaksas resides there — 9-13

Note — Lauhitya = The Brahmaputra

He remains with his well-behaved and pious attendants. To the N W of Kailāsa is the Mount Kakudmān where the herbs are plentiful (so called) because of the birth of the great bull of Rudra there. In front of this Trikakuda Mount is the mount of Aṇjana of three peaks — 14-15

There is the Mount Vaidyuta, full of all kinds of ores, below which is the most lovely Manasa-śravara lake which is resorted to by the siddhas. The sacred Sarayu runs from that lake and purifies the people. On its bank is the Vaibhāṣya forest — 16-17

In that forest resides the most valiant demon (Raksas), Brahmādhātā, the attendant of Kuvera and the son of Prehita — 18.
The Aruna Mountain to the West of Kailāsa is the most important one. It is full of efficacious herbs and gold and shines red —19

Mount Śrīmān, of golden colour, is the favourite of Śiva and is covered with lines of gold quartz —20

Next comes the great inaccessible Śrīngavān (full of peaks) Mount Hundreds of its lofty golden peaks touch the sky. It is the abode of Dhūmraloohana lord of the mountain and below it is the lake Sailoda.—21-22.

Out of which flows the sacred river Sailodakā which is also known as Chakṣust and flowing between these two mountains falls into the Western Sea —23

To the North of Kailāsa is the blessed Mount Sarvausadha near which is a majestic snow clad mountain full of yellow orpiment (Hantāla) —24

There is a mountain with golden peaks teeming with herbs below which is the lake of golden (coloured) sand and known as beautiful Vindu lake Here King Bhagiratha remained for a long time for the advent of the Ganges —25-26

He said —“May my ancestors attain heaven, their bones being drenched with the Ganges water” The Ganges which goes three ways made her first appearance on that very spot —27

The Ganges coming out of Somapāda divided Herself into seven streams There are sacrificial posts (yūps) of precious stones and vimānas (heavenly cars) of gold —28

Indra attained bliss by performing sacrifices on that spot along with the Devas Here is the milky way of heaven, the centre of the starry nebule The Ganges appears to shed splendid lustre there at night She has descended on the earth, having purified the Heaven and sky (Antarkasa) —29-30

She first descended on the head of the mighty Lord Śiva, Who curbed Her force by His glory Her waters falling on the Earth, owing to Śiva’s anger, formed the Bindulake When she was thus suddenly stopped by Śiva, she became angry as she understood his unkind motive and made an attempt to force Herself into the lower regions, having engulfed Śiva in her tumultuous current —31-33

Realising this proud attitude of the Ganges, the Lord thought of absorbing Her within Himself —34.

But, at the same moment, He perceived King Bhagiratha standing in front of Him He appeared lean, his veins becoming visible, troubled and hungry —35
The Lord then remembered that the king had first pleased Him by his austerities to get the sacred river—Ganges— which soon He had already granted to him. He therefore suppressed His wrath— 36.

Moreover, as He was absorbing the sacred stream, He heard the entreaties of Brahma. He, therefore, freed the current from His hold. — 37.

Being pleased with the devotion of Bhagiratha, the Lord, for His sake, let the river loose into seven branches, three of which went to the East, three to the West (and one near Himself), thus the three-wayed Ganges became flowed in seven streams— 38-39.

Nalini, Hladini and Pavani flow in the East, Sita, Sindhu and Chaksu in the West, and the seventh followed the King Bhagiratha to the South. Hence the name Bhagirathi which falls into the Dakshina Samudra (southern waters) washing the Himavarsha. Seven holy rivers trace their origin from the Hindu Sarovara — 40-42.

Those seven rivers having pierced through the Himalayas fall into the Dakshina Samudra (southern waters) after flowing through the Mleccha countries of the mountains, viz., Kukur, Randhra, Barbara, Yavana, Khasa Pulika, Kulattha and Angalokya — 43-44.

Note—Kukur=Daratha
Khasa or Khasa=A mountainous country in the North of India.

The Chaksu stream of the Ganges before entering the sea waters the following countries—Vira (China?), Maru, Kalika, Sulika, (Chulaka?), Tusara, Barbara, Pahlava, Pardha, and Saka, while Darada, Urja, Guda, Gandhara, Austra, Kuh, Sivapura, Indramaru, Vasati, Samantaj, Sindha, Urvasa, Barwa, Kulatha, Bhutanaramaka, Sunamukha, and Uradhama form the basin of the Sindhu stream. The abodes of the Gandharvas, Kunnaras, Yaksha, the Rakshasas, Vidyadharas, Saipasa, the countries of Kimpurusa Naras, Kiratas, and Pulindas, Kuru, (Bharaba), Panchalas, Kausikas, Matsya, Magadha, Anga, Brahmittara, Banga (Bengal) and Tammalpta, these Aryan janapadas are watered by the sacred Ganges, which striking against the Vindya Hills falls in the Southern Waters — 45-51.

The Hladini Ganges runs eastward into the sea after passing through the following countries—the countries of Upaka, Nisadha, Dhivara, Risika, Nilamukha, Kekara, Ekakarna, Kirata, Kalanjara, Vikarna, Kusika and Svargabhaumaka — 52-54.

The Nalini stream, too, runs to the east to the sea through the following countries—Kupatha, Indrayumna Sarovara, Kharpatha, Keta Saukupatha, Ujjjanka, Maru, Kutha, Pravarana — 55-57.

The swift running Pavani Ganges passes eastward through Tomara, Hansamarga, Samuhaka, various mountains and other eastern countries; and then through Kaina, Pravārana, Āśvamukha, Sumeru Mountain, the land of the Vydyādharas, whence the mighty stream has entered the Śaṅgamandala Kośtha a big lake —58-59

Thousands of tributaries and rivulets spring from the main streams. The God of rain—Indra—draws out His store of rainwater from there —60.

The Surabhi forest stands on the banks of the river Vansankasārā. There resides Hiranyakṣiga the most powerful and learned follower of Kuvera who has been forbidden to take any part in the sacrifices. Surrounded by the learned (progeny of Atri) and the Brāhmaṇakṣasas, the four attendants of Kuvera reside there. The residents of the hills and the mountains attain double powers (by practice, as compared to other folks —6-164

At the back of the Hemakūta is the lake of the snakes (sarpa) out of which flow the two rivers, Sarasinatī and Jyotisamatī falling to the eastern and western seas respectively —65.

A little further on is the lake Viṣṇupada on the Nisadha Mount. Both these lakes (Nāya and Viṣṇupada) are the favourite resorts of the Gandharvas —66.

The lake Chandraprabha and the sacred Jambū river,—the bed of Jamvananda gold, have their source in the Sumeru Mount. The two blue water lakes, the Payoda and the sacred Pandarika, are the mothers of two sister lakes one of which is called the Uttara Minaśa from which the rivers Mrigyā and Mrigakānta trace their origin. In the Kuru country there are twelve lakes under the name of Vaijaya that are full of lotus beds and fish, &c. They are all like the ocean (in extent) —71. The rivers Sānti and Mādhvī spring from them. There is no rainfall in the eight lakes Kimpuruṣa, &c. They are full of water and (aquatic) vegetables —67-72.

The Mounts Vālāhaka, Rūṣabha, Chakra, Maināka pervading in all directions merge into the sea —73.

The Mounts Chandīkānta, Drona and Sumahān are spreading in the North till they have merged into the Great Northern ocean —74.

The Mounts Chakra, Vadhūraka and Nārada spread in the West till they have also merged into the Great Western Ocean —75.

The Mounts Jīmūta, Drāvana, Maināka and Chandra are spreading towards the South till they have submerged in the Dakṣhina Samudra —76.

Between the Mounts Chakra and Maināka in the southern portion of the heaven is the Śamvartaka Agni (volcanic mount) which drinks the water of the seas. The Agni (volcanic) mountains Auvra, Bāravā mukha too are submerged into the Lavana Samudra. These four mountains merged into the ocean (for safety) when Indra began to destroy their wings.
CHAPTER CXXII.

(by His thunderbolt) and they are still visible on particular days in the bright and dark fortnights —77 79.

The divisions of the Bhārathavarsa are thus described. Those named within the limits of Bhārathavarsa are visible there and the rest are described elsewhere —80

The more northern (one of those mountains) the region, the better it is. The people residing there are healthy, pious, longlived and possessed of the sterling qualities (Dharma, Artha, Kāma, &c.) Various classes of people live in those khandas. The universe thus holding the various regions on her is known as Prithvī or Jagat (Earth) —81-82

Here ends the one hundred and twenty-first chapter describing the Jambudvīpa

CHAPTER CXXII

Sūta Sāid -- Now hear from me, O, holy twice born! the description of Sākadvīpa. Its width is twice that of the Jambudvīpa, while its perimeter is thrice its breadth. The Kṣārā Samudra is surrounded by this Dvipa. It has many sacred janapadas and the people live for a long number of years. The people are full of power and forbearance. How can there be any famine then? There are seven white mountains full of precious stones. Other three Dvipas have each seven mountains. These Ratnakara mounts are broad, extend in all directions and have most lofty peaks. All the mountains maintain a sort of uniform length in each direction. Sākadvīpa has Kṣārā Samudra and Kihra Samudra on its either sides respectively. Now I shall tell you something about the seven mountains of Sākadvīpa —1-7

The first of them is the Mount Meru inhabited by the Devas and the Gandharvas. It stretches out long in the East and has a mine of gold and is called the Udaya Mountain there. Clouds gather there to give rain and then disappear. Parallel to it stands the Mount Jaladhāra which is described like the moon and is full of various kinds of herb and the God of rain draws out his store of rain from it in plenty —8-10

Further to it is the inaccessible Nārada Mountain where were in ancient times the two hills of Nārada and Parvata —11

Beyond it is the Mount Śyāma the inhabitants of which were dark in complexion —12

(Not far from it) is the Dundubhi Mountain similar to Śyāma Mountain and here the Devas first placed a Dundubhi (drum), whose sound brought about death —13
The mighty Mount Sāhnala is full of precious stones and near it is the big mountain of silver which is known as Somaka, on account of the Devas first drinking the draught of ambrosia there. It was there where Garuḍa stole the nectar for his mother — 14-15

Adjacent to it stands the Mount Ambikeya, also known as Sumanś, where the demon Hiranyakaśapa was killed by the Lord Varāha. Near it stands the Crystal Mountain, Vibhṛaja, which is full of herbs and garlands. It is a volcano, that is why it is called Vibhṛaja (fire agitator), it is also called Kesava. The wind there is very strong — 16-18

I shall now name the mountains with the divisions, O, holy twice born and hear it attentively — 19

Those khaṇḍas have double names like the mountains. The mountain as well as Varsa of Udaya is known as Udaya and Jaladhāra — 20

Udayakhaṇḍa is called the Gatabhayakhaṇḍa and the Jaladhāra khaṇḍa is known as the Sukumāra — 21

That is called the (Śaśāra) Sitala khaṇḍa, and Kaumārakhaṇḍa is in the Nārada Mountain which is also known as Sukhodaya — 22

Anihaka is the name of the khaṇḍa on which is the Śyama Mountain which has also been called the Āṇandaka by the sages — 23

Kusumotakara is the khaṇḍa on which lies the Somaka Mountain which is also known as Aṣṭa — 24

Maināka is the khaṇḍa of the Mount Ambikeya. It is also called Kṣemaka. The khaṇḍa of the Vibhṛaja Mountain is called Dhrūva as well as Vibhṛaja — 25

Of the same dimensions as Jambudvīpa is the huge Sāka tree in the centre of the Dwīpa itself, frequented by the people. Those regions were frequented by the Devas, the Gandharvas, the Bards (chāranas), and the Siddhas (anchorites), who freely enjoy the beauty of the place. It contains many janapadas peopled by the four varṇas — 26-28

There are seven rivers in each one of these mountains which fall into the sea and each one has a duplicate name, of which the Ganges is an exception, being sevenfold — 29

First one is the Sukumāri Ganges whose waters are clear and blessed. It is also called the Munitaptā — 30

The second one is called the Sukumāri-Tapsidhā and Satt, the third one is the Nandā which is also known as Pāvanī — 31

The fourth one is called the Śibika and Dvividhā, the fifth one is known as Ikṣu and Kuhū — 32

The sixth one is known as Venukā and Amritā and the seventh one is called the Sukritā and Gabhastī — 33
Of the above-mentioned seven rivers one flows in each sub-division of the Sākadvīpa, and they all purify the people of those regions with their sacred waters — 34

There are myriads of other rivers, and rivulets as well as lakes, formed by copious supply of rain water let fall by Vāsava (Indra) into these — 35

It is very difficult to enumerate and give proper measurements of all those rivers and rivulets. They are all sacred. The people of the janapadas who drink their waters get happiness. Śāntabhaya, Pramāda, Śiva, Ananda, Sukha, Kṣemaka, and Nava, such are the seven janapadas situated there, where all the rules and customs (Āchāra) of Varna and Āśrama are observed — 36-38

The people are healthy, robust, and free from the clutches of death, neither are they prone to growth and decay. There the four ages do not prevail in succession. The age of Tretā is eternal there — 39-40

Almost similar is the condition of age in the other five Dvīpas, regard being had to the superiority and otherwise of the khandas. There is no confusion in the varnas there, and the people of that place are happy, as they seldom deviate from the path of virtue. There are no such things as fraud, greed, jealousy, fear and malicious fault finding. The country is free from vices and is truly natural. There is none to inflict punishment there, nor on whom punishment should be inflicted. The people being virtuous, get mutual protection from their own virtuous deeds.— 41-44

Kuṣa Dvīpa

The Kuṣadvīpa is very great in circumference. It is full of rivers, lakes, and snowclad mountains, in which are to be found various kinds of minerals, gems, trees and countries (janapadas) — 45-46

The flowers, fruits, various varieties of trees, grains and wealth are in plenty there. The trees are always full of flowers and fruits. Gems of every kind are there — 47

It is also full of domestic and wild animals. Now, hear, by degrees, a brief description of the Kuṣa Dvīpa. I am going to give you an entire description of the third Varṣa,—Kuṣa Dvīpa. It is surrounded on all sides by the Kṣirasamudra — 49

It is double, in its dimensions, of Sākadvīpa and there are seven mountains containing various kinds of precious stones — 50

The number of rivers—the home of innumerable gems,—is also seven and the mountains have double names as in Sākadvīpa, etc — 51
The first is the Mount Kumuda, shining like the Sun and is also called the Vidrumochchaya — 52

The second mountain, containing all the metals and rocky peaks, is known as the Unnata or Hema and is covered with the yellow orpiment. The third is the Valâhaka or the Dyutumâ, full of black pigment or antimony — 53-55

The fourth is the Drona Mountain, also known as the Puspavân, on the summit of which there are medicinal herbs efficacious in curing the wounds caused by the arrows of Visâyakârta, as well as the herbs that give new life (Mritasanjânti). The fifth one is the Kanka or the Kusâdâya Mountain. It is also full of choice herbs, fruits, flowers and creepers — 56 58

The sixth one is the Mahîsa or the Hari. It is black like the clouds; and Mahîsa Agni (volcano?) begotten from the water (rising from the sea?) lives there (in the form of fire). And the seventh one is the Kukudmâna also known as the Mandâra. It is full of all kinds of minerals and precious stones, guarded by Indra Himself. The root ‘manda’ means water and since it scatters water, it is called Mandâra, in company of Brahma, for the good of the people. The internal dimensions of these mountains are double — 60-63

These are the seven mountains of Kusâdvipa and now their subdivisions will be enumerated — 64

Śvetadvipa is the name of the region where lies the Kumuda Mountain. It is also known as Unnata. The second one is the Lohitâkhandha also called the Vepusundala, where lies the Unnata Mountain. Jîmûta or Svairathâkâra is the khandha of the Valâhvaka Mountain. Harika or Levana is the khandha of the Drona Mountain. Kakuda or Dhrutumâ is the khandha of the Kanka Mountain — 65-67

Mahîsa or Prabhâkara is the khandha of the Mahîsa Mountain and Kukudmâna or Kapila is the khandha of the Mountain Kukudmâna — 68

Thus in every dvipa there are seven khandnas with an equal number of rivers and mountains — 69

There are seven rivers in each khandha. Their waters are pure and sacred and each one has a duplicate name. The first one is Dhûtapâpâ which is also known as Yoni. Sitâ or Nîla is the second. The third one is Pavitrâ also called Vîtrîpâ. The fourth one is Hâdînâ or Chandramâ. The fifth one is Vidyuta or Suklâ, the sixth one is Pundrâ or Vibhavast. The seventh one is Mahâtî also called Dhriti. There are thousands of their branches that run where Indra pours down rains. Thus I have described the Kuśâ Dwipa. Its measurement has been described while describing the measurement of Śakadvīpa. It is surrounded by the Ghunta Manda Samudra—70-76.

This huge dvīpa, thus surrounded, looks like the moon and is twice as great as the Kṣira Samudra in its magnitude—77.

Kraunča Dvīpa

Now I shall speak of the Kraunčadvīpa which is double the size of Kraunča Dvīpa—78.

It surrounds the Ghunoda sea like the tyre of a wheel—79.

The people of this Dvīpa are of a superior class. Devana is the first mountain beyond which stands the Govinda—80.

Further on, from Govinda is the beautiful Kraunča Mountain, after which is the Pāvana and beyond it is the Andhakāraka—81.

Next to Andhakāraka is the Devāvrita Mountain, after which comes the mighty Pundarika. All these seven mountains of the Kraunča Dvīpa are full of gems, each being twice the size of that preceding it—82-83.

The sub-divisions of that dvīpa are, viz.—Kusala, Manonuga Vāmana, Uṣna, Pāvana, Andhakāraka, Munidesa and Dundubhisvana—84-86.

Dundubhisvana Khandā is full of fair complexioned men, and peopled by holy persons, and saddhas and chārans. There is a sacred rīver in each khandā—87.

They are—Gaurī, Kumudvati, Sandhyā, Rātri, Manojavā, Khyāti, Pundarikā. They are known as the seven Ganges—88.

Thousands of rivers arising out of them flow close by. All of them are very deep. Nobody, even in course of centuries, would be able to describe fully all the countries through which these rivers pass, with the rise, growth and decay of the people inhabiting them—89-90.

I shall now describe to you the Śālmaladvīpa, which is double the size of Kraunča, and is surrounded by the Dadhi Ocean—91-92.

Śālma Dvīpa

The people residing in the sacred janapadas of that region are very long-lived. There are no visitations of famine there, and the inhabitants of that place are very forbearing, merciful, and illustrious—93.

The following are the mountains of that region—The Sumanā, shining like the sun, and of yellow colour. Kumbhamaya, the central one is also called Sarvasukha. It is full of herbs. The third is the great Rohita, of red hue (like that of Bhringa patra) and full of gold. The Kusala is the Varsa of the Sumanā Mountain, while Sukhôdoya is that of Kumbhamaya.
and Rôhina of the Rôhita Mountain, the precious stones of which are under the direct watch and ward of Indra, who, with Prajápati, gladly performs his duty there. Clouds do not rain there, there is neither summer nor winter. There is no prevalence of the Varna or Ādrama in those regions. No stars, planets or the moon shine there, nor is there any such thing as jealousy, hatred or fear—93-99.

There are fountains in the mountains, other sources of water, as well as the vegetable world. The people of this region obtain the best victuals of all the six flavours, without making any efforts on their part—100.

The people there are all of equal rank, neither high nor low, they are not greedy, nor do they store things. They are all healthy, powerful and happy, attaining all Siddhis of the mind, for a period of 30,000 years. The next three Dvipas enjoy the same happiness, life, beauty, virtue and prosperity. Thus I have described all the sacred Dvipas up to Śālmala (i.e., five). The Śālmaladvipa is encircled by the Sūrā Ocean, which is twice its size—101-104.

Here ends the one hundred and twenty second chapter describing the Dvipas (of Sāka, Kusa, Krauñcha and Śālmala).

CHAPTER CXXIII

Gómeda DvIPA

Sūta said—Ṛṣiśa! Now hear about the sixth dvipa, known as the Gómeda. It surrounds the Surodaka Ocean. Its size is double that of the Śālmaladvipa. It has two beautiful mountains—1-2.

The first one is Sumanā, full of antimony (Aññana), and the second one is the Kamada, full of all kinds of herbs. It is very lofty and full of gold. The Gómedadvipa is surrounded by the sixth ocean, Ikṣurásoda, which is double the size of the Suroda Ocean. The Mountains Dhätakt (or Sumanā) and Kumuda are the sons of Havya. They are of vast dimensions. The first sub-division is Saumana, also known as Dhätakt Khaḍa, after Dhätakt, the first mountain Gómeda Khaḍa is also called Sarvasukha. The Khaḍa of the Kumuda Mountain is called under the same name—Kumuda—3-7.

Both the mountains are round in shape, spreading from one end to the other, and are very lofty. To the east of the dvipa, stands the Mount Sumanā, while Mount Kumuda is on the west; both extending to the sea by means of offshoots, stretching from the east to the west.—8-9.
That region is divided into two parts by the feet of these mountains. Half of the southern portion is known as the Dhātaki Khandā, while the northern half is called the Kumuda Khandā. Both these countries (janapadas) belong to the Gomedadvipa, and they are of gigantic dimensions --10-11.

Puṣkara Duṭpa

I shall now speak of the seventh dvīpa, the Great Puṣkara, which surrounds the Ikṣurasoda Sea, which is double of Gomedā. It is itself surrounded by the Puṣkara (lakes or lotuses?) Chitrānu is the chief mountain, and it is full of lotuses and adorned with the rocks of wonderful gems. The Mount Chitrānu stands on the eastern half. Its circumference is 27,000 yojanas, and height is 24,000 yojanas. The western half is covered by the Mānasa Mountain, which looks like a full moon rising near the sea coast. Its height is 5,500 yojanas. The Mount Mahāvīta is its son which guards the western portion of this region. The half of the region lying east of this mountain is divided into two parts. The Puskaradvipa is surrounded by the sea, the water of which is tasteful. Its dimensions are double of the Gomedadvipa. The people of this dvīpa live up to 30,000 years. There are no exceptional changes there to this natural rule and the people are healthy, happy and have attained perfection in all the qualities of the mind. The people of the three superior dvīpas are all equal in happiness, life, beauty and bravery. There is no air of superiority or inferiority in them. Besides this, there is none to kill or be killed there, and there is a total absence of hatred, envy, fear, greed, pride, hypocrisy, enmity, &c. They are free from the differentiation of truth and untruth, virtue and vice. The order of Varna and Āśrama, the practice of rearing up domestic animals, trade, husbandry are also not in existence there. --12-23

The three kinds of knowledge, criminal laws and punishments are also not known there. It does not rain there, neither there are rivers in that region. The climate is also not influenced by heat or cold. The water supply and plant life of the country depends on the hill waterfalls. The seasons are the same as in Uttara Kuru. Happiness pervades all round. The troubles of old age are also unknown there. Such is the life in the Dhātaki and Mahāvīta Khandas. --24-26

Thus the seven dvīpas are surrounded by the seven oceans. The dimensions of a dvīpa tally with the dimensions of the sea preceding it (i.e., surrounded by it). Both the dvīpas and the oceans have thus gradually grown in magnitude, a vast store of waters being called the ocean. --27-28.
The root 'Rṣi' means to wander about in happiness, hence in these Vṛṣas all the four classes of people live happily — 29

The Tides

When the moon rises in the East, the sea begins to swell. The sea becomes less when the moon wanes. When the sea swells, it does so with its own waters (and not with additional water), and when it subsides, its swelling is lost in its own water (and does not actually lose any water). On the rising of the moon, the sea increases as if its waters have really increased. During the bright and dark fortnights, the sea heaves at the waxing of the moon and becomes placid at the wane of it, but the store of the water remains the same. The sea rises and falls, according to the phases of the moon, and 150 angulis (three-fourths of inches, or 112½ inches) is the measure of its rise and fall, on the two paṇa days (i.e., full moon and new moon days respectively). The place between two seas is called a dvipa. The sea is called Udāthi, on account of its containing water — 30-34

The mountains are called Giri because they swallow (i.e., hide everything Nigirna), and because they fill up (space), therefore they are called Parvata — 35

The Mount Śaka is in Śakadvipa, and is named as such — 36

Thus is Kuśastamba in the midst of the janapada in Kuśadvipa. The Mount Krauṇcha stands in Krauṇchadvipa, and is named after it — 37

A gigantic Sālalt tree stands in Sāmathadvipa and there is the Mount Gomeda in the dvipa of that name — 38

There is a banyan tree in the shape of a lotus in Puṣkaradvipa. The banyan tree has sprung up from the potency of Brahmā, and is adored by all the Devas, but really its origin is hidden in mystery. Piṭāpatai Brahmā resides in Puṣkaradvipa in company of the Śādhyas. He is adored by the 33 Devas, along with the Brahmarśis — 39-40

Thus all the great Rṣis and the Devas worship Brahmā there. Various kinds of jewels are produced in Jambūdvipa, and circulated thereto from other dvipas. The people of these dvipas, in order of their precedence, excel one another twofold in simplicity, chastity, truthfulness, self-control, health, and long life. In all the subdivisions of those dvipas, the inhabitants are protected by their own natural learning. They all get their food without any care to obtain it — 41-44

They eat the wholesome food, of the six flavours. Beyond Puṣkaradvipa is the sea of sweet water surrounding it, behind which is the Mount Lokâloka, both dark and bright, and at some part it is lighted up, while the other part beyond it is full of darkness. It takes up the outer half of the populated land and is surrounded on all sides by the sea.—45-48.

The water is ten times land and it protects the earth from all directions. The fire is ten times water which is upheld by the former everywhere.—49

The air is ten times fire which it holds. It spreads itself at an angle in the space where it encircles and holds the beings.—50

The Ākāsa which is ten times the air, holds all beings, and ten times greater is Bhutâdi (Ahañkāra) which surrounds the Ākāsa, and ten times the Bhutâdi is Mahâkāsa which stands holding them in turn, while it is itself held by the Unmanifested eternal. The mahatâtva, &c., are called vikāra and vikāri (producer of change and that in which the change is produced) in turn in relation to the support each gives and takes from the other.—51-53

The Vikāras, such as earth, &c., are circumscribed and limited, and each is greater than one preceding it which it permeates each is produced from the other and is upheld by it. They are held together by their mutual attraction. They are really separate (molecules), but by mutual contact look welded into one homogenous whole.—54-55

Of these, the elements, earth, water, fire and air, are well defined and limited. The higher elements are only seen as lights.—56

These lights, i.e., Ākāsa and other elements, too, are well defined. But, like smaller leaves which, though separate are not separately seen, being concealed in a larger vessel, these higher light-like elements, though separate and each supporting the other, are not visualized as such. They too excel each other, in the order of their precedence. The creation of the universe depends on their existence. The origin of life is in these Tattvas, hence without them there can be no life and action.—57-60

Thus we understand that these elements, Mahat, &c., partake of twofold characters, viz., cause and effect.—61

The position of the Earth and its circumference, with seven Dvipas and their extent, circumference and other measurements have thus been described. Such is the situation of only one part of the universal Pradhâna Tattva, O King! this much is to be heard of the position, &c., of the Earth. I shall next tell you about the movements of the Sun and the Moon.—62-65

Here ends the one hundred and twenty third chapter dealing with the position of the seven Dvipas in Bhuvanakosa.
CHAPTER CXXIV.

Sūta said — I shall now tell you, O Rṣi, something about the movements of the sun and the moon and the area illumined by these two moving bodies, viz. (the sun and the moon). This includes the space occupied by the seven dvīpas and the seven oceans, comprising (at a time) the half of the Earth, as well as many parts of the universe outside the Earth —1-2.

The sun and the moon shed their lights on the circumference of the Earth. The learned believe the heaven to have a similar circumference. The sun ordinarily lights up the three worlds in a moment. He is called Rāvi, for giving instantaneous (त=at once) light and thereby protecting (अ=protect) the creation.—3-4.

I shall again and again impress on you the vast magnitude of the sun and the moon. On account of the vastness of their magnitude, the expression mahat (Great) has been used in their connection. The circumference of the sun is equal to the diameter of the Bhāratavarṣa (?) It is 9,000 yojanas in diameter and three times as much in circumference —5-7.

The moon is twice as much bigger in circumference and diameter than the sun (?) I shall now repeat the measurements in yojanas of the terrestrial globe, comprising the seven dvīpas and the seven oceans, as enumerated in the Purāṇas. I shall now speak of the Sāmpratas and the Abhimants (?) The abhumant Devas of past ages are equal (in number ?) to the Sāmpratas, in form and name. Therefore I shall describe the surface of the Earth and the Sāmprata (present ?) Devas —8-11.

The Dvīyas are similar to the Sāmpratas in their entire distribution. The complete magnitude of the earth is 50 crore (yojanas) —12.

The half of the terrestrial globe lies north of the Mount Meru, while inside the Meru every direction extends to a crore of yojanas. The extent of the half terrestrial orb is 89,50,000 (yojanas ?) The extent of the world is 3,79,00,000 yojanas. This is the length of the seven dvīpas and the seven oceans.—13-16.

The magnitude of the interior orb is thrice of its whole extent, and is 11 crores and 37 lacs (yojanas ?). This is the internal magnitude —17-18.

The space in the firmament studded with the stars is equal in circumference to the magnitude of the entire earth below. In other words, the Earth has the same measurement as the Heaven. To the east of Meru, on the Mānasottama Mountain, is Sāstveka-Sārā, the city of Mahendra. It is full of gold. To the south of Meru is the city of Dharmarāja, called the Sampyamana, on the back of the Mānas Mountain. Vaivasvata Dharmarāja reades there. To the west of Sumeru, on the top of the Manasa Mountain, is the fair city of Varuna named Sūṣā. North of the Meru, on the top of the Manasa Mountain, is the Vibhavari city of Moon (Srīna). It is like the city of Mahendra. To the north of the Manasa Mountain, are the Lokapālās in the four directions, for the propagation of virtue and the protection of the universe. At the time of the Dakṣīṇāyana, the sun travels over the Lokapālās. Now hear about it. This sun, with the Jyotischakra (circle of light?) travels south-wards, at the speed of a swift arrow let loose from the bow—19-26

Note.—Dakṣīṇāyana—The sun’s progress south of the equator.

When He reaches the centre of Amarāvatī then He is seen to be rising in the Dharmarāja’s Samyammapuri, to be setting in Vibhābarī. That is the midnight time in Suṣāpuri—27-28.

When it is midaft in Dharmarāja’s city of Samyāminā, it is dawn in the Suṣāpuri of Varuna. When there is midnight in Vibhābarī, it is sunset in the city of Indra. When it is midaft in the Suṣāpuri of Varuna, the sun rises in Vibhābarī. When the sun rises in the Amaravati of Indra, it is midnight in the Samyamanā of Dharmarāja and sunset in the city of Varuna. Thus, like a fiery wheel, the sun moves with great rapidity and even visits the pleiades (the Great Bear). He thus goes round the (Manas) on four sides—29-33

The sun goes regularly to his two abodes, Udayā (rising) and Astamaya (setting), and his rays fall on three cities of the Devas, in the morning, at noon, and in the afternoon respectively. The rays of the rising sun grow stronger and stronger until at noon they reach their greatest intensity. After noon time He trudges along with subdued rays until He sets down. The sunrise and the sunset create east and west respectively—34-36

The sun gives out heat equally in all directions, in the front, sideways and backward. He is said to rise at a place where He is first seen and set where He (finally) disappears. The Mount Meru is northernmost place, though south of the LokaLoka Mountain. He is at a vast distance from the Earth and His rays too in their passage here (are obstructed by) go to other things, consequently, He is not visible at night.—37-39.

The sun appears high (on the horizon) when He reaches the centre of Puṣkaradvipa. He travels over the 32th of the world in one mūhūrta (a period of 48 minutes). That is to say, the speed of the sun in one mūhūrta (48 minutes) is 31,50,000 yojanas (368 of 9,45,00,000). Thus gradually He marches to the south. In His southward course (Dakṣīṇāyana), He travels in the space between Mānasottara and Meru thrice as much as in the centre of Puskara. Now hear of his southward course: He covers the whole circumference of the earth, \( 9,45,00,000 \) yojanas, in course of a day and night. After finishing his southward course when he comes at the equator (Vīśava rekhā), he travels over lights up the north of the Kṣaṇasāgara, as well as the Viṣųvamandala, whose extent all of you now hear.
It is \( 3,21,00,000 \) yojanas. In the month of Srāvana the sun in his northern course travels over Puskaradvipa, which is beyond the Gomeda-vipa.
The extent of the northern, southern and the middle of this journey should be noted as below: Jaradgava is in the middle, Airāvata in the north and Vaudvānara in the south. Nāgavīthi is the Uttarāvīthi (i.e., northern course begins with Nāgavīthi?) Ajavīthi is the Dakṣināvīthi, with Ajavīthi begins the southward course? The asterisms P Asādha and U Asādha, as well as the Mūla, Asvini, Bharani, and Krittikā form the Nāgavīthi Rohini, Ādrā and Mrigadāra are also Nāgavīthi (or Gajavīthi).

In the text quoted by Mr. Wilson, this should read Gajavīthi instead of Nāgavīthi.

The two Asādhās and the Mūla (constituting the vithi called Vaudvānara, along with the two vithis west of it, namely,) beginning with Ajavīthi (that is, Ajavīthi and Mrigavīthi) or the two vithis, East of Abhijit and ending with Svātī are the three vithis north of the Nāgavīthi.

Note — In other words, the three vithis of which Abhijit is the East, namely, Ajavīthi, Mrigavīthi and Vaudvānara-vīthi form the southern course. While the three vithis beginning with Nāgavīthi form the Northern course. This is repeated later on. The present verses 53 and 54 are evidently corrupt readings. The translation of the above two verses is tentative only.

And when the sun passes on to the asterisms Puṣya, Asleṣā and Punarvasu, then he is said to be on the Arāvāvīthi. These three Vithis comprise the Uttaramārga (northern course). When the sun is in Pūrva and Uttarasphālguna and Mahā, the Vithi is called Arṣabhi Pūrva and Uttarakṣṭhapada and Revatu are the Govitthi, while Śravana, Dhanṣṭhā and Vārūṇa are the Jaradgavīthi. These three Vithis form the middle course of the sun. Hastā, Svātī and Chitrā are the Ajavīthi, Jyeṣṭhā, Vidākhā and Mantra are the Mrigavīthi. Mūla, Pūrva and Uttara Asādha are the Vaudvānara-vīthi. These three Vithis form the southern route of the sun, now the (chordal) distance between the extreme points of these (Vithis), each should be noted —40-60

This is \( 31,03,300 \) yojanas. Now hear of this distance along the course, south and north of the equator. Such distance between the ecliptics and the equators in the centre is \( 1,025 \) yojanas (i.e., between the solstices and the equator). The sun travelling north and south of the (equatorial) line has a course of 8,000 mandalas during Uttarayana, but its southern course, called also the outerward course, is similarly traversed by the sun—61-66.

Now hear of the magnitude of these mandalas. Each mandala is 18,058 yojanas in extent, being obliquely inclined to the equator.—67-68.

In the nave (or centre) of the mandala, the sun completes one rotation in a day, like the potter's wheel, such is the case with the moon also—69.

In His Dakṣināyana march, the sun travels very fast, like a wheel, and that is why he traverses over a vast area within such a short duration—70.

In other words, the sun in his southward course rapidly goes over thirteen and a half asterisms in 12 muhūrtas (in day time?), and in 18 muhūrtas at night, in travelling comparatively at a slower speed, like the lump of clay in the centre of the potter's wheel—71-72.

In His Uttarayana course, the sun moves on slowly, and consequently, He is only able to cover a short distance during a long time—73.

Then He goes over only 13 (and a half?) asterisms in 18 muhūrtas in day time, and at night He goes over the same number of asterisms in 12 muhūrtas—74.

Note: In other words, the total length of the day and night being 30 muhūrtas, a mūhūrta is equal to 1/10 of an hour. The longest day, i.e., 21st June, is said to be of 18 muhūrtas, or 14 hours, 34 minutes, when the shortest night will be of 12 muhūrtas, or 9 hours, and 36 minutes. The longest night will be 14 hours, 24 minutes on 21st December, and when the day will be the shortest, i.e., of 9 hours and 36 minutes. Thus is true for the latitude of 35°N. Looking to the map of India, it is somewhere in Kashmir. This portion, or the original from which this was copied, must have been composed near the region of modern Gilgit or Chitral, where the longest day and night is of 18 muhūrtas.

Like the mound of clay on potter's wheel, the pole star moves more slowly than either of them—75.

The pole star completes one day and night of 30 muhūrtas in revolving on the orbit between the two extremes—76.

When the sun is on His Uttarayana course, His movement in the day is slower and in the night it is faster—77.

And in His Dakṣināyana course, His movement in the day is faster and in the night it is slower—78.

With this different speed, the sun creates day and night (of different length) in Ajavithi in the south and on the north the Lokāloka mountain.—79.

Outside the Varṣāvānara path (the Solstice of Cancer), the light comes on the world from the Loka mountain. It is day time when the light of the sun spreads from the Puṣkara—80.
The Mount Lokāloka is 10,000 yājanas high and extends sideways and outwards. The Mountain is partly illuminated and partly dark, and is round in shape, the inner portions of the Lokāloka Mountain are illuminated by the sun, the moon and the stars. This is the Aloka Mountain, and the Mount Nirāloka is beyond it —81-83

The verb (श्व) lōka means to see, aloka (विश्व) is opposite of lōka. The sun in his journey creates this lōka (light) and aloka (darkness), hence this time is called sandhyā (joining light and darkness), i.e., twilight. Ugra is the night and Vyūstī is the day according to the wise —84-85

One muhūrtas consists of 30 kalās, and a day has 15 muhūrtas. The day increases or decreases as the twilight muhūrtas increase or decrease, owing to difference of three muhūrtas in the course of sun’s journey through the line (equatorial), etc. (The day is divided into five parts, each of three muhūrtas). The first three muhūrtas is Prātah (morning), the next three muhūrtas is known as Śāvagava. Three muhūrtas after that is called the Madhyāma (noon) and a similar number of muhūrtas after it bring about the afternoon called aparās by the sages, this is followed by evening (Śāyam) of the last three muhūrtas. The day is of fifteen muhūrtas on the equator —84-91

The days vary in duration when the sun is travelling south or north of the equator. When the days are long the nights are short (i.e., in Dakṣināyana), and when the nights are long the days are short (in Uttarāyana) —92

The equinoxes (Vishuva) come in the autumn and spring, i.e., the days and nights are of equal duration at the autumn and vernal equinoxes. Beyond darkness is light, and beyond light is darkness —93

The Lokapālas are located in the centre of the Lokāloka Mountain. Of these Mahātmas, four are there till the annihilation of the world —94

The first is Vairāja Sudhāma, the second one is the Prajāpati Kardama, the third one is the Hīranayārāma Parjanya, the fourth one is Raajas Ketumāna. These four are free from the feeling of opposites (e.g., pleasure and pain, etc.), of conceit, sloth, of grasping. Each one of the four quarters is occupied by each of them on the Mount Lokāloka —95-96

The Northern peak of the Agastya Mountain which is inhabited by the Devas and which lies outside the Vaśvānara path is the way of the Pitrīs —97

On this pitriyāna reside the 'Agnihotri' Rīṣis, desirous of progeny and procreators of the people of the universe —98

O King, these Rīṣis, who originate progeny, begin the works of creation and uplift humanity. They move about in Dakṣināpatha —99.
They establish the order of duty in each yuga (Dharma), when it is disturbed, with their learning, piety and asceticism —100

The previous Lokapālas are born in the house of their late compeers. In their absence, the latter take their place in this way, by mutual succession they continue till the destruction of the world 88000 of these Rṣis, who live the life of a householder, remain on the Dakṣina (south) path of the sun till the end of the world I have thus enumerated those Rṣis whose funeral ceremonies have been performed. According to the usages of the world (to stand as examples) these Rṣis (Siddhas) have passed through the experience of birth, feelings of like and dislike, lustful passions, sexual and other worldly enjoyment, and death. —101-105

The seven Rṣis desiring progeny took birth in the age of Dwāpara and conquered death, as they despaired the work of propagating children 88000 Rṣis have gone into the path of those seven Rṣis by becoming Urdbhāreta (perpetual celebates). They will live till the destruction of the world on the northern path of the sun. They became immortal as by their example they taught the people the sacrifice of lust, passion, likes and dislikes, abstaining from procreation, and other worldly enjoyment, by showing their worthlessness. Those who remain till the end of the universe are called immortals. They exist so long as the three worlds exist. Not so the mortals who follow the path of the Māra, such as lust, great sins like the slaying of embryonic cells and great virtues like the performance of Āśvamedha yajña (Horse sacrifice). The immortals or the Urdbhāretas go into unconsciousness at the time of the dissolution of the universe, and not before —106-110

Note—The three lights of the world are first, the light of the Fathers (Pitri), second, the light of the Urdbhāretas (solitaries) and third, the light of Viṣṇu or the Bhaktas, who perform duties for the sake of duty.

Dhruva (pole-star) is north of, or, above the region of the seven Rṣis. It is the illustrious foot of Viṣṇu. It is third Lightgiver of the world —111

Those who reach that highest seat of Viṣṇu, transcend all sorrows, so, all those who desire to reach the world of Dhruva, remain in the path of virtue —112

Here ends the one hundred and twenty fourth chapter dealing with extension of sun, moon and the world in Bhūvanakoṣa
NOTE

The following extracts from Colebrooke's essays will show that the Hindus knew the true dimensions, etc., of the earth and so the description in the above chapter must be taken in allegorical sense in several places.

It appears also from a passage of Brahmagupta's refutation of the supposed errors of that author, and from his commentator's quotation of Aryabhatta's text, that this ancient astronomer maintained the doctrine of the earth's diurnal revolution round its axis. 'The sphere of the stars,' he affirms, 'is stationary, and the earth, making a revolution, produces the daily rising and setting of stars and planets.' Brahmagupta answers, 'If the earth move a minute in a prana, then whence and what route does it proceed? If it revolve, why do lofty objects fall?' But his commentator, Prithudaka-swami, reples, 'Aryabhatta's opinion appears nevertheless satisfactory, since planets cannot have two motions at once and the objection, that lofty things would fall, is contradicted, for, every part of the earth is also the upper, since, wherever the spectator stands on the earth's surface, even that spot is the uppermost point.'

We here find both an ancient astronomer and a later commentator maintaining, against the sense of their countrymen, the rational doctrine which Heraclides of Pontus, the Pythagorean Euphantes, and a few others amongst the Greeks, had affirmed of old, but which was abandoned by the astronomers both of the east and of the west, until revived and demonstrated in comparatively modern times.

Brahmagupta is more fortunate in his reasoning where he relates another theory of the alternation of day and night imagined by the Jains, who account for the diurnal change by the passage of two suns, and as many moons, and a double set of stars and minor planets, round a pyramidal mountain, at the foot of which is this habitable earth. His confusion of that absurdity is copied by Bhaskara, who has added to it from Prithudaka's gloss on a different passage of Brahmagupta, a refutation of another notion ascribed by him to the same sect, respecting the translation of the earth in space.

This idea has no other origin than the notion, that the earth, being heavy and without support, must perpetually descend and has, therefore, no relation whatever to the modern opinion of a proper motion of the sun and stars.

Part of the passage of Bhaskara has been quoted in a former essay. What regards the further subject now noticed is here subjoined.

'The earth stands firm, by its own power, without other support in space.'

'If there be a material support to the earth, and another upholder of that, and again another of this, and so on, there is no limit. If finally self-support must be assumed, why not assume it in the first instance? Why not recognize it in this multiform earth?'

CHAPTER CXXIV

"As heat is in the sun and fire, coldness in the moon, fluidity in water, hardness in iron, so mobility is in air, and immobility in the earth, by nature. How wonderful are the implanted faculties!

"The earth, possessing an attractive force, draws towards itself any heavy substance situated in the surrounding atmosphere, and that substance appears as if it fell. But whether can the earth fall in ethereal space which is equal and alike on every side?

"Observing the revolution of the stars, the Baudhāyas acknowledge, that the earth has no support, but nothing heavy is seen to remain in the atmosphere, they therefore conclude that it falls in ethereal space.

"Whence dost thou deduce, O Baudhāya, this idle notion, that, because any heavy substance thrown into the air, falls to the earth, therefore the earth itself descends?"

He adds this further explanation in his notes: "For, if the earth were falling, an arrow shot into the air would not return to it when the projectile force was expended, since both would descend. Nor can it be said that it moves slower, and is overtaken by the arrow, for heaviest bodies fall quickest, and the earth is heaviest."

From the quotations of writers on astronomy, and particularly of Brahmagupta, who, in many instances, cites Āryabhata to controvert his positions (and is in general contradicted in his censure by his own scholiast Prithudaka, either correcting his quotations, or vindicating the doctrine of the earlier author), it appears that Āryabhata affirmed the diurnal revolution of the earth on its axis, and that he accounted for it by a wind or current of aerial fluid, the extent of which, according to the orbit assigned to it by him, corresponds to an elevation of little more than a hundred miles from the surface of the earth... that he possessed the true theory of the causes of lunar and solar eclipses, and disregarded the imaginary dark planets of the mythologists and astrologers, affirming the moon and primary planets (and even the stars) to be essentially dark, and only illuminated by the sun, that he noticed the motion of the solstitial and equinoctial points, but restricted it to a regular oscillation, of which he assigned the limit and period that he ascribed to the epicycles, by which the motion of a planet is represented, a form varying from the circle and nearly elliptic that he recognized a motion of the nodes and apsides of all the primary planets, as well as of the moon, though in this instance, as in some others, his censurer imputes to him variance of doctrine.

The magnitude of the earth, and extent of the encompassing wind, is among the instances wherein he is reproached by Brahmagupta with versatility, as not having adhered to the same position throughout his writings, but he is vindicated on this, as on most occasions, by the scholiast of his censurer. Particulars of this question, leading to rather curious matter, deserve notice.

Āryabhata's text specifies the earth's diameter, 1050 yoynam, and the orbit or circumference of the earth's wind [spiritus vector] 3980 yoynam, which, as the scholiast rightly argues, is no discrepancy. The diameter of this orbit, according to the remark of Brahmagupta, is 1060.

CHAPTER CXXV

The Rishis after hearing such an interesting narration about the sun, moon and the planets asked the Sage Sūta. How do the planets move about in the Solar system? Are they connected with one another or do they move about independently? What causes them to move on? If they move about by themselves, how do they do so? We wish to hear all about these things. Pray explain these to us —1-3.

Sūta said —I shall tell you about these deceptive things. People are deceived about them even when they see them with their own eyes —4.

Among the fourteen stars is the planetary porpoise (Śāumāra). The son of Uttāmapāda has taken this shape of a sacrificial post (Medhi) in the sky and is known as Dhrūva. It revolves and causes the sun, moon and planets to revolve also. The stars, too, follow it in its wheel—like motion. These luminaries revolve owing to the will force of Dhrūva being tied to it by the aerial chord. Their separation and union, period, rising and setting, disturbances, journey southwards, northward, and in the central region, and eclipse, are directed by Dhrūva —5-9.

The clouds Jīmūta beget life. These clouds remain suspended on the air Abahana. They change shape (i.e. condensed), and on going up a Yojana from there form into rain hence they are called the source of rain. The clouds Puṣkarābarta have been born from the wings (of the mountains). These wings are named Puṣkara and hold a huge volume of water hence these clouds are known as Puṣkarāvarta. The valiant Indra cut down the wings of the mountains that used to fly at their will and cause ruin and destruction to the rising generation (of the universe). These clouds assume various forms, give out thundering noise, produce deluge of rains at the end of the kalpa and quench the destructive blaze of fire at the same time. They support the air, are full of immortality and cause the end of the Kalpa. The bursting of the Brahma's egg out of which came forth the four headed Brahmā Himself, produced other clouds, they are the outer crust of egg, and are called Megha (clouds). Without distinction their chief source of nourishment is smoke. The most important of them is Parjanya —10-17.

There are four elephants too, (Dīggaja). There are two divisions of elephants (Hasti), mountains (Parvata), clouds (Megha), and serpents (Bhogi) They originally sprang from the same common stock. Their origin lies in water. The Parjanya clouds and Hasti wax during Hemanta season and pour out showers of snow born of cold, to promote the growth of grain—18-19

The sixth air Parivaha is their chief support. The same air holds the Ākasa Ganges, whose waters are holy, nectarlike and pass in three directions. The elephants hold down (Diggajas) her sacred waters in their bulky trunks and throw them diffused by the air and the same is styled dew. The Mount Hemakūta is in the south (of Meu?), to the north and south of the snow clad Mounts (Himāvata) is the Pundra cloud which greatly increases the stock of rain. All the rain formed there converts itself into the snow. The wind on the Himavata draws by its own force these snow flakes and pours them on the great mountains. Beyond the Himāvata there is little rain—20-25

Next to it is another cloud named Ivā that helps the growth of beings. These two clouds enhance the amount of rains—26

Thus I have described to you the clouds and how they are fed. The Sun is said to be producer of rain—27

Rain, heat and cold, night, evening and day, prosperity and adversity, all originate from Dhruva—28

The sun from his position draws water of Dhruva in molecular form, remains in the bodies of various beings, and goes out in every direction in the form of smoke when they burn the Sthāvara (immovable) and the Jangamas (moveables)—29-30

This (smoke) forms itself into clouds. The sun is the centre of clouds. He absorbs the water by His bright rays. His rays with the help of air draw out water from the ocean. But by means of white rays he obtains rain from the clouds in due seasons. The waters from the (vapours of the clouds when brought into contact of the wind fall in the shape of rain. Such rain falls for six months for the good of the creation. Wind roars and electricity is produced. Fire is said to be the source of lightning—31-34

Meghas are called so on account of their sprinkling the landscape (with water). This expression is formed from the root Miha (to sprinkle). That which does not throw down water is called Abhra. Hence Abhra is stationary. The sun established by Dhruva is the creator of rain—35

The air from Dhruva drives away the rain. The circle of stars comes out of the sun and the planets and moves away from them, in the end, it re-enters the sun established in Dhruva. Hence the chariot of the sun is seen near —30-37.

It rests on a wheel with five spokes and three naves (or triple nave). It has eight wheels under the same circumference. They have a common axle dotted with the particles of gold. The sun moves in such a glorious chariot. It extends to a lac of yojanas. The pole (Iṣādanda) of the chariot is double in its longitude* —38-39.

That chariot of the sun has been created by Brahmā for necessity. It is made of gold, pure and unmixed drawn by most handsome horses that run with the speed of wind. The vedic metres are the steed to whom the wheel is attached. The chariot resembles the vehicle of Varuna in all details —40-41.

The sun moves about in the heaven every day on that chariot. Now the various parts of the sun as well as of his chariot denote the various parts of the year —42.

Day is one of the naves of His chariot's wheel. Years are the spokes of the wheels. The six seasons are its peripheries —43.

Night is its fender, Dharma is the high banner, the yugas of the axle and pins, the kalas (parts) which carry the ārtas (?) [This line seems to be a corrupt reading]. Kusṭhas are the nostrils of the horses, moments (ksanfas) are their row of teeth, Nimesa is the (auvakara) floor, Kāla, the pole (Iṣā). Artha and Kāma are the pins of the yoke and axle. The vedic metres are the seven horses that like the air swiftly glide with the chariot Gāyatri, Trisūpta, Jagati, Anastiupa, Pankti, Vrihatti, Uṣnik the seventh —44-47.

The wheel is attached to the axle and the axle to Dhruva. The axle revolves with the wheel and Dhruva revolves with the axle. The

---

*We are to understand, here, both in the axle and yoke, two levers. one horizontal, the other, perpendicular. The horizontal arm of the axle has a wheel at one end; the other extremity is connected with the perpendicular arm. To the horizontal arm of the yoke are harnessed the horses, and its inner or right extremity is secured to the perpendicular. The upper ends of both perpendiculars are supposed to be attached to Dhruva, the polestar, by two aerial cords, which are lengthened in the sun's southern course, and shortened in his northern, and, retained by which to Dhruva, as to a pivot, the wheel of the car traverses the summit of the Mānasottara mountain, on Puskara-dwipa, which runs, like a ring, round the several continents and oceans. The contrivance is commonly compared to an oil-mill, and was, probably, suggested by that machine, as constructed in India. As the Mānasottara mountain is but 50,000 leagues high, and Meru, 84,000, whilst Dhruva is 1,500,000, both levers are inclined at obtuse angles to the nave of the wheel and each other. In images of the sun, two equal and semi-circular axles connect a central wheel with the sides of the car. Wilson's Viṣṇu Purāṇā. Vol II, p. 250 (2nd Edition).
axle moves along with the wheel propelled by Dhrúva. The chariot has been thus designed owing to some special reason—48-49

The success of the sun’s chariot is due to the conjunction (with Dhrúva). Thus this divine solar chariot moves about in the heaven. The pins of the yoke and axle are on its south. The pair of reins of the yoke and the wheel of this aerial chariot revolve round and round in all directions like the potter’s wheel. The pins of the yoke and the axle traversing about the four quarters revolve round Dhrúva by the force of the wind. The reins of that travelling chariot shorten on the Northern orbit and lengthened on the Southern. The pair of reins are fastened to the pins of the yoke and axle and are held by Dhrúva, who thus attracts the sun. When the reins are drawn in by Dhrúva the sun covers on either side of the line (diameter) 8000 yojanas. When the reins are released by Dhrúva the sun begins to move on most swiftly the outer orbits.—50-58

Here ends the one hundred and twenty-fifth chapter describing the motion of the sun and moon in Bhuvanakṣaṇa

CHAPTER CXXVI

Súta said—The chariot of the Sun is occupied by the several (1) Devas month after month, by turns, in regular succession, they carry Him on in His path together with a host of (2) R̄ṣis, (3) Gandharbhas, (4) Apsarás, (5) Nagas, serpents, (6) charioteers and (7) Rākṣasas. These R̄ṣis, etc., dwell there in the solar orb for a couple of months, turn by turn, and then make room for others—1-2

During the months of Chaitra and Vaishākhā, Brahmā and Arjumā, the two Devas, Pulastya and Pulaha, the two Prajāpatīs, Vāsuki and Sāṅkirna, the two Nagas, the chief singers—Tumvaru and Nātadā,—the two Gandharvas, Kritasthala and Punjakasthal, the two nymphs, the two charioteers, Rathakrip and Rathaujā, the two demons, Hēti and Praheṭi, resort to the solar region. During the two months Jyotisha and Asāḍha, in the summer, Mitra and Varuṇa, the two Devas, go to live there—3-6

Besides them, the following others also go there during the two months in the summer—Atri and Vasiṣṭha, the two R̄ṣis, Takṣaka, Rambhaka, the two Nagas, Menakā and Sāhadhanyā, the two Apsarás, Hāhā and Hūhū, the two singers, Rathanta and Rathakrit, the two charioteers, Puruṣāda and Vadhu, the two Demons. Then the other Devas come in. During the months of Śāvna and Bhadrāpada, the following live there — The Devas Indra, Vivasvān, the Rūṣis Angrā, Bhrigu, the Nāgas Elāpattra, Sankhapāla, the Gandharvas, Visvāvasu, Suṣena; the charioteers Prāta and Rathā, the nymphs Pramlochā, Nimlochā and the demons Heti and Vyāghra — 7-12

The Devas Pājanya and Pāśa, the sages Bharadvāja and Gautama reside there for two months in autumn The Gandharvas Chitrāsenā and Suruchi, the beautiful nymphs Visvavāchī and Ghṛtāchī, the serpents Airāvatā and Dhananjaya, the two charioteers Senajit and Suṣena, the demons Chātra and Vāta reside in the sun during the months of Āśvini and Kārtika For the two months of the dewy season, Agrahāyana and Pausa, the Devas Anāśa and Bṛaga, the Rūṣis Kasyapa and Kratu, reside there As well, the serpents Mahāpadma and Karkotaka, the Gandharvas Chitrāsenā and Pūrṇāyū, the nymphs Pūrvavachitti and Urvāśi, the charioteers Taksā and Aśṭanemi, and the terrible demons Vidyut and Sūrya During the two winter months of Māgha and Phālguna, the Devas Taṣaṭā and Viṣṇu, the Rūṣis Yamadagni and Viśvāmitra, the two sons of the serpent Kadru, mā, Kamvala and Aśvata, the Gandharvas Dhṛitarāstra and Sūryavarchā, the nymphs Titottamā, and Rambhā, the charioteers Ritajita and Satyajita, the demons Brahmopeta and Yajnopeta live there In this way the Devas, etc, inhabit the solar realm for the two months in their respective turn — 13-24

The groups of the seven couples (1) Devas, (2) Rūṣis, (3) Gandharvas, (4) Apsarās, (5) Nāgas, (6) charioteers and (7) Rākṣasas, that reside there for two months in their turn, are called the Sthānābhīmānis (the occupants of the place for the time) Of these, the twelve Devas (six couples for six seasons) lend their fiery lustre to the Sun The Rūṣis adore Him by reciting pleasant hymns of praise, the Gandharvas and the Apsarās show their devotion by their singing and dancing — 25-26

The charioteers hold the reins of the horses, the serpents move to and fro, and the demons follow Him in His track — 27

Besides these, the Vālakhilīya Rūṣis salute the Sun and accompany Him from His rise till He sets The Sun shines and sheds heat and lustre with increased brilliancy with the powerful blaze of the gigantic bonfire of the potency, asceticism, Yoga, Dharma, knowledge, power and valour of these Devas — 28-29

Nota.—The Vālakhilīyas are a class of divine personages of the size of a thumb and produced from the Creator’s body and said to precede the Sun’s chariot (their number is said to be sixty thousand)

The Sun drives away all the troubles of the beings by His radiance The sins of men are reduced to ashes by His fire He also takes away the sins of those whose conduct is good, and they roam about in the heavens along with Him. Those Devas out of mercy, protect all the beings in their every walk of life, and make them perform asceticism, mutter japams and fill their hearts with joy. During the several manvantaras, the seats of the Abhimanyu Devas are thus changed. This order is always the same; whether in the future, or in the past, or at present—30-33

Thus the seven sets of two dwell respectively in the fourteen manvantaras respectively. They all are fourteen in number and change their places thus in course of 14 manvantaras—34

The Sun in His diurnal course as He moves on, sheds His strong heating rays during the summer, causes cold during the winter and rains during the monsoon. He brings about night and day and spreads His rays far and wide as He travels. Thus by His rays, He brings in peace and satisfaction to all, the Devas, Pritis, and human beings alike. The days and nights, as they revolve, cause the bright and dark fortnights. The Sun stores up nectar every month in His rays. This nectar, pure and agreeable, the Devas drink in their appropriate fortnightly seasons. The Devas: the Pritis, the Saumyas and the Kāvyas, after having drunk this nectar in the shape of the Sun's rays, and replenished themselves, cause thereby good rain on this earth and make the plants, ordinary and medicinal, grow and satisfy the hunger of all beings—35-37

The Devas are satisfied with ambrosia by the sacrificial oblations once offered into the Fire every fortnight and poured after the recitation of the prescribed formulæ suffixed by svāhā. The Pritis are satisfied by the libations of water offered to them once every month (i.e., monthly oblations are offered and they get satisfied for one month). The men live day and night on these grains and herbes. The Sun is the sustainer of all beings and He nourishes them by His rays—38

Thus the Sun moves on in His one-wheeled chariot swiftly drawn by His horses and at the end of a day returns to His abode. He always has (tawny) greenish yellow horses yoked to His chariot. He drinks water through thousands of His rays and ceases to draw it when it passes the point of saturation. Then He discharges them again in the form of rain—39-40.

The Sun in course of one single day and night goes swiftly over the world consisting of the seven oceans and the seven islands, seated in His one-wheeled chariot and drawn by seven horses. The seven horses yoked to the Sun's chariot are no other than the seven chandhas (metres), they can assume forms at their will, they go as they like, their speed is swiftest wind, their colour is tawny, and being once yoked they go on they never get tired a bit. They are the gods declaring the glory of Brahma. Ascending on such a chariot the Sun travels the earth in course of one day (24 hours). The horses were yoked at the beginning of Kalpa and carry on the Sun till the end of the Great Dissolution (Maha Pralaya). Thus He goes on round and round, day and night, surrounded by the Vakalhillya Munis. The great Rishis recite praises to Him in the chosen words composed by them, the Gandarbas and Apsaras singing and dance round Him. Thus the Sun is carried on by the horses flying like birds. Similarly, the Moon moves on in the several asterisms that are divided into several vithis—41-46.

The Moon has also been described to wax and wane according to His positions with respect to the Sun. There are three wheels in the chariot of the Moon and the horses are yoked at both the ends—47.

The Moon has been born from waters along with His chariot, horses and the charioteer. That chariot is decorated with fine garlands and yoked with excellent white horses, rests on three wheels—48.

The swift running divine horses yoked to the Moon's chariot are ten in number, they run as swift as wind and they are without any attachment, once yoked, they carry the car till the end of the Great Dissolution—49.

The fair Chakshuartava is the charioteer, and the horses looking white like shells and of one colour, draw the chariot. —50.

Aja, Tripatha, Vriska, Vayu, Nara, Haya, Amsumana, Saptadhatu, Hamsa, and Vyomanriga are the names of the ten horses attached to the chariot of the Moon. Thus He goes on surrounded by the Devas and the Pitrus—51-52.

In the bright fortnight the Moon gets ahead of the Sun and whatever of Him waned during the dark fortnight becomes filled up again, digit by digit, by the Solar ray, day after day. Thus He becomes nourished by the one seed-ray of the Sun named Suṣumas when He becomes full and circular on the full-moon night. Similarly in the dark fortnight, the Moon wanes daily from the second day till the Chaturdasa tithi (the fourteenth day after the full-Moon) when the Devas drink up the soft and excellent nectar of the Moon, sweet like honey and consisting of the essence of the watery juice. For half the month the nectar becomes stored up in the Moon by the Sun's ray, so that the Devas would be able to drink it, and the quantity of this nectar becomes maximum on the full-moon night when the Devas adore the Moon for another supply of the same, gathered from the Sun's radiance in course of a fortnight—53-60.

Note.—Suṣumas = A principal ray of the Sun.
For one night the Devas, the Rishis and the Brihas worship the Moon. From the beginning of the dark fortnight the Moon turns back, wanes and becomes dull. His digits decline owing to His nectar being drunk up day by day. 33330 Devas drink the lunar ambrosia. The Moon thus declines during the dark fortnight and waxes until He becomes complete in the bright fortnight. Thus, drinking the nectar, the Devas, at the end of the fortnight, go away elsewhere on the Amavasya (dark) night when the Pitris come to Him. When the still small portion of the 15th part of the Moon is left, they drink that in the afternoon on the next day for a brief period of two kalas and go away after the completion of this dark fortnight. The Saumyas, Vahrisadas, Agnisvattas and Kavyas, are the Pitris. Those who preside over the year are known also as Kavyas. So also the Dvijas performing good works can become Kavyas. The Saumya-pitras are rigid ascetics. Vahrisada, Saumya and Agnisvatas are the well-known threefold Pitri creation who are recognised as twice-born (Brahmanas) —61-70

The 15th portion of the nectar of the moon is drunk by the Pitris. The sixteenth part of the Moon is recognised as the junction of the two (dark and bright) fortnights, when the final waning takes place and fresh waxing begins. Thus the waxing and waning of the Moon under the influence of the Sun have been described —71-72

Note —It is highly probable that the car festival of Sri Sri Jagannath in Puri, Orissa, might have its origin on the movements of the chariot of the Sun which are again the reflections of the Soul residing in the body.

Here ends the one hundred and twenty-sixth chapter on the courses of the Sun and the Moon.

CHAPTER CXXVII

Suta said —I shall now relate to you about the chariots of the stars and planets and Rahu (the ascending node). The chariot of Budha (Mercury, the son of Moon) is brilliant and white —1

It is drawn by ten horses as swift as wind. The horses are of the following colours, respectively, viz —White, reddish brown, spotted, dark blue, black, purple, white, greenish, dark, and of variegated colours. The horses are noble and excellent and born of wind —2-3

The huge chariot of Mars is made of gold. It is eight wheeled. It is drawn by eight red horses born of fire, with flags and banners. —4

Young Mars moves on in this car, his motions are direct, and retrograde and very retrograde. Vrihaspati (Jupiter), the son of Angira and the learned preceptor of the Devas, moves in a golden chariot with flags on it. The chariot is drawn by 8 fair coloured horses born of fire. Jupiter remains for one year in each of the twelve signs of the zodiac, thus He moves on in his chariot and goes to his destination. The chariot of Venus (Śukra) is brilliant like fire and decorated with flags. He goes on in this swift-going chariot. Next comes Saturn. His chariot is made of iron. Ascending on this chariot drawn by horses as swift as wind, Saturn moves on.

The dark coloured chariot of Ṛāhu is drawn by 8 swift horses of smoke-colour. The horses move as swift as wind, and they are well covered. He dwells close to the Sun, but He travels on in the dark fortnight towards the Moon, and returns to the Sun after that fortnight. The 8 horses of Ketu (the descending node) are slender and thin, of the colour of smoke, but they are hideous, very fiery and as swift as wind.

Thus I have described to you about the chariots and horses of the planets. These are all attached to the Pole by ropes of wind (air). These cords are invisible and made of air. These moving duly make the several chariots move.

All these stars are tied to Dhruva, and they move on propelled by the wind. The Moon and the Sun move on in the celestial firmament, prompted by currents of strong wind. They glide on tied to the Dhruva. Their motions round the pole are brought about by these ropes made of wind.

These stars and luminous spheres, studded in the firmament, are the abodes of the Devas (Devagṛhṇas). They float in the celestial atmosphere as boats float in rivers.

The rays of the Pole star extend to the farthest limit where the stars are visible and they all move on tied to the Pole and thus cause others to move on.

The stars and planets tied to the Dhruva (Pole) revolve and make others revolve as oil mill while revolving itself makes others revolve. The air that causes them to move and makes them look like a fiery circle (made by a fire-brand being waved round in the air) is known as Pravaha. In this way the stars move on, attached to the Pole. These stars are situated on the body of Śīsūmāra, who lies (sleeps as it were) on the celestial firmament.

NB—Śīsūmāra is known as the zodiac personified and is no other than the child Viṣṇu.
CHAPTER CXXVIII.

The sins committed in the day are swept away by the sight of this Śāumāra chakra in the night. The man who sees the stars fixed on the Śāumāra chakra lives for as many number of years more than his proper life period as the stars he sees, and one should know therefore the form and the location of the different limbs of this Śāumāra chakra fully—20-21

Thus is His form—Uttāna-pāda is the chin of Śāumāra, Sacrifice is the lower lip, Dharma is the forehead, Nārāyana and the Śādhyās are enshrined in the heart, the Aśvins form the two feet on the eastern side (the right foot), Varuna and Āryāmā form the two legs towards the west (the left foot)—22-23

The Devas, Saṃ-varṣa and Mitra, form respectively the fore and hind private parts, and Agni, Indra, Marichi, Kāśyapa, and Dhruva form His tail. There is no rising nor setting of these stars. They remain fixed at one place. The Moon, the Sun, and other stars and planets are situated in the form of a circle facing this Śāumāra chakra in the firmament. All the stars are presided over by Dhruva and circumulate Him. This Pole star is the support and sacrificial pillar of these stars. The Dhruva is the best amongst the Agnis, Śivas, and Kāśyapa. He moves singly above the summit of Sumeru with His head downwards round the summit of Sumeru, as if looking at it, dragging at the same time along with Him the zodiac and the cluster of stars—24-29

Here ends the one hundred and twenty-seventh chapter on the praises of the Pole star

CHAPTER CXXVIII

The Rsis said—We have heard what you have explained, O, Sūta! But what are those abodes of the Devas? Kindly explain more at length on the luminous spheres (the stars, etc.)—1

Sūta spoke—I shall now tell you about them, about the motions of the Sun and Moon, about the abodes of the Devas, the Sun and the Moon. In the beginning of the Kalpa, there was neither day nor night in this Universe, it was all covered over by darkness Brahmā, born from Aivyakta, the Unmanifested, did not, till then, manifest any elements. Four elements were left, and Brahmā presided over them. Then Bhāgavān Svayambhu desired to create the different Loka-s (worlds) and assumed Himself the form of a fire-fly and wandered about. He then thought within himself and came to know that Agni (fire) had hidden himself, in the beginning of Kalpa, in waters and in the earth —2-5

He collected water and earth in the hope of getting fire out of them, and He ultimately obtained three kinds of fires of equal amount, viz —the Pachakagni, employed in cooking things, was begotten from the earth, the Sucha Agni, or the heat dominant in the sun, and the Jatharagni or fire of the belly, in the shape of beautiful electricity and not produced by the combustion of any fuel, &c Some electrical fire is increased by fire residing in itself, whereas some others kindle even without any fuel The fire produced by rubbing two pieces of wood together, is called Nirmathya Agni and is quenched by water —6-8

The electrical fire in the belly is resplendent, with no flames, and beautiful, this is the light in the white disc of the sun, it is devoid of heat and not manifest When the sun sets, one-fourth of his lustre enters into fire Therefore fire looks so bright in the night —9-10

When the sun rises, one-fourth of the heat of fire enters into Him, therefore He imparts heat in the day The mutual infusion of the heat and lustre of the Fire and Sun into each other causes the days and nights to have their above mentioned properties —11-12

When the sun rises on the northern half and south of the world, the night merges into the waters, therefore water looks of a copper colour during the day —13

When the sun sets, the day merges in the waters, hence the waters look bright in the night, in this way owing to the rising and setting of the sun, the night and day merge in the waters respectively The fire in the Sun is like a red-coloured jar and it has thousand legs When the sun shines, He draws water by the rays of this fire It is this fire that draws in waters of the rivers, wells, oceans, tanks, lakes, etc through His thousand rays —14-18

These thousand rays cause heat, rains and cold, of these, four hundred rays look like nādis (tubular veins and arteries) and are of variegated forms, these cause rain Chandanā, Medhyā, Ketenā, Chetanā, Amritā and Jivanā are all rain-producing rays Three hundred rays produce cold, and they are drunk (absorbed) by the moon, stars and planets These are the middle rays —19-20

The other rays are all white and gladden the hearts of beings They cause heat They are three hundred in number and known by the names Kukubh, Go, Visvaśrut, Sukla and others They sustain and protect the Devas, Pitrās, and human beings —21-22
The sun always satisfies men by producing herbs, the Pitrus through the libations of water svadhā and the Devas through the sacrificial offerings svadhā —23

During spring and hot weather the sun imparts heat by his three hundred rays, during the rainy season and autumn causes rain by his four hundred rays, during the dewy and winter season imparts cold by his three hundred rays —24-25

He imparts strength in the herbs and plants, bestows nectar to svadhā, and imbues immortality in the nectars of the Devas. Thus He benefits the three worlds by His this three-fold action. His thousand rays thus perform different functions in the different seasons, causing good to half the Lokas —26

Such is the white shining solar orb known in the worlds. From Him emanate the stars, planets and the moon, and they are preserved by Him 27-28

It is by the Sūtumā ray of the Sun that the Moon waxes again, day by day. The stars are born from the eastern ray of the Sun, named Hari-kēśa —29

The Viśvakarmā ray of the sun is in the south, He is the sustainer of the planet Mercury. The Viśvavasu ray of the Sun is in the west, and He is the originator of the planet Venus —30

The Samvardhan ray is the originator of Mangala (Mars), the Advabhū ray, the sixth one, is the producer of Jupiter —31

The Surāta ray nourishes Saturn. Because these never fade, therefore they are called Nakṣatras (stars) —32

These are the fields, the regions of the sun, their rays fall incessantly unto Him, and the Sun accepts them also as His, hence they are named Nakṣatras. (The Sun pervades all these by His rays) —33

Those persons who perform good and meritorious works in this world, go to these planets and stars (the Nakṣatras) after they leave their mortal coils and these are saved, hence these Nakṣatras are called Tarakās. And as they are white in colour, they are named Suklikās —34

The Sun is called Aditya on account of His having the lustre of the fire and asceticism of the holy kings of this earth as well as those of Heaven. The root 'Srav' means "to pour out, to ooze" and the Sun is called "Savitā" because he sheds, pours out tejas, fire —35-36
The root 'chand' has various meanings, it connotes whiteness, nectar, cold and pleasure. The word Chandramā (the moon) has come out of this root — 37

The shining mandalas of the sun and the moon in the divine firmament are luminous, white, full of water and fire. They look handsome like white pitchers — 38

All those ṛṣis who attained Devalhood by their karmaas in the several Manvantaras have become the above luminous spheres. Their abodes in the firmament are termed "Devagrīhas". The Sun has got his abode as the Sun, so the Moon has got his "Saumya" abode, the planet Venus has got his Saukra abode. This Saukra abode is shining and has sixteen spokes (16 petalled lotus) Jupiter has attained his "Vrihat" (big) abode. Mars has got his red abode — 39-41

Saturn enters into the "Saturn" mandala, the Budha into the Budha and the Rāhu (ascending node) into the solar abodes. All the stars enter into their mandalas respectively, so these luminous spheres in the firmament are known as Devagrīhas of those persons who performed highly meritorious works in this world — 42-43

The Devagrīhas, mentioned before, exist in every Manvantara till the time of dissolution — 44

The Devas occupy these Devagrīhas again and again by their "Abhumāna" (presiding) capacities, the past Devas occupied their places along with others with their past presiding capacities, the present ones with their present presiding capacities, the future ones will reign with their future presiding capacities (But all of them preserve their respective characteristic features of their different abodes) Vivasvān the Sun, is the eighth son of Aditi — 44-46

The luminous Moon is known as Vasu, He is qualified with Bhuma, Śukra or Bhārgava, is the priest of the demons — 47

Vrihaspati, of great fiery asceticism, is the priest of the Devas and is the son of Angirā, the handsome Budha is the son of the Moon — 48

The ugly Saturn was born of the womb of Sangyā by the Sun Mangala was born of the womb of Vikesi by Fire — 49

All these stars are born from the womb (of the firmament and are the progeny of Daksha. Rāhu, the destroyer of beings, is the demon born of Simbikā — 50

These are the Abhumāni Devas (the Masters, the presiding Deities) in the spheres of the moon, the sun, the stars and the planets. Thus the above abodes of the Devas are described — 51

The abode of the thousand-rayed Sun is divine, fiery and of white colour. The abode of the Moon is thousand-rayed, bright, energetic, and full of waters — 52

Budha (Mercury) lives with the Sun. The abode of Śukra (Venus) is sixteen-rayed and watery — 53

The abode of Mangala (Mars) consists of nine rays and is red in appearance, water is also there. Vrīhaspati (Jupiter) has 12 rays and the colour is turmeric yellow. His abode is big — 54

The abode of Saturn is eight-rayed, black, and is made of iron. Rādhau's abode is also made of iron and He causes pain to all beings — 55

All the asterisms are the refuge of the virtuous. Their rays are silvery and as they are the redeemers of all the beings, they are called Tārakās, also called Vrikšķikās on account of their white colour — 56

The diameter of the Sun is nine thousand yojanas and its circumference is three times that (27000 yojanas) — 57

N.B. — According to Surya Siddhānta the diameter of the Sun is 6500 yojanas and the diameter of the Moon is 480 yojanas — 58

The diameter of the Moon is twice the diameter of the Sun, its circumference is thrice its diameter — 58

The stars are situated above all and their diameter is one-half yojana — 59

The size of Rāhu is the same with the stars, He travels below them. His place is made up of the shadow of the earth by Brahmā, it is full of Tamas (darkness). Rāhu enters into the Sun in the bright fortnight, in the dark fortnight it emerges from the Sun and enters into the Moon. It is named Svar-bhānu, because He urges forward by His own rays — 60-62.

The diameter and the circumference of Venus are one-sixteenth (1/16) of those of the Moon in yojanas (63)

Śukra is the 16th part of the Moon. The diameters and circumferences are measured all in Yojanas — 63

The diameter and the circumference of Jupiter are one-fourth less than those of Venus. Mars and Ketu are one-fourth less than those of Jupiter. Rāhu and Mercury's dimensions are one-fourth less than those of Mars and Ketu (the descending node) — 64-65

The diameter and circumference of each of the stars are the same as those of Mercury. Some stars also have dimensions of five hundred, four hundred, three hundred, two hundred, one hundred yojanas, there are some also having dimensions of one-half yojanas. No stars exist less than these. Now I will describe those meleic and benefic planets that are situated above them—66-68

Satur, Jupiter, and Mars are slow-going planets (superior planets.) Below them the Moon, Sun, Mercury, and Venus are the quick-moving planets (inferior planets.) There are as many crores of Tārakās as there Rikṣas (asterisms)—69-70

The Sun moves lowest down of all the planets. Above Him the Moon travels—71.

The Saptarṣis (the great Bear) exist above Saturn, and above the great Bear exists the Pole (Dhruva.) The three worlds are tied on to this Dhruva—74

The stars in the firmament are two lakh (200,000) yojanas apart from each other. The planets above them are also placed similarly apart. The Sun, Moon, and the planets run towards the stars and get merged in them. They remain in their Uchcha and Nicha houses (aphelion and perihelion), and while entering into or coming out of them, they look on the beings. So these are situated with regard to each other—75-78

The learned should know exactly their various conjunctions. Thus have been described all about this earth, Dvīpas, oceans, mountains, years, rivers, and the inhabitants thereof—79-80

The several locations of the luminous spheres of the firmament are brought on by the influence of the Sun. In its central part, there exists the wind termed Āvarta. This pervades, in the form of a circle all the Nakshatra maṇḍalas. This has been so ordained by the Almighty God for the use of His several beings—81-82

The stars, the earth, etc., were located thus by Brahmā in their proper places at the beginning of the Kalpa—83

All these locations are assigned by the Supreme Being, no one can exactly describe the vastness of the infinite nature of this Universe. No human being with his fleshy eyes can know exactly its true nature—84

Here ends the one-hundred and twenty eighth chapter on the description of the Devagrihas (the bright spheres of the firmament.)
APPENDIX I

THE CHARACTER AND THE ORIGIN OF THE PURÂNAS *

The word 'Purâna' means 'old' in all the Sanskrit languages of India. In its use as a noun this word means the branch of religious literature which records, or rather once recorded, the deeds of gods and men of very olden days. The name 'Purâna' as a special branch of the sacred literature, occurs in the Atharva-veda. The very Riks in which we meet with the word 'Purâna,' should be discussed to get a clear conception of the character of the Purâpa-literature of the Vedic times. In translation, the 24th Rik of the 7th Sukta of the XI Kânda of the Atharva-veda stands as follows: "From the residuum (ucchhhiṣṭa) of the Rik, the Sâmas, the Yajus and the Purâna (the ancient), the gods and the pîtris were born." I have followed here the remarks of Prof. Deussen in adopting the translation of it by Prof. Laman. Prof. Deussen rightly remarks that 'ucchhhiṣṭa' does not mean 'remnant of the offering,' but it means such a residuum or remainder that one may think that one can get after subtracting from the universe all the forms of the world of phenomena. The learned editor of the Harvard Oriental Series is not correct, when he translates the word Purâna by the phrase 'the ancient.' The use of this word here being in conjunction with the three Vedas, it must mean a specific branch of the sacred literature. The 4th Rik of the 8th Pâryâya of the XV Kânda of the Atharva-veda may be referred to to clear up the misconception. The Rik says:

"He (the Prajâpati) moved out, etc., After him moved out both the Itihâsa (the narrative)  and the Purâpa (the story of old) and the Gathas (songs) and the Narasâsas (eulogies) Vertly both of the Itihâsas and of the Purânas and of the Gathas and of the Narasâsas doth he become the dear abode who knoweth thus."

I give here also the translation of Prof. Laman. The learned professor has translated the word 'Purâpa' by 'story of the old' though in the previous Rik referred to he has translated it by the vague phrase 'the ancient.' That this 'story of old' had a sacred character in the eyes of the Bard of the Sukta, has not been noticed by the great American scholar. But we shall presently see that the Purâna, as a branch of the Vedic literature, is as old and as sacred as the Vedic mantras themselves, are, in their Samhitâ form.

* We reproduce this article on the Purânas which was written as an introduction to the proposed translation of the Vâyu Purâpa by Mr. B. C. Mazumdar of Sambalpur.—Editor
If we refer those post-Vedic treatises such as the Brâhmanas, which were composed with the distinct object of explaining the spiritual significance and utility of the Vedic ritual, we get many practical directions as to how the sacrificial rites should be performed in order to secure the highest spiritual benefit. Generally speaking, the Sâma-Veda, the Rigveda and the Atharvaveda Samhitas contained only the mantras which have to be recited at the Yajñas. The Yajur-veda Sambhâtâ takes partly the character of Brihmana, in that, the directions regarding the sacrificial ceremonial have been given in it in some detail. But the post-Vedic literature devoted mainly to furnish explanations and to point out the religious importance of the Vedic mantras gives us clearer ideas as to how and for what object the Yajñas should be performed. It has been elaborately given in the Brihaddevatâ as well as in other works of similar nature, that in order to perform a Yajña, the sacrificer must know (1) which devatâ is to be invoked on what occasion, (2) what mantra has to be uttered to suit the occasion, (3) the name of the Rishii who saw or discovered the mantra, (4) the circumstances under which the mantras having been uttered, a special object was secured and (5) the ritualistic method or form in which the mantras have to be uttered (See Brihaddevata Prof. Macdonell’s edition). The collection of the mantras in the Samhitâ forms of no use even to the learned priests, if they do not know (1) the proper god (2) the proper mantra and (3) the proper ritual suitting each particular occasion. I am inclined to suppose that the Brâhmana priests were called ‘Trayi,’ or ‘Tebijja’ (Pali form,) because they had to learn the three things mentioned above, to be able to perform the priestly functions. There were details under each head of the above knowledge, and there were many practical directions or Vidyâ regarding the forms of sacrificial ceremonial.

Leaving many details out, I can state on the authority of such works as the Brâhmanas and the Brihaddevatâ that on every ceremonial occasion it had to be narrated by a special priest, that the particular mantra, which was being chanted by another priest to invoke a god, once proved efficacious, when in olden times a certain Rishii uttered the self-same mantra. It was absolutely necessary for a priest to know the history of the origin of mantra, and the success which the mantra once attained in obviating worldly damages and difficulties. As to the fitting occasions of the man-there are detailed directions in the Brahmanas. The readers may refer to the excellent edition of the Aitareva-veda Samhita by Professor Lanman wherein the special purpose for which a Sukta is to be chanted, has been prefixed to each and every Sukta. As to the practical utility or phalaiyuti, a particular successful case of olden times had to be cited and sung. The Brhaddevata abounds with these examples. I cite here only one example. How Durghatama was born blind, has been stated in a story form in the 4th Chapter (verses 11—15). It has then been stated (verse 16) that some hymns or mantras (viz., Rigveda I, 140—56) were revealed to Durghatama, and he got back the use of his eyes. Thus it is very clear that at the time of the performance of the yajnas, recitation of the history of the mantras was an inseparable part of the ceremony.
The stories that had to be cited in connection with the Rig-veda mantras, have all been related in the Brhaddevata. This story-literature, absolutely necessary for the performance of the yajnas, was designated as Purana or Puranabhasa.

We get it even in the introductory chapter of the Mahabhrata that the custom of reciting Purana to the priests, who were initiated and ready to perform a holy sacrifice, was not forgotten, for, the Pauranika Ugrasravah asks the Rishi in the following words to ascertain whether they were in a fit state to listen to the narration—

"Kritabhisekah duishayah kriitajapyah hutagnayah
Bhavantah asane svastih brahme kimaham dvijah? (15)

As to the fact that the Vedas have to be explained by the Itihasa and the Purana, a line occurs in the very introductory chapter of the Mahabhrata, namely, "Itihasapuranabhyyam Vedam samupabrimhayaet" (287)

We can thus see that the Purana literature is as old as the collection of the mantras themselves. The orthodox tradition is, that Vyasa divided the Veda in the early years of the Kali yuga, and became the progenitor of the Purana literature. We need not concern ourselves here with the question as to when and under what circumstances the different Vedic Samhitas were compiled. But there can be no doubt that once it became necessary to divide the Veda, or more properly to classify the Vedic mantras and rites from the ritualistic standpoint of view. When this division or classification had to be made, Puranabhasa could not but form

* The custom of the present day, that at the time of the Braddha or other ceremonies a Pauranika has to sit apart and recite some Pauranika text, is after the oldest tradition of the Vedic ritual. Now the Puranas are not read to explain or glorify the mantras, but merely because it is a long standing custom to do so.
a separate branch under the Vedas. The account we get by tradition is therefore not wrong that the Purāṇa as a literature arose out of the work of classification or division of the Vedas, no matter whether the author of that work of classification or division be called Vyāsa or not. Since the word ‘vyāsa’ means in Sanskrit (to divide into parts or to arrange), the sage of the olden times who was principally instrumental in bringing about the aforesaid distribution and arrangement, can be safely said to be the progenitor of the Purāṇa as a special branch of the sacred literature.

That the Purāṇa as a sacred literature was both taught and learnt by the Brāhmanas along with the Vedic mantras and the other correlated sciences, is distinctly mentioned in the Satapatha Brāhmāna (XI V 7 1, XIV V 4 10). There is similar mention also in the Tattviriya Aranyaka (II 9-10). The Upanisads have referred to Itihāsa Purāṇam as a subject studied by the orthodox Vedic scholars. The old Chāndogya Upanisad of the Sāma-veda school states that the Itihāsa-Purāṇam is the fifth Veda in the division of the Vedas “Rig-veda Yajurveda Sāma-veda Atharvanschatuṛtha Itihāsa Purāṇah panchamo vedāntam vedah,” Ch VII 1 4.

From the remarks made before regarding the Purāṇa-literature, it is clear beyond any doubt that the Purāṇa-literature was bound to be recognised as the Fifth Veda, when the Atharvavāna collection was recognised as the fourth division of the Veda. When the Mahābhārata was compiled as a Sambhitā with the nucleus of the Bhārati-kathā, all the stories that existed at the time of the compilation in the name of Purāṇa-tīrtha were included in, or intertwined with, the Kuru Pāṇḍava story. It is for that reason that Mahābhārata Sambhitā claimed for itself the title ‘the Panchama Veda’, and that the people considered that title to be quite legitimate.

We have noticed that the Purāṇa has been in association with the Itihāsa from a remote past. There are many instances in the Mahābhārata, where the Purāṇa has been spoken of as a depository of Vedic Śruti (Nāṣāruitamānyuktam). We meet also with such passages in the Mahābhārata where in narrating some legends or ‘Vamśānuvaradam’ it has been stated by way of an introductory remark, that “Mayā Śrutam idam pūrvam Purāne purusārṇabha,” or “Atrāpyudāharantumam Itihāsam purātanam,” or “Sruyatehi Purāne’pi Jatila-nāma Gautami,” etc. These instances show that the Purāṇa handed down the ‘Vamśānuvaratam’ and other historical accounts from generation to generation and its character as the history not only of the gods, but also of men, was established even in the days of the later Atharvavāna Sūktas. Being the history of the gods and the Ristas, the Purāṇa-literature had to deal with the original or primary creation, the secondary creation or the creation of the world men were living in and the Manvantara revolutions. Again, as associated with Itiḥāsa, it had to narrate the stories of the ideal epoch-making rulers and to maintain the records of many Raj families of note. In this combined character, the Purāṇa of the olden times did not much differ from the modern Purāṇas, since, for the definition of the Purāṇa we get it in almost all the Purāṇas that the subjects referred to above must be delineated in a Purāṇa. I quote the definition here of the Vāyu Purāṇa which has a special significance in this introduction.

Kirtanam
Svargaścha pītisvargaścār vamso manvantarāṇīcāhā Vamsanucharitam cheti Purāṇam paucha laksanam

—(Ch IV 10-11).

Though I could not cite any proof from the oldest Vedic literature in support of the statement that Purāṇa, as associated with Itiḥāsa, had the character of a history, as we now understand it, I think the evidence of the Mahābhārata goes to some extent to establish my view. That the history of the mighty kings from the remotest antiquity was maintained in the very work in which the history of the creation was preserved, is pretty clear from the accounts of Megasthenes. We get it recorded in the fragments of the accounts of Megasthenes that when he came to India, the Indians narrated to him their previous history as well as the history of the creation of the world. Arrian records in his Indica that Megasthenes reported that the Hindus reckoned 6,042 years from the earliest day to the time of Chandra Gupta. It must also be noticed that Arrian has remarked in his Indica that it was a matter of wonder with him how Megasthenes could give an accurate account of 118 tribes and 58 rivers of India without visiting most parts of that country. This points to the fact, as has been noticed by Mr A M T Jackson in his instructive essay—The Epic and the Puranic Notes [J R A S (Bom) Extra 1905 and p 87], that Megasthenes must have got before him a regular catalogue of rivers and tribes. Non-mention of the character of the Purāṇa and Itiḥāsa in the oldest literature, does not prove that the Purāṇa did not assume the character of a history. It is curious to note that though Purāṇa is found mentioned in the Atharva-veda and in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, this word does not occur in any Sūtra of Panini. It may however be mentioned that the Vārttika and the Mahābhāṣya mention it in association with the Itiḥāsa. The readers can easily see how unsafe it is to establish any proposition on the evidence of Panini's mentioning or not mentioning any word in his work.
garbham kukaustha sa vipadyate Jatovē na clirim jivet, jivedva, durvalendriya

Tasmāt atyanta bālayām garbhadhānam na kārayet (X 13)

The mention of the 18 Purāṇas in the last two chapters of the very last Parva is quite singular, for, the Mahābhārata Samhitā does not disclose this knowledge elsewhere, even where there has been special enumeration of different branches of knowledge and of different Śāstrīk treatises. The last or the sixth chapter may be easily disregarded, as the Mahābhārata is said to have ended with the fifth chapter. The fifth chapter also seems to be a late addition, for, in the first place the “svargārohana” concluded with the fourth chapter, and in the second place the fifth chapter has been improved by quotations from other previous chapters of the book. For example, the slokas 68 and 69 are the same as 395 and 396 of Chapter II of the Adi Parva. From the very fact that many Purāṇas, including the Vāyu, name the Mahābhārata Samhitā, it is proved conclusively that neither the group of the 18 modern Purāṇas nor the Vāyu Purāṇa could exist at the time of the compilation of the Mahābhārata.

I have shown that (1) the Purāṇa as a branch of sacred literature did exist in the Vedic days bearing exactly that character which is attributed to it in the extant Purāṇas, and (2) that till the time of the compilation of the Mahābhārata as the Fifth Veda Samhitā, the extant Purāṇas were not in existence at least in their present shape and form. Again on reference to the mythology of the Hindus as it was by about 140 B.C., it can be stated that the modern Purāṇas with their pantheon of new gods could not come into existence in the second century B.C. Gods like Durgā, Ganesa and the Paurāṇika Siva were not known to Mahābhāṣya of 140 B.C., or to modern Manusamhitā which has not got a greater antiquity. Of my essays on Siva-puṣṭa, Ganesa and Durgā, I may refer the readers only to the last essay (J R A S, 1906, p 365) and my paper on ‘Phallus worship in the Mahābhārata’ (J R A S, 1907, p 337). The other essays having been published in Bengali magazines, I could not refer the readers to them.

Besides setting up the above highest limit, no definite chronology can be fixed in respect of the extant 18 Mahā-Purāṇas. On comparing with the Paurāṇika stories of the Vedic days, it may be asserted without any fear of contradiction that many stories in the modern Purāṇas, though based on Vedic basis, have not only been changed, but have been given quite new and inconsistent forms. New stories unknown to the Vedic literature are often met with. The scope and the character of the Purānas or the Purāṇas made it inevitable that new lists of kings should be introduced with the progress of time. As the Purāṇas had to be recited to the people throughout all ages to communicate to them the glory of the gods and the noble deeds of the ideal sages and kings, the language of the Purāṇa of one age could not but change at a subsequent time. With the expansion of Aryan influence in India, the new geographical names of countries, rivers and mountains were required to be introduced. When we notice such changes wrought at a particular time, we cannot say that such and such a book bearing evidence of such a time was really composed at such a late date.

Since the modern Purāṇas radically differ from the Vedic Purāṇas, both in mythology and in the narration of the stories, they may be said to be altogether new in their origin and compiled long after the second century B.C. But the modern Purāṇas having once been compiled, do not seem to have much changed in essential matters, in subsequent times. The additions or accretions of subsequent ages are to be regarded merely as additions and accretions. The old lists of kings handed down from the Vedic times must have been preserved in the new Purāṇas. When giving a genealogy of the Ikṣaku Rājas, the Matsya Purāṇa states —

Ātrānu vamśa slokoyam viprairgitaḥ purātanaḥ
Ikṣākunāmayam vamśāḥ Sumitrānto bhavisyati

Similar statements occur in all the Purāṇas, wherein old genealogies have been given. That the Paurāṇika lists of kings of very olden times are not fanciful, and that old chronology can be roughly established with their help have been very ably shown by Mr F.E. Pargiter (Retired Puisne Judge of the Calcutta High Court) in his masterly paper on the "Ancient Indian Genealogies and Chronology" (J.R.A.S., 1910, pp. 1—56). I cannot resist the temptation of quoting the remark of Mr. Pargiter that "these old genealogies, with their incidental stories, are not to be looked upon as legends or fables, devoid of basis or substance, but contain genuine historical tradition, and may well be considered and dealt with from a common-sense point of view."

Those who are in favour of the opinion that the principal modern Purāṇas were compiled during the time of the Imperial Guptas because of the fact that the Royal genealogies do not go far beyond the limit of their time, ignore the fact that when after the Huna invasion the Gupta Empire was practically dissolved towards the end of the fifth century A.D., the bards or chroniclers could not get any particular Royal House which could be designated as Imperial. The downfall of Hindu India commences from this date. Petty kingdoms commenced to grow all over India like mushrooms. In olden days when the Indian Empire was not established under one overlord, the kingdoms and principalities of Northern India had such interrelation amongst themselves that dynastical genealogies and ballads of Royal exploits could be inserted in the time-honoured Purāneśhāsa.

But when after the fall of the Imperial Guptas, a considerably large number of small kingdoms were established, no unity could be preserved, and no interrelation could exist. I cannot deal with this political question elaborately here beyond mentioning what actually took place. Every Raja had his own bard, and he never failed to keep a fairly accurate Royal genealogical list of his master’s house, as is known to all scholars who deal with the epigraphic literature.

In this dark period of Hindu India, the Purānas, nay even the Mahābhārata Samhitā, received interpolations to record the glory of the new tribal gods and the new local yatraṇas. At different centres of importance several Purāṇas received additional books of considerable bulk. Thus it was that the Brahma Purāṇa swelled in bulk in Orissa, the Agni Purāṇa obtained some new chapters at Gaya and the Padma Purāṇa besides singing the glory of Puskarna followed the poet Kālidāsa of his own country in narrating the stories of Sākuntalā and of Raghu's progeny.

Beyond noticing these local additions or changes necessitated by the change of time, we cannot say, unless proved otherwise, that the Purāṇas have not retained their general form and character since their compilation. This time must be, as I have already stated, long after the second or even first century B.C.

I have stated it above that the Purāṇas originated when the Vedas were classified or divided to secure ritualistic convenience. This does not imply that Vyāsa was the author of the Purāneśhāsa-literature. The Mahābhārata also does not assert it. It has been only stated in the Mahābhārata that Vyāsa taught the Purāṇa to some disciples of his, and in the hands of those disciples the Purāṇas were developed. But if we separate the Bhārali-kathā from the Purāṇas, we find that the Mahābhārata favours this opinion that the Purāṇas owed their origin to Romaharsana (XII, 319 21), while the Bhārali-kathā was promulgated by the other disciples of Vyāsa (I 1 et seq.). The name ‘Romaharsana’ is extremely interesting. A very good derivation of this name has been given in the Vaiṣṇu Purāṇa itself (I 16) —

Lomani harsayam chakresvaratnam yat subhasitaḥ
Karmana prabhāṣiteṣāṁ loke suṁ Lobhāḥarṣanaḥ
THE CHARACTER AND ORIGIN OF THE PURĀNAS

This shows clearly that it was not a particular person to whom the authorship of the Purānas is to be attributed. Lomasaharsana is a class name to represent those persons, who, by reciting some wonderful and exciting stories to the people, made the hair to stand on the bodies of the audience. That the 18 Purānas were composed at different times by different sages, has been clearly stated in many Purānas. The order in which the Purānas were compiled is also given generally in the Purānas. This order is as follows: (1) Brahma, (2) Padma, (3) Viṣṇu, (4) Vāyu or Śiva, (5) Bhāgavata, (6) Nārada, (7) Mārkandeya, (8) Agni, (9) Bhavīṣya, (10) Brähma, (11) Liṅga, (12) Varāha, (13) Skanda, (14) Vāmana, (15) Kūrma, (16) Matsya, (17) Garuḍa, (18) Brahmāṇḍa. That this list was inserted after the compilation of the Purānas is apparent on the face of it, for, all the Purāṇas could not manage to copy one another. The narrators of the Purānas have been designated generally by the class-name ‘Sūta.’ The Sūtas and Māgaḍhas are held to be of low origin in the modern Smritis. In the Vāyu Purāna also (I 32 & seq.) a Sūta is said to have no right or ‘adhāśāra’ to study the Vedas. Some passages of the Mahābhārata Samhita also support this view. It is however to be noted that the solemn introduction of ‘Sauti’ in the ‘Nārada’ as described in the introduction of the Mahābhārata, shows that the narrator of the Purāṇaṇātha, was not a member of any degraded caste, but was one who could be honoured by the Brāhmaṇas. Many Purānas also show that venerable ‘Munas’ like Mārkandeya and Nārada were the narrators of the Purānas. That in the Vedic times very respectable Brāhmaṇas recited the Purāṇas, cannot be doubted. It may be owing to the fact that the Paurānikas commenced to earn money by singing the ballads to the common people that they lowered themselves in the estimation of others. Another reason for this degradation may be supposed. It may be that when the kings of Māgaḍha became supreme in India, men other than Brāhmaṇas were employed as chroniclers and ballad-singers, and as such the Paurānikas were regarded to belong to a non-priestly class, though in reality they discharged some functions of the priests on ceremonial occasions.¹

It is not difficult to understand how once long after the Vedic times and previous to the time of the compilation of the Mahābhārata and the modern Purāṇas, the Purāṇa literature became non-Brahmanical in the strict sense of the word When the true Vedic priests extolled the Rajas, they chose only the ideal kings from the priestly point of view. For this reason many Rajas of real note were not included in the old Brahmanical lists of the kings, and many otherwise insignificant rulers were lauded in the Brāhmaṇas. Many instances of it will be pointed out in my notes on the genealogical sections of the Vāyu Purāṇa. This is what led the powerful kings to employ their own bards to sing their glorious exploits, and to record their family history. This Kṣatriya-Purāṇetihāsa was bound to be incorporated in the modern Brahmanic Purāṇas when the Brāhmaṇas had to depend upon the favour of the Royal houses. In his paper referred to above, Mr. Pargiter has made the following remark touching this point—

"This Kṣatriya literature grew up in virtual independence of Brahmanical literature, and only when it had developed into an imposing mass and had attained great popular appreciation was it taken over by the Brahmanas as a not unworthy branch of knowledge. It was then that it was arranged and augmented with stories and discourses fashioned after Brahmanical ideas."

B C MAZUMDAR.
APPENDIX II

THE DATE OF THE MAHABHARATA WAR.

(Various Views)

I  The most important question, in Indian Paurânic Chronology is, as to the period of the Great Bhârata War, for, if that period is fixed, the chronology of other kings who reigned before and after that war, can be easily determined from the materials to be found in this Purâna and to which alone, we shall confine our attention at present. The reign of Chandra Gupta Maurya has been the great landmark in Indian History. He has been identified with the Sandracottus of the Greeks. "His accession to the throne of Magadha may be dated with practical certainty in 322 B.C.," says Mr. V. Smith. "The fixed point from which to reckon backwards is the year 322 B.C. the date for the accession of Chandra Gupta Maurya, which is certainly correct, with the possible error not exceeding three years." (Early History of Indian 3rd Ed., 44)

There are two fixed points from which chronological calculations in ancient Indian History may be made. Both of these methods have been employed in the Purânas.

I  Nanda's Installation

The first starting point taken in all the Purânas is the date of the installation of Mahâpadma Nanda. This date is fixed at 422 B.C. And the interval from that point backwards to the birth of Parikṣit, who was born in the year of the Great War, and forward up to the modern times is calculated. This may be called the Nanda Era.

II  The Cycle of 2700 years or Saptárśi Era

The second method of calculation, or rather of checking the first method by the second, is the cycle of 2700 years in which period the Great Bear is supposed to make one complete circle. One complete cycle of 2700 years elapsed between the time of King Pratipa in the Paurava line, (No. 88 App., Table of Mr. Pargiter) and the end of the Andhra dynasty. This may be called the cyclic era or Saptárśi era. From Mahâpadma Nanda to the last Andhra King Pulomâvi, the interval which elapsed was 836 years according to the Purânas. From Mahâpadma Nanda to the birth of Parikṣit in the year of the Great War was 1015 years (or rather 1050 according to the printed text of the Matsya) 836 together with 1050 when taken from 2700 give us 836 Pratipa, the Paursava King, reigned therefore 814 years before the Mahâbhârata War. If we take 1015 as the years elapsed between Nanda and Pariksit, then Pratipa reigned 849 years before the birth of Pariksit.

This period is calculated thus — "The Great Bear was situated equally with regard to the lunar constellation Pushya while Pratipa was king. At the end of the Andhras, who will be in the 27th century afterwards, the cycle repeats itself. In the circle of the lunar constellations, where in the Great Bear revolves and which contains 27 constellations in its circumference, the Great Bear remains 100 years in (i.e., conjoined with) each in turn. This is the cycle of the Great Bear, and is remembered as being, according to divine reckoning, 6 divine months and 7 divine years. According to these constellations, divine time proceeds by means of the Great Bear. The two front stars of the Great Bear, which are seen when risen at night, the lunar constellation which is seen situated equally between them in the sky, the Great Bear is to be known as conjoined with that constellation 100 years in the sky. This is the exposition of the conjunction of the lunar constellations and the Great Bear. The Great Bear was conjoined with the Magha's in Pariksit's time 100 years. It will be in (i.e., conjoined with) the 27th constellations 100 years at the termination of the Andhras." (Pargiter)

An Extract from "Kings of Magadha" by Col Wilford in the Asiatic Researches

Vol. 9, (1805 A.D.)

The Hindus have thought proper to connect their chronology with an astronomical period of a most strange nature. It is that of the seven Rsis, or seven stars of the main, which are supposed to go through the Zodiac, in a retrograde (?) motion in the space of 2700 years. They are at present in the Lunar mansion of Swâtiika, according to the most famous astrologers of Benares, who cautioned me against the erroneous opinion of other astronomers, in various parts of India, who insist that they are now in Anurâdha.

I requested an able astronomer to give me, in writing an account of this wonderful revolution. This period, says he, is not obvious to the sight, but it does however, really exist, being mentioned in old Sâstras, and by holy Munis, and certainly the seven Rsis preside in every Lunar mansion, for a hundred years, and their presence, or rather influence, over it is sufficiently obvious and according to Bârâkya Muni, their yearly motion is of eight liptas, or minutes.

In the Varâhî Sambhâta, the Vismu-Purâna, and also in the Bhâgavata, I believe it is declared, that, at the birth of Pariksit, the seven Rsis had been in Maghâ for four years, or 4005 years ago, and they were in Purvâsara in the time of Nanda.

But in the Brahma-Siddhânta, it is declared, that they were then in Brâvanâ, which makes a difference of fifteen Lunar mansions, or 1500 years so that, according to that author, the Kailûga began 2405 years ago, or 1800 years B.C., supposing the seven Rsis to be now in Swâtiika, in which they are to remain ten years more, but, if they are in Anurâdha, the Kailûga began 1400 years B.C. The author of the Gârgi-Sambhâta, according to Bhaskarpala in his commentary, seems to be of that opinion, when he says, that the seven Rsis were in Maghâ, in the twilight between the Dwispara and the Kailûga. In the Lalloktadhi-vriddhi, it is declared, that they were then in Abhijit, or in the first of Brâvanâ.

The names of the seven Rsis, shining in the main, are Polaha, Kratu, Atri, Pulastya, Angiras, Vasishtha, and, close to it is a small star, representing Arundhati his wife, the seventh is Marichi. My friends insist that their motion is perceptible, and they showed them plainly to me in Swatika. Of this they wanted to convince me, by drawing a line, from that mansion through the stars B and A of the Great Bear. When they are in Magha then the line passes through this asterism and the stars D and A. By these means they could see them in every part of the starry heavens. When Nanda was born, they were then in Purvamada, or about 400 years BC, and he died 827 before the Christian era. Astrologers watch carefully their motion, because their influence is variously modified through every mansion, and whatever new married couple see them in a fortunate moment, they are sure to live happy together for a hundred years. Hence, says the ingenious Mr Bailly, we may safely conclude, that nobody ever saw them in that propitious moment.

The period of the seven RISHIS begins to be neglected in the more northern parts of India, because they are not always to be seen at the lucky moment, and, in their stead, use Dhruba or the polar star. This star is often mentioned in the sacred books of the Hindus; and it is connected with their mythology, but has not been seen near enough to the pole, to be thus denominated after it, and for a long series of years, before, there was no Dhruba or immovable star. Be this as it may, Dhruba with his relations, shines in the Lesser Bear. In the Yantra-ratna-valyam, this constellation is called the fish of Dhruba-Brahmanad'hikara. It consists of thirteen stars. Dhruba is in the mouth, and Uttanapada his father is in the tail. The mouth is turned towards Bharani, and its revolution is the same.

The method of calculation, adopted by the Purânas, however, is to take Nanda as the starting point. The last of the Śrûnâga was Mahânandin, who had a son by a Śudra woman. He was known as Mahâpadma or the famous Nanda, whose eight sons succeeded him. This Nanda family was brought to an end by the Indian Machiavel, Kautiylas or Chânakya. Chandra Gupta was placed on the throne of the Nandas by this king-maker Chânakya. About this event Mr V. Smith says —

"Mahânandin, the last of the dynasty, is said to have had, by a Śudra or low caste woman, a son, named Mahâpadma Nanda, who usurped the throne, and so established the Nanda family or dynasty. This event may be dated in or about 372 BC."

"The Greek or Roman historians ranking as contemporary witnesses throw a light on real history. When Alexander was stopped in his advance at the Hyphasis, in 326 BC, he was informed that the king of the Prachihai &c was Xandrames or Agramis."

The reference to this king is evidently to one of the Nandas.

The date of the accession of Nanda is calculated from that of Chandra Gupta Maurya, who ascended the throne in 322 BC. The Nanda dynasty, according to Mr Vincent Smith, lasted for 50 years, when it was replaced by the Maurya. So adding 50 to 322, the above figure 372 BC, is arrived at by Mr V Smith as the date of the accession of Mahâpadma Nanda. But all the Purânas are unanimous in stating that the nine Nandas reigned for 100 years, and we have taken that in our calculations.
The date of accession of Mahāpadma Nanda would, therefore, be 422 BC, instead of 372 BC.

This 422 BC is the starting point backwards and forwards in Purānic calculations.

Chandra Gupta Maurya displaced the Nanda family. The nine Nandas reigned for 100 years. Before that, there was the Siṣunāga dynasty, and before which was the Pradyota dynasty and before that the Bṛhadṛathas. The following table shows the periods of the reigns of these dynasties:

<table>

Deduct from Chaidya to Sahadeva = 171

Balance = 1441, and adding 823 = 1764 BC, the year of the Great War.

The Mahābhārata war took place when Sahadeva of Bṛhadṛatha family was king. From Vasu Chaidya Uparichara up to Sahadeva there were 13 kings namely, (1) Vasu Chaidyauparichara, (2) Bṛhadṛatha, (3) Kusāgra, (4) Vrīśabha, (5) Punyavīn or, Puspavīn, (6) Punya or Puṣya, (7) Satyadhriti, (8) Dhanusa, (9) Saiva, (10) Sambhava, (11) Bṛhadṛatha, (12) Jarāsandha, (13) Sahadeva. After Sahadeva there were 19 or 32 kings (or 22 according to Mr Pargiter) up to Kipuñjaya, the last. The Great War, therefore, took place, on the above assumption, one thousand four hundred and forty-one years before the accession of Chandra Gupta in 322 BC or in other words that the Great War took place in or about 1763 BC.

II But says a Western writer—“Duncker in his History of Antiquity (Vol iv, pp 74-7) gives four calculations for the beginning of the Kali age, that is, approximately for the date of the great battle, viz., 1300, 1175, 1200, and 1418 BC” (as quoted by Mr Pargiter in J R A S for January 1910).

Our figure does not correspond with the figures of Duncker. But the last figure of Duncker corresponds with the following verse of the Matysa Purâna (Chapter 273, verse 36) as we find it in ordinary printed text —

"महापदमस्य द्वारम् यथा जन्मपरीक्षितः । पत्रोलास्वतं तू स्वयं पञ्चाशास्तरसम् ॥"

"Now from Mahâpadma's inauguration to Parikshit's birth, this interval is known as 1050 years."

Now Mahâpadma, called also Nanda, the founder of the Nanda dynasty was crowned one hundred years before Chandra Gupta, according to the reading of all the Purânas. Consequently, the coronation of Mahâpadma took place in 422 B.C. or 100 years before the accession of Chandra Gupta Maurya in 322 B.C. Adding this figure 422 to 1050 we get 1472. That was the time when Parikshit was born (during the Mahâbhârata war) as the posthumous son of Abhimanyu who was killed in that war, if we take the above verse as correct, which it is not as will be proved later on. According to this calculation the Great War took place 1472 years before Christ. Our previous calculation gave us 1763 B.C as the year of the Great War, while this gives us 1472 B.C as the year of that war. Thus there is a difference of 291 years.

III But in the Viṣṇu P. also occurs a similar verse (Book IV. Ch 24 v 32)

"यावत् परीक्षितो जन्म यथा जन्मपरीक्षितसः । पत्रोलास्वतं तू स्वयं पञ्चाशास्तरसम् ॥"

"From the birth of Parikshit up to the inauguration of Nanda the interval is 1015 years." Adding 1015 to 422 we get 1437, which is similar to the figure just obtained. The Great War took place in 1437 B.C.

Shall we, therefore, take 1437 B.C as the year of the Great war in preference to 1763 B.C a figure arrived at by adding the periods of reigns from Somâdhî up to Chandra Gupta's 322 B.C? This is the question that we have to consider next.

IV The next question that naturally arises is what kings reigned after this Great War. Some of the Purânas contain list of kings that reigned in various parts of India, at the time of the Mahâbhârata war. These such dynasties are important, though only one of them is useful, as fixing the date of the Great War. The first dynasty is that of the Pauravas, whose capital was Indraprastha, subsequently removed to Kausâmbi, on the banks of the Yamuna, thirty miles to the west of Allahabad. The second dynasty is that of the Ikșvâkus, whose capital was Ajodhya and in later times Kâîrâ.
The third dynasty is that of the Bāhradra-thas of Magadha, and their successors the Pradyotas and Śisunāgas. This last is the dynasty, the historical existence of which is put beyond all reasonable doubt, by the rise of Buddhism at a time when Bumbisāra,a Śisunāga king was reigning in Magadha.

The Matsya Purāṇa gives a somewhat complete list of these kings of Magadha in chapter 271. Thus, it says —

"When the Bhārata's battle took place and Sahastra, the king of Magadha, was slain, his heir, Somādhi, became king in Girivrajā"

He and his successors are named below together with their periods of reign.

<table>

</tbody>
</table>

Thus the Vāyu Purāṇa then adds to the above list "Senājit Sāmpratam chāpi, etā vai bhokṣyate samāh" "Senājit is now enjoying the earth the same number of years". It was thus in the reign of this Senājit, that the Great sacrificial session took place in Naimiśāranya. At that time, Adhistama Kṛṣṇa of the Paurava dynasty was reigning in Indraprastha.
About him, the Matsya Purāṇa in chapter 50 says —

"Adhistama Kṛṣṇa dharmatāma Sāmpratam yo mahāyaṣāh" that is Adhistama Kṛṣṇa was the reigning king, when this original of the Matsya Purāṇa was recited by Sūta.

Thus this Adhistama Kṛṣṇa of the Paurava dynasty, and Senājit of Bāhradra dynasty, were contemporaries, and they flourished several years after the Great War.

Next arises the question —When these two kings were reigning in Indraprastha and Girivrajā (Magadha), respectively, who was their contemporary in Ayodhya? The answer is that Divākara of the Ikṣvāku family was the contemporary of Senājit and Adhistama Kṛṣṇa. About his Divākara, the Matsya Purāṇa, in chapter 271 says —

"Tasyaśa Madhyadeśeto
Ayodhyā nagari Subhā Divākarasya sahitā" and Vāyu Purāṇa makes it clearer, by saying:—
"Yadcha ādṛtattvam adhyāste.
Ayodhām nagarīm niṛpah"

Thus these three kings, Adhistma Krishna in Hastināpur of the Paurava dynasty, Divrikara at Ayodhya, of the Ikṣvāku dynasty, and Senājit in Girivijaya of the Bhradratha dynasty were contemporaries.

The list of the successors of Senājit with the periods of their reign as given in the Matsya Purāṇa, chapter 271 may now be resumed, as — 650 or 503 excluding the three not mentioned in our text.

The Matsya Purāṇa according to one text, then adds that these sixteen kings including Senājit are to be known as the future Brihadhrathas, sixteen others had preceded him and their kingdom will last 723 years.
But there is another reading which says that these 32 kings reigned for 1000 years. That reading is in harmony with the text of the Vṛṣṇu Purāṇa.

In the Matsya Purāṇa chapter 271, verses 29 and 30 say that these 32 kings will be the future Brihadhrathas and they will reign for full 1000 years. The list given, however, enumerates only 22 kings. The word "Dvātrimēṣṭ" is perhaps a mistake for "Dvāvimēṣṭ" which appears to be the correct reading as given in the Brahmānda Purāṇa. Both readings

"श्रवेण वर्क्षार्तम् दूरे ब्रह्माण्ड परमात्मा: । पूर्वस्य वर्क्षार्तस्य दूरस्य राज्यं महत्वति ॥"

"And these 32 kings will be the future Brihadhrathas. Their kingdom will last full 1000 years"
APPENDIX II

But the Brahmanda Purana reading is —

ब्रह्मण्ड पुराणं तथा हरितारो वृहद्यां।
पूर्वं वर्षसंख्यं तु तेषां राज्यं मविपयति॥

"These 22 kings are the future Bhiprathas. Their kingdom will last for full 1000 years."

This latter reading appears correct, because it corresponds with the reading of the Vishnu Purana and the total of the reigns of these 22 kings comes up very nearly to 1000 years. Or the fact may be that there were really 22 kings who ruled for 1000 years, though only 22 have been enumerated by name, the names of other ten forgotten as being insignificant.

The Vishnu text is —

"नवारात्मकतुलवाद सहदेवादि सेमापि, तथाचार भुज-बाणं, तत्त्वां भुज-बाणं, तत्रत्त्व निसर्गं, तत्त्वाम्: सुबर्मस्तसुक्तः वृहत्कर्मी, तत्त्वां देवात्तित्वं, तत्रात्त्व भुज-बाणं, तत्रात्त्व दीपं, तत्र व वुतं, शुभविनयम्य अविपयति। तत्त्वां दीपं, तत्रात्त्व वुतं धर्मं, तत्त्वां रूपं, तत्रात्त्व रूपं, तत्र लुप्तवादि भविषयं। तत्: तत्त्वां भविष्यं, सत्यात्तित्वं भविष्यं, तत्त्वां रूपं, पुनं, रघुवेद्यं वर्षसंख्यं भविष्यं॥

"Jarasandha's son was Sahadeva, his son was (1) Somapi, his son will be (2) Shrutavat, his son will be (3) Ayutayasa, his son will be (4) Nirmastra, his son will be (5) Sukastroma, his son will be (6) Brahatkarman, his son will be (7) Nenajit, his son will be (8) Shrutanjayas, his son will be (9) Vipra, his son will be (10) Suchi, his son will be (11) Kasanya, his son will be (12) Suvarnati, his son will be (13) Dharmaj, his son will be (14) Sushrana, his son will be (15) Drjhasena, his son will be (16) Sunati, his son will be (17) Subala, his son will be (18) Sunita, his son will be (19) Satyajit, his son will be (20) Varajit, his son will be (21) Rupajit. These are the Barahadrathas, who will reign for a thousand years."

Note — The opinion of Mr. Parrot that from the ascension of Nenajit to the end of this dynasty there were 16 kings who ruled for 723 years does not seem to be borne out by our text. If thirty-two kings ruled for 1000 years, then 16 kings before Nenajit ruled for 1000-723 or 277 years. This would give an average reign of 17 years, a very much shorter period than the average of forty-five years per reign according to the previous reading. The total figures of the reigns of the 16 kings from Nenajit to Rupajit does amount, however, to full 700 years. The verse "trayo-vima-adhikam teṣaṁ rajyam cha sata-saptakam" may be a wrong reading  The Barhadratha dynasty was founded by the father of king Brihadratha

"This dynasty was founded by Brihadratha, son of Vasu Chaidyoparichara, and he and his nine successors reigned down to the great battle. From the battle to Senajit 6 kings are named, excluding Senajit who is spoken of as the then reigning king, and from and including him to the end 16 kings are mentioned. There were thus 22 kings altogether, 10 before the battle and twenty-two after, or from the standpoint of Senajit's reign 16 past and 16 future. Lines "Sadas-ate nirpa jnaya &c" of Mataya Purana take the stand point of his reign and speak of him and his successors as the 16 future kings, and say pram face their total duration was 728 years.

Lines Dvattrimsac cha &c, of Mataya Purana which are not in some manuscripts of Mataya Purana reckon (in a way) from the beginning and speak of all the thirty-two kings as future since most of them were posterior to the Battle, and thus they say the whole dynasty lasted 1000 years. These two statements are not contradictory but are hardly compatible, because taken together they assign 728 years to the last 16 kings and only 277 to the first 16. The total of 1000 years for 32 kings is excessive, and that of 728 years for 16 kings is absurd. But if we can read lines "Sadas-ate nirpa jnaya &c, as two independent sentences, and treat them as applying, not merely to those 16 future kings but to the Brihadrathas generally, their purport stands thus: "These 16 kings are to be known as the future Brihadrathas — and their kingdom (that is, the kingdom of the Brihadrathas) lasts 728 years. The total duration, then, 723 years, would be within possibility, for the average reign would be about 14 years. This rendering would of course discredit lines Dvattrimsac cha nirpa &c. If we read Vayu according to another manuscript of Mataya Purana with that construction, the total period would be 700 years and would give an average reign of just under 22 years which would be vims-adhikam."

This opinion of Mr Pargiter is however not borne out by our text of the Mataya Purana Ananda Saranam series. In chapter 30 of that Purana we find the dynasty of Brihadrathas given in verses 26-33 namely, (1) Vasa Chaidyauparichara, (2) Brihadhratha, (3) Kusajra, (4) Vrishabhna, (5) Punyavan or Pusmapavan, (6) Punya or Pusya, (7) Satyadwiti.

Note.—According to some manuscripts there was no king like Punya or Pusya.

Note—This was the king who was killed in the great war mentioned in this chapter.

Thus from Senajit up to Rupunjaya there are only 19 kings, and not 16 as held by Mr Pargiter, while from Vasa Chaidya Uparichara there are 19 kings up to Senajit, and not sixteen kings as mentioned by Mr Pargiter. This arose very likely from an oversight of the learned author. Excluding the three kings (Sunetra 40 years, Satyajit 33 years, and Visvajit 25 years or altogether 148 years), we find that Senajit to Rupunjaya there ruled 16
APPENDIX II.

kings for 502 years, while from Chaidya Uparichara to Brhatkarma the predecessor of Senajit, there ruled 19 kings for the remaining period of 1000 years, namely, for 498 years. We, however, think that the text giving 1000 years to 32 Bhadratha kings, from Somadhi to Ripunyaya is preferable as consistent with chapter 50 of this Purâna. Though it gives the average period of 31 years for each reign, yet that period is not excessive, remembering that men were longer-lived then than now or that the names of some insignificant kings have dropped out, though the total regnal period 1000 years has been correctly remembered and repeated.

Pulika—a minister of Ripunyaya assassinated his master and installed his son as king, which gave rise to the Pradyota family. There were five kings in this family, viz —

1. Pradyota 28 years of reign.
2. Pâlaka 28 " "
3. Visâkhayupa 55 " "
4. Ajaka (or Suryaka) 31 " "
5. Nandivardhana 30 " "

183 " "

This dynasty, however, lasted 152 years, according to other texts.

The Pradyotases were followed by the Siûnâga family. Siûnâga put an end to the last Pradyota king and was succeeded by nine kings mentioned below —

1. Siûnâga 49 years of reign
2. Kâkara 26 " "
3. Kâmâdharman 26 " "
4. Kâtraâjas or Kâmajit 24 " "
5. Vimbisara or Vindhyâsena 28 " "
6a. Kânvâyana 9 " "
6b. Bhumitra 14 " "
6. Ajâta satru 27 " "
7. Darsaka (or Varnâka) 24 " "
8. Udasin 25 " "
9. Nandivardhan 40 " "
10. Mahânandin 43 " "

844 " "

Our Purâna, however, gives the total period as 360 years. If however we take the above reigns, as given by Mr. Pargiter, and other Purânas, viz as 40+36+36+40+28+27+25+33+42+43 the total comes to 350, still a deficiency of ten years. The Matsya wrongly inserts two Kânvâyana kings, viz, Kânvâyana 9 years and Bhumimitra 14 years in the above list, between Vindhyasena and Ajâta satru. Even then the figures of the Matsya will come up to 344+23=367 years and not 360.
THE DATE OF THE MAHABHARATA WAR

With these kings we come upon solid historical names. It was in the reigns of Vimbisāra, the fifth king in the above list and of his son, Ajātaśatru, that the great Founder of Buddhism flourished. From the date of Buddha’s preaching in Magadha, in the court of Vimbisāra and Ajātaśatru up to the Great War, the period that elapsed can be easily calculated from the figures above given:

| Namely from Somadhi up to Sentjit  | 527 years. |
| Srutajaya up to Ripunjaya           | 502 "      |
| Pradyota family                    | 132 "      |
| Sisunaga                           | 321 "      |
|                                   | 1382 "     |

This however does not tally with the statement that 1050 or 1015 years elapsed between Nanda and the Great War. There is a difference of more than two hundred years.

If, however, we take the figures from Mr. Pargiter’s dynasties of the Kali age, as given below, we find that from Somadhi to Ripunjaya, there were 22 kings who reigned for 920 years. The Pradyotas after Ripunjaya were 5 kings who reigned for 138 years. The Sisunagas who came after the Pradyotas were 10 kings and reigned for 330 years; the text however says that the reign of the Sisunagas was for 360 years. Adding up the above-mentioned three figures, viz., 920 plus 138 plus 330, (or 360) we get the sum 1388 years or 1418. Thus, 1388 or 1418 years was the interval between the installation of Mahāpādama Nanda and the birth of Parikṣit or the Great War. Adding 422 B.C. the year of the installation of Mahāpādama Nanda, we come to the figures 1810 or 1840 B.C. as the date of the Mahābhārata War. Thus there is difference between 1810 B.C. or 1840 and 1472 B.C. of 388 years or 418.

Whether we take Mr. Pargiter’s figures which gives a difference of 388 years, or the figures based on the Matsya Purāṇa, which gives the date of the war as 1736 B.C. and according to which, the difference is 291, it is, no doubt, a large one. How are we to reconcile this? The printed text of all the Purāṇas gives the interval between the inauguration of Mahāpādama Nanda and the birth of Parikṣit as 1050 years (with the variants 1015 or 1115), while the total of the reigns given in detail makes this figure, 1741 in our case, and, 1388 in that of Mr. Pargiter. What figure are we to take? Is there any mode of reconciling the difference of about 300 years? What is the more reasonable alternative to take? Is it the aggregate arrived at, by adding the reigns of different kings or the total given in the printed texts of the Purāṇas? Or, does this verse of the Purāṇas refer to some other Parikṣit than Parikṣit, the son of Abhimanyu? Or, is Parikṣit a misreading for some other king who reigned about 300 years after the Great War? It is a curious fact worth noting, that when the Purāṇa was recited in the Naṁśāraṇya by the Śīta, Senājit was the reigning king in the Barhadratha family and from Somadi to Senājit, six kings reigned for a period of 267 years, or, according to our figures 277 years. If, instead of calculating from the period of the birth of Parikṣit, the Purāṇa calculated from the time of Senājit, or, his contemporary Adhisima Krisna, in whose reign the Purāṇa was composed, then the above figure of 1050 years becomes reasonable, but this is merely conjectural, and there is no authority as yet discovered by us, for holding that the Parikṣit of the above verse is not the Parikṣit, son of Abhimanyu, or that Parikṣit is a misreading for Senājit or Adhisima Krisna.

V Varāha Miḥira, quoting Garga, fixes the date of the Great War at 2526 before Śaka era, which commenced in 78 A D. According to him the date of the Great War is 2448 B C (Brihat-Saṁhitā, Ch XII, v 3) But he or rather Garga gives no clue how this figure was arrived at.

VI It may also be noted here that though the Viṣṇu Purāṇa repeats the traditional verse that 1050 years was the interval between the inauguration of Nanda and the birth of Parikṣit yet, the total given by it, are approximately, the same as those given by the Mataya Purāṇa. It says the Barhadrathas reigned for 1000 years from Somadi (our figure is 920 years from Somadi to Rupūṇjaya.) It then gives the reign of Pradyotas as 138 years which coincides with our figure. The Sisunagas reigned for 362 years, according to the Viṣṇu Purāṇa. Thus the total of these three figures, is (1000 plus 135 plus 362) 1500 years. This would give the year of the Mahābhārata war as 1922 B C Thus whether we take 1922 B C of the Viṣṇu Purāṇa or 1763 B C according to one calculation, or 1810 B C, according to Mr Pargiter, we can fairly say, that the figure 1477 B C, given in the datum of the above verse, is untenable. Therefore, we repeat that for the present, we take 1922 B C, as the year of the Great War.

Another method of reconciling the discrepancy is, that, instead of reading the verse as given in printed text, if we read it as १३८८, then it would mean, that the interval between Nanda and Parikṣit was, in round numbers, 1500 years, instead of 1050 or 1015 years. This appears a more reasonable reading, and in this view the figure of Mr Pargiter, namely, 1388 (the interval between Nanda and Parikṣit) is nearer the figure of the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, with a difference of 112 years.
matter of strange coincidence, there is such a reading, as is evident from Mr Pargiter's footnote given on page 58 of his Dynamics of the Kali Age. He says on verse पूर्व सबसबूत्ताय युधिष्ठिर प्रकटासूर in his note, No 21 on the word पंचाशतृतृतम "So Matsya generally, Vīṣṇu, Brahmastra, Matsya, marked c, e, and j, the reading is पंचाशतृतृतम, in Mats marked l and m of Matsya and b and l of Vīṣṇu, the reading is पंचाशतृतृतम."

This last reading removes all difficulties According to it, the reading would be, "पूर्व ( or पूर ) सबसबूत्ताय युधिष्ठिर प्रकटासूर" and the verse would then mean "Now from Mahāpadma's inauguration to Parikṣit's birth, this interval is, indeed, known as 1500 years".

We shall take therefore, this reading of the verse and in all that we have said above, this is to be understood Thus according to it, the date of the Great War would be 1500 plus 422 equal to 1922 B.C.

Here, in passing, we may mention a point noted by Mr Pargiter, regarding the two readings of the Matsya Chapter 271 verse 30 That verse according to one text is —

"That, 22, Birhadratha kings in future will enjoy the kingdom for full one thousand years" The other reading is that"sixteen Birhadratha kings in future will enjoy the kingdom for 723 years"

In the face of it, these two versions appear to be inconsistent, but, there is really no such inconsistency The first verse takes its standpoint from the reign of king Parikṣit, who was contemporary of king Somādī, and counts the future kings from that point, as the Vīṣṇu Purāṇa has done From Somādī upto Ripunjaya, the aggregate of the reigns is 1,000 years and the number of kings is 22 (or rather 32) though ten names have dropped, three of whom however have been supplied by Mr Pargiter, and others may be found if further search be made The second verse takes its standpoint from Senājit's reign, consistently with its assertion, that the Purāṇa was recited towards the end of the reign of Senājit, or, to use its own words "Senājit, had just passed away," and the total number of kings is really, sixteen, from that date and their aggregate period of reign is 723 years Thus both the figures 1000 and 723 years are correct, the starting points of counting being different

VII The Sudhānta view, therefore, is that the Great War took place in 1920 B.C In this we are supported not only by Sṛṅghara Svāmī the learned commentator on the Vīṣṇu Bhāgavata Purāṇa but we are corroborated by the Saptarṣi Era also All the Purāṇas (as a rule,) say that the Saptarṣis were in Māgha at the time of the birth of Parikṣit, some of them say that they will be in the Krittikā or the twenty fourth from Magha at the end of the Andhra dynasty, see Vāyu, Vol II, (Bibliotheca Indica) Adhy 37, v 417, and Matsya Ch 273, v 44. That dynasty lasted for 460 years. So deducting from 2400 (one hundred for each asterism) we get 2400−460 = 1940. That is to say, that there were 1900 years roughly between the birth of Parikṣit and the rise of the Andras in 28 B.C. As the Saptarṣi calculation is in centuries, this gives also 19 centuries B.C., for the year of the Great War.

APPENDIX III

(Note — Here we give the translation of three chapters, namely 571-578 of the Matsya Purāṇa, which give an account of the Dynasties of the Kali Age after the War, in order, to complete the chronology of the Indian kings and to elucidate the points discussed in Appendix II.)

CHAPTER CCLXXI

Risṣi said — O Sūta, you have described to us the dynasty of Puru, along with the future kings in that dynasty. Now tell us about those kings who will be in the Solar (Sūrya) dynasty. So also tell us here about those illustrious kings in that Yādava family, who will exist in the Kaliyuga. And when those dynasties (Sūrya and Yādava) will come to an end, then, tell us briefly about those pious kings who were kinsmen of these families and who will obtain the kingdom after them, in due order as far as possible — 1-3

Note — The future kings of Paurava dynasty have been described in Chapter 50. See p 155.

Sūta said — Now, after this, I shall tell you, of the high-souled Ikṣvākus.

Post Mahābhārata Ikṣvākus or Solar Dynasty

(1) Brāhadvahāla’s heir [was (2) Brāhadvahāla, his heir] was the heroic king Brāhatkṛṣṇa. (3) Urukgṛṣṇa. The son of Urukgṛṣṇa was the famous (4) Vatsadṛṣṭa (Vatsavyuha) — 4

[According to Mr Pargiter, the verse ought to be “Brāhadvahāla’s heir was the warrior king Brāhatkṛṣṇa, his son was Urukgṛṣṇa.”]

(5) Pratīvyoma was after Vatsadṛṣṭa. His son is (6) Dvākara, to whom in the Madhyadeśa, belongs the beautiful city of Ayodhyā — 5

Note — According to Vāyu the reading is “who now rules the city of Ayodhyā in Madhyadeśa,” showing that Dvākara was the ruling prince, when this Purāṇa was recited.

Dvākara’s successor will be the illustrious (7) Sahadeva, whose successor will be (8) Dhruva, the high-minded — 6

His successor will be the most lucky (9) Bhāva (Bhārata or Bhāvakara). And his son will be (10) Pratīpāda. The son of Pratīpāda will be even, (11) Suprātpa — 7

(12) Marudena will be his (Suprātpa’s) son, after whom was (13) Sunakṣatras. After Sunakṣatras will be (14) Kuntarṣa, the harasser of his foes — 8
After Kinnarāśva will be the high-minded (15) Antarikṣa. After Antarikṣa will be (16) Susena, and (17) Sumitra, the conqueror of his enemies (Amritrajit—9)

Note—According to another reading, Susena was the son of Antarikṣa, whose son was Sumitra-Amritrajit. Or, after Antarikṣa will be Suparna (Susena), and after him Amritrajit.

(18) Brihadārjya will be the son of Sumitra. Brihadārjya’s (son) will be (19) Viryavān (Vṛṣarvāṇ). Again (20) Krutajaya, by name, will be the virtuous (Dhāṃika) son of Viryavān—10

The son of Krutajaya, will be the wise (21) Ranejaya, (22) Sanjayya, the warrior king will come after Ranejaya—11

[Sañjaya’s son] will be (23) Śākya. After Śākya will be the king (24) Sudhāudana. The son of Sudhāudana will be (25) Siddhārtha, the eminent (26) Pushala or Rāhuka will be the son of Siddhārtha—12

After him will be (27) Pālenajayu. After him will be (28) Krudraka. After Krudraka will be (29) Kulaka. After Kulaka is remembered (30) Suratha—13

From Suratha was born (31) Sumitra. He will be the last king. These Ikṣvākus have been declared, who will exist in the Kaliyuga—14

These will be in the line of Brihadārjya, they will be the glory of their family. Here the following genealogical verse is sung by ancient poets—15

“This dynasty of the Ikṣvākus will end with Sumitra. On reaching King Sumitra it will come to its close in the Kaliyuga”—16

This is thus the dynasty of Manu, even as declared before. Hereafter I will relate the Bṛhadārjaya (dynasty of Magadha) —17

Post Mahābhārata Bṛhadārathas

Listen about the kings, those past, those present, and those to come in future, from (the stock of) Jarāsandha (and) in the line of Sahadeva—18

After (1) Sahadeva was killed, when the great war of Bhārata took place, (2) Somādhī succeeded him as his heir, and became king in Girivajra—19

He reigned for fifty-eight years and then (3) Śrutāśrama in his line reigned for sixty-four years—20

(4) Apatiśāya reigned for thirty-six years and (5) Niromitra after reigning for forty years went to heaven—21

Afterwards (6) Surōkṣa got the earth for fifty-six years and (7) Bṛhatkarmā reigned for twenty-three years—22
MATSYA PURANA, CHAPTER 271

(8) Sesaajit has just passed away after enjoying the earth for fifty years.

Note.—Another reading according to the Vayu Purana is "Sesaajit is now enjoying the earth, the same number (58) of years"

He will be succeeded by (9) Shravanjaya who will be for forty years. Afterwards (10) Vadhhu will enjoy the earth and will reign for twenty-eight years, and then (11) Suchi will rule the kingdom for fifty-eight plus six years (i.e. 64) — 23-24

The king (12) Klema will enjoy the earth for twenty-eight years. After whom the powerful (13) Anuvruta will reign for sixty-four years — 25

(14) Sunetra will enjoy the earth for twenty-five (another reading thirty-five) years (15) Nirmuta will enjoy it for fifty-eight years — 26.

After that (16) Trinetra will enjoy the kingdom for twenty-eight years (17) Dyumatsena Drihshena) will be for forty-eight years — 27

(18) Mahanetra will be resplendent for thirty-three years (19) Achala or (Suchain) will be king for thirty-two years — 28

(20) Ripurajyata will obtain the earth for fifty-years, and these 32 kings will be the future Brihadhrddhas — 29

Note — The following three lines are omitted in our text of the Matsya Purana, but supplied by Mr. Parzner

"Chatvarim sat samaj raja Sunetra bhoukacate tatah
Satyajit prthivim raja trsani bhoukacate samah
Prayaamam Visvakumarchapu pancha viverrd bhavajyati"

King Sunetra will next enjoy the kingdom for forty years. King Satyajit will enjoy the earth for eighty-three years (eighty years) and Vivasjat will obtain this earth and be king for twenty-five years — 29A

Note — Our reading is dvatrasattu nripa hyeta. Another reading is "Sodesa-nike nripa Jeyadh bhaivatiro Brihadhrddhas" And then the verse will mean — "these sixteen kings are to be known as the future Brihadhrddhas" Then there is further this line in the same manuscript — "Troy-vimsa-adhakam tejan rajaamsa sata-saptakam" And it means — "and their kingdom will last seven-hundred twenty-three years" According to this reading the sixteen future Brihadhrddhas will reign for 728 years. Of course this includes Sesaajit also

Their kingdom will last full 1000 years indeed. Then Bali (son of) Pulaka will be the conqueror of Ksatriyas — 30

Note — The translation is according to the reading

हानि तमु जना होते मनवरो उषममा।
पूष्ण यहस्सु हुं सु तेषा राज्यं मनवपति।

But the kings enumerated are 22 only. The reading of the Brahmanda Purana is हानि तमु जना होते मनवरो उषममा।
पूष्ण यहस्सु हुं सु तेषा राज्यं मनवपति।

Three 22 Kings. This is more accurate.

Here ends chapter 271 dealing with the geneologies of future

APPENDIX III.

CHAPTER CCLXXII
Pradyota or Bālaka Dynasty

Sūta said — When Bṛhadrathas and Viśhotras and Avantus have passed away, Pulaka, after killing his master will instal his son (Pradyota or Bālaka) as king — 1

He will instal, Bālaka, born of Pulaka, in the very sight of the Kṣatriyas (by assassinating his master, Rīpunjaya) That son of Pulaka will subjugate the neighbouring kings by force and not by right, and will be devoid of royal policy — 2

That (Pulaka) the best of men will reign for 23 years, (2) Pālaka or Bālaka will be king for 28 years (for 24 according to the Vāyu) — 3

(3) King Viśūkhayāpta will reign for 53 years (50 according to Vāyu) (4) and Śāryaka will be king for 21 years (5) Nandivardhana, his son, will be king for 30 years (20 years another reading) These five kings, after enjoying the earth, for 52 years (evidently a mistake for 155 or 152) will perish — 4-5

Note — The Vīṣṇu as well as the Bhagavata Purāṇa gives the aggregate as 158 years

Śrīvālīka Dynasty

Then Śrīvālīka destroying all their glory will place his son in Benares and himself go to Girivraja The King Śrīvālīka will reign for 40 years — 6.

His son Kākavarna will obtain the earth for 26 years, Kṣemadharma will be king for 36 years — 7

Kṣemagupt will obtain the earth for 24 years, Vindhyasena will be king for 28 years — 8

Kānḍāyana will be king for 9 years, his son, Bhūmamitra will be king for 14 years — 9

Note — This verse 9 is evidently misplaced here. Its proper place is in the Kāṇva line

Aṣṭaśatru will be king for 27 years, Vamsāka will be king for 24 years — 10

His son Uḍāś will be king for 33 years, Nandivardhana will be king for 40 years — 11

Mahānand will be king for 43 years. These will be the kings in the Śrīvālīka dynasty — 12

The Śrīvālīkas will be kings for full 360 years, and the kings will be low born Kṣatriyas (Kṣatrabandhu) — 13

Note — According to the Vīṣṇu and Vāyu the aggregate is 862 years. But adding the above figures we get 821 only
Early Contemporary Dynasties

Contemporaneous with all these kings will flourish in Kaliyuga other kings also, and they will endure an equal time. There will be 24 Ikṣvākus, 27 Panchalas, 24 kings of Kāśi, and 28 Hasthayas kings. —14-15

Then there will be 32 Kalinga kings, 25 Asmaka, 36 Kurava, 28 Maithila, 23 Surasenas, and 20 Vitahotra kings. All these kings will endure the same time and will be contemporaries.

The Nandas 422 BC — 322 BC

Then, as an incarnation of Kali, will be born Mahāpadma, a son of Mahānāudi from a Śudra woman and he will be the exterminator of the Kṣatriya kings. —16-18

Afterwards all the kings will be of the Śudra origin. That Mahāpadma will be sole monarch and a universal Emperor. He will reign for 88 years on this earth. He will uproot all Kṣatriya, through his ambition. His eight sons, beginning with Sukalpa will be kings for 12 years. They will be kings in succession to Mahāpadma one after another. Kauṭilya will uproot all these sons, during the course of 12 years. Then the empire will pass on to the Mauryas, after being enjoyed by (Kauṭilya?) for a hundred years (or then Kauṭilya, after enjoying the earth for hundred years, will go to heaven) — 19-22

The Mauryas

His son Śatadhanva will be king for 6 years. His son Brihadratha will reign for 70 years — 23

For 36 years Asaka will be king. His grandson will then be king for 70 years — 24

His son Daśaratha will be king for 8 years. His son Saptati will reign for 9 years (or his son will be for 79 years) — 25.

These are the ten Mauryas who will enjoy the earth for full 137 years, from whom she (the Earth) will pass to the Sungsas.

Note — The text says that there are ten Maurya kings, but its enumeration is short of that number. The following note from Mr. Pargiter is appropriate — "This dynasty is given by all five Purāṇas, but the account of it has suffered more than that of any other dynasty. Three versions exist here, the earliest in the Matsya, the second in the Vya, and the third in the Vyu generally and the Brahmānda. They agree in general purport, but have many differences. The second forms a stage of recension intermediate between the first and the third, and is the only copy that has preserved the names of all the kings. The Matsya version in all copies is incomplete and has one of its verses misplaced, thus only 5 MSS mention Chandragupta, the second king always omitted, and, the account
APPENDIX III.

Generally begins with that verse 23, putting the two kings first, and then mentions only four kings, Asoka and his three successors.

[Though the Mātysa mentions only seven kings, and that also in a confused manner, the full list of ten kings is given in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa (Book IV Chap 24 verses 7-8)

The years of accession noted against their names are taken from Mr V A Sungas.

Pusyamitra the commander-in-chief will uproot Bṛhadṛatha and will rule the kingdom as king 36 years — 27

After him Vasuṣyesta will be king for seven years. After him
Vasumitra will be for ten years — 28.

Note — Our text omits Agnimitra who was the immediate successor of Pusyamitra and who reigned for 8 years, as in the Viṣṇu Pūrāṇa.

Then his son Antaka will be (reign) for 2 years. Then Pulindaka will be (reign) for 3 years — 29

Then Vajramitra will be king for 9 years. Then Saṃabhaga will reign for 32 years. Then after him his son Devabhumi will reign for 10 years. These ten petty kings will enjoy this earth for full 112 years. And then the earth will go to the Kanvas — 30-32.

Note — The Purāṇa enumerates only 8 kings while there ought to be ten. This omission is supplied by the names of Agnimitra and Ghosavasu as given in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa.
The ten kings, therefore, are the following —

| (1)   | Pusyamitra        |               | 185 B.C (36 years). |
| (2)   | Agnimitra         |               | 140 B.C (8 years).  |
| (3)   | Sūlaya or Vasuṣyesta |             | 141 B.C (7 years). |
| (4)   | Vasumitra         |               | 136 B.C (16 years).|
| (5)   | Antaka            |               | 124 B.C (2 years). |
| (6)   | Pulindaka         |               | 123 B.C (3 years). |
| (7)   | Ghosavasu         |               | 119 B.C (3 years). |
| (8)   | Vajramitra        |               | 110 B.C (10 years).|
| (9)   | Bhāgavata or Saṃabhaga | 107 B.C (32 years) |
| (10)  | Devabhūti or Devabhumi | 75 B.C (10 years) |

Total — 120 years.
The aggrégate of the reigns is, however, 120 years and not 112, but all the Purāṇas agree in giving 112 years as the duration of Sungr dynasty. This discrepancy might be explained by omitting Agnimitra from the list. He perhaps never reigned as a king apart from his father Puṣyamitra, who though de facto king always styled himself Senāpati or Commander-in-chief and so Agnimitra's name is not mentioned by the Matsya Purāṇa. There is much uncertainty about his reign as pointed out by Mr Pargiter. Or may it be that Agnimitra was practically a king during the life-time of his father on certain parts of the vast empire. And the verse "tte-suto' gnmintu-aṣṭau bhavisyaśi samā nirph" may be read as "tte-suto' gnmintustu bhavisyaśi samā nirph." According to this calculation Sunga dynasty would appear to have come to an end not in 65 B.C. but in 73. The Matsya Purāṇa verse 32 is rather inaccurate. It says —

"These ten Kṣudra kings will enjoy this earth full 100 and 200 (total 300) years. Then it will go to the Sungras." This is evidently a mistake. The earth could not have gone to the Sungras after the Sungras. Nor did the Sungras reign for 300 years. Instead of tataḥ Sungrā gamisyaṭi, another reading is tataḥ svargam gamisyaṭi, which may refer to the last king namely, Devabhumī who will go to heaven. This reading is more appropriate than Sungrā gamisyaṭi. Moreover who are these petty kings Kṣudrājanyah which the text mentions? It only mentions 8 kings and not 10 for it does not mention Agnimitra and Ghoesavasū. We have therefore adopted Mr Pargiter's reading —Dasaite Sungrā-rājāno bhokṣyantīmāṃ vasundharaṁ Satam pūrnam dāsa dve cha tataḥ Kanvān gamisyaṭī." This is in accordance with Viṣṇu purāṇa also which in IV 24 11 says —

The Kanvāyanas

The minister Vasudeva forcibly overthrowing the dissolute king Debhabhumī will become king among the Sungras. He the Kanvāyan, will be king for 9 years — 33.

His son Bhūmitra will reign 14 years. His son Nārāyana will be for 12 years — 34.
Suśarma, his son, will be for 10 years only These are recorded as Sungabhrintyas, or Kānvāyanas kings — 35
These 40 (four) Kanvas are Brāhmaṇas and they will enjoy the earth for 45 years — 36
They will have the neighbouring kings respect them and will be virtuous. At the time of their period of reign coming to an end the earth will go to the Andhras — 27

Note. — The four Kānvāyanas kings are shown in the following tabular form. —

Here ends chapter 272 describing the Pradyota, Śiśuṇa, the Nanda, the Maurya, the Sungas and the Kānvāyanas dynasties.

CHAPTER CCLXXIII

Andhras

The Andhra Śiśuṇa (Śiśuṇa) with his fellow tribesmen, the servants of Suśarma, will assail the Kānvāyanas and him (Suśarma,) and destroy the remains of the Sungas' power and will obtain this earth —1-2

Note. — The above translation is according to Mr. Pargiter's text. According to our text the reading is —

"कान्वायनाल्लो बुधा: सुधार्मिष्य: प्रसवध तादु। पुन्धां चैव रक्षेपं कान्वाणेहु तु बहुतं।"

This would mean — "Then Kānvāyanas nobles of Suśarma having assailed her (Earth) and put to an end what remained of the Sungas will become powerful." This shows that the chieftains of the last Kauya King, Suśarma, revolted against him and put an end to the Sunga power.

Their tribesman (a kinsman of these Kānvāyanas chieftains (bhūpās) who had revolted against Suśarma) called (1) Śiśuṇa Andhra will get this earth. For 23 years Śiśuṇa will be the king — 2

His younger brother (2) Kiṣṇa will be 18 years. His son (3) Śrimallakarni (Śri Śatikarni) will be 10 years. Then (4) Pūrṇotsanga will be king 18 years — 3

Note. — Mr. Pargiter inserts (5) "Skandhastambhi will be king 18 years" after Pūrṇotsanga.
(6) Śāntakarni will be 56 years. His son (7) Lambodara 18 years — 4.

His son (8) Āpitaka (Āpīlaka) will be 12 years. Then (9) Meghasvāti will be 18 years — 5

Then (10) Svāti will be king 18 years (11) Skandhasvāti will then be king 7 years — 6

Then (12) Mrigendra Svātkarṇa will be 3 years Then (13) Kuntala Svātkarṇa will be king 8 years Then (14) Svātivarṇa will be king for one year.—— 7-8

Then (16) Arikṭavarṇa will be 25 years After him (17) Hāla will be king for 5 years — 9.

Note.—Before this verse and as part of verse 8 Mr. Pargiter inserts “ṣaṭṭrimādeva varṇāṇī Pulomāyī bhaviṣyati,” which means then (15) Pulomāyī will reign 30 years. Instead of Arikṭavarṇa another reading is Ariṭṭakarna

Then (18) Mandalaka will be king 5 years (another reading Mandala) Then (19) Purindrasena (Purikasena) will be king After him (20) Saumya will be king — 10

Note.—The number of years of the reigns of Purindrasena and Saumya are not given in our edition. Moreover, it is doubtful whether, Saumya is the name of a king. Mr. Pargiter says — “Saumya cannot well be a king, though the line says so in its face, because in this dynasty two kings are never put together in a single line without any mention of their reigns. ‘Saumyo bhaviṣyati’ is probably a corruption. Mr. Pargiter also points out that instead of the above the following verse is in the Vāyu — “Paṇcābālako rājā bhaviṣyati mahābhāṣī “Bhāvyāḥ Purikasenaṁ tu samāth śopy oka-vimbhātāṁ” Thus according to this reading Purikasena will reign 21 years

Then (21) Sundara Śāntikarṇa (Satakarni) will reign 1 year Then (22) Chakora Śāntikarṇa (Satakarni) will reign for 6 months — 11

Then (23) Śivasvāti will be 28 years Then (24) King Gautami-putra will be king next 21 years — 12

His son (25) Pulomā will be king 28 years
[Then (26) Śatakarni will be king 29 years]

This is a very doubtful line as pointed out by Mr. Pargiter and it is not in our text. After Pulomā (27) Śivasri-Pulomā will be king 7 years — 13

Then (28) Śiva skandha after Śāntikarna will be king as his son for (7) years

Note.—Our text is दिशकार् दातिकार्यमयाः महांसिद्धिविद्यार्थिनेः दण। But Mr. Pargiter would amend it thus —

Note.—No number is given. Mr. Pargiter would read it — “Bhavitāmśat traya savāḥ,” and then the verse would mean “Śivasandhasāntikarna will be king 8 years”

Then (29) Yajñāvā Śāntikarnika will be 29 years — 14.
Then after him (30) Vijaya will be king 6 years. Then (31) Chandaśārt Śāntakarna, his son will be 10 years — 15

Then (32) Puloma, another of them, (viz., Puloma II) will reign 7 years. — (16a)

These 19 Andhras will enjoy the earth for 480 years. On the kingdom of the Andhras coming to an end, there will be kings belonging to the lineage of their servants — 16-17

Note.—The Purāna mentions at the end that the number of kings will be 19, but as a matter of fact, it enumerates 30 kings, and the number would rise to 33 if the kings inserted by Mr. Pargiter be taken into account.

We give in a tabular form the list of the names of the kings with their reigns —

Various Local Dynasties

On the kingdom of the Andhras coming to an end, there will be kings in the lineage of their servants who would be called Śrīpārvatiya Andhras — 17

There will be 7 (kings in the line of the servants of) Andhras, 10 Ābhira kings, also 7 Gardabhilas and 18 Śākas — 18

There will be 8 Yavana kings, and 14 Tusāra kings and 13 Gurupaṇa kings and 19 (or 11 Mauna) Hūna kings — 19

The 8 Yavana kings will reign for 87 years. The 7 Gardabhilas will enjoy this earth again (no years given) 72 according to Vāyu — 20

The earth is recorded to have belonged to the Tusāras for 7000 years. And 18 kings for 183 years as well [printed text corrupt. Ought to be —‘Eighteen Śākas for 183 years.’] — 21.
For half four hundred years there will reign the 13 Gurūṇḍas of Mleccha origin along with Śādra kings (Or, the 13 future Gurūṇḍas along with low caste men, all of Mleccha origin, will enjoy it half four hundred years, i.e., 200 years — 22)

For 103 years the 11 kings will enjoy the earth (no name) (The word Hūṇa should be supplied to complete the verse, and it would then mean "the 11 Hūṇas will enjoy the earth for 103 years") The (seven) Śrīpārvatiya Andhras will endure 52 years — 23

The 10 Ābhra kings will be for 67 years. When they are overthrown by time, then there will be Kilakila kings — 24

Note. — The account of these dynasties consists of three parts, the first of which summarizes the number of kings in each dynasty, and the second states its duration, while the third adds certain subsequent kings. In the first part, the Matsya, Vāyu, and Brahmanda agree generally, but in the second, the Matsya has one version and the two others another. Here the dynastic matter in the Matsya ends.

These local dynasties are all classed together as more or less contemporaneous. The number of years assigned to them must be considered according to the remarks in Introduction Sec 42 ff., and with reference to the middle of the 5th century A.D. When the account was first compiled as preserved in the Mt, for the revised versions in Vā and Bṛ did not revise the periods. If those remarks be sound, the Śrīpārvatiya Andhrabhrityas had at that time reigned 53 years, or (if we read dvipanchasatam) possibly 100 exactly, according to Mt, while the Vā and Bṛ reading is no doubt corrupt and should perhaps be 113 or 102 years. The Ābhiras had then reigned 67 years, the Gardabhiyas 72 years, the Śākas 188 years, the Yavanas 87 or 82 years, and the Tujāras 7000 or 500 according to the proper construction of the sentences but perhaps 107 or 105 is really meant. The 18 Gurundas or Murundas had then reigned half of the quadruple of 100 years, that is 200, according to Mt, or 350 according to Vā and Bṛ, but the latter is probably a corruption of the former reading, for Vā and Bṛ say precisely 199 years. The 11 Hūnas or Mānas had then lasted 103 years.

THE EVILS OF KALI AGE.

There will be Yavanaea here for the sake of religious feeling (pilgrimage or propaganda) or pleasure or profit. The Aryas and the Mlechchhas (will dwell) mixed up in all provinces (janapadas) — 25.

The people will steadily deteriorate by adopting a contrary course of life, so also the kings will be greedy and speakers of untruth — 26.

All will be overpowered (killed) everywhere by Kalki whether they be Aryas or Mlechchhas. They will be irreligious, avaricious, and heretical and cruel hypocrites everywhere — 27.

When the royal family will be destroyed, and the close of the Kali Age will come and righteousness will perish, there will remain few good people not given to covetousness — 28.

The people will be unholy, unrighteous and oppressed with disease and sorrow, and goaded by failure of rain they will be eager to destroy each other — 29.

Unprotected by anyone, always living in terror, surrounded by deep difficulties, the entire population will begin to live on (the top of) mountains and on the banks of rivers — 30.

When the royal families will be destroyed, the people, will desert their homes, and devoid of affection they will abandon their brothers and friends, and will have no one to protect them.— 31.

They will not observe the rules of caste and order of life, and be addicted to unrighteousness. They will subsist on fruits, roots and leaves of trees, and will be clothed in tattered garments, barks and skins, and thus they will wander over the earth in search of livelihood — 32.

Thus the people having suffered (innumerable) miseries during the close of the Kali Age will become totally extinct, along with the extinction of the Kali Age — 33.

When the Kali Age will be exhausted, after having been on earth for full 1000 divine years together with the Sandhi periods, then on its end, the Krita Age will come — 34.

Chronological Particulars

Thus have I declared in due order the entire series of genealogy—the kings who have passed away, and those who exist now and those who have not yet come to existence—35

Now from Mahāpadma’s inauguration up till the birth of Parikṣit, this interval is indeed known as 1050 years (1915 according to Viṣṇu, and 1500 according to our reading)—36

Note—In manuscripts of Matsya Purāṇa marked o, e, j the reading is Sat-ottaram. Similarly in Mss l n of Matsya and V, i, of Viṣṇu the reading is Pancha-sat-ottaram, meaning 1500. This period of 1500 is the true interval obtained by adding up the periods of reigns of the Bābdhrathas, Pradyotasa and Śisunāgas as given in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa and other Purāṇas. Thus—

| Bābdhrathas from Somāpi to Ripuṣajaya | 1000 years. |
| Pradyotasa | 128 " |
| Śisunāga | 362 " |
| | 1500 " |

Therefore the Mss of the Matsya referred to by Mr Pargiter are more correct than the printed text. This verse, therefore, should read

महापादमसः स्वरूपार्कात्तो वातावर्यपरर्विदितः। द्वे संस्तुतिः द्यु द्वे यस्मिन्त्विन्धोत्तरस्यः॥

This is the reading we prefer to adopt as being in harmony with the text of Viṣṇu Purāṇa. Mahāpadma Nanda was anointed in 423 B.C. Therefore, Parikṣit was born in 1072 B.C. which was the year of the Great War.

Now from Mahāpadma’s inauguration to Parikṣit’s birth, this interval is indeed known as 1500 years—36

Moreover in the interval which elapsed from the last Andhra King Pulomāśi to Mahāpadma—that interval was 836 years—37.

The Cycle of 2700 years or Saptarṣi or Laukika Era

The same future interval of time, beginning from Parikṣit till the end of the Andhras, is thus expressed in the Bhaviṣya (Purāṇa) regarding those (kings) enumerated by the Śrutarṣas who know the ancient stories (in these terms)—38

“When again (there will be end) of 27 future Andhras, (the Great Bear) will be in a line with the towering brilliant Agni (the presiding deity of Kṛttikā asterism)”—39

An equal space of time is still future, subsequent kings beginning from the end of the Andhras (till Parikṣit) are declared therein. They have been enumerated in the Bhaviṣya Purāṇa by Śrutarṣas who knew the ancient stories—38 (Pargiter).

Note.—The reading in the Anandārama edition of the verse 39 is:

सत्ते धनमात्माणसानामपरस्य द्यु यथा पुत्र॥

It is evidently corrupt according to Mr. Pargiter. Pradiptaṇa in the above he would amend into Pratipana and samah should become sanam. The verse therefore should read — सत्यवेष्टर्या मांगुपूर्तिप्रपीतामि समाः। सत्यवेष्टर्या सत्यवेष्टिनापिनि समाः। ॥
APPENDIX III

Another reading is — सत्यवेष्टर्या हे स्युः प्रपीतामि समाः।
as given by the editor of Vigan Parāsa in Bk IV, Ch 24, p 286

The Seven Rasas were then (at the time of the birth of Parīkṣat) on a line with the towering brilliant Agni (the presiding deity of Kṛttikā.) At the end of the future twenty-seven Andhras the cycle repeats itself (Parfgster.)

Note.—This Saptarṣi or Laskika Era appears to be a contrivance of historians and is still in use in Kashmir as first pointed out by the late Dr Böhlé, as will appear from the following extracts from the Encyclopedia Britannica—Article—“Hindu Chronology,” and Dr Böhlé’s Kashmir Reports pp 56 et seq.

“...The Saptarṣi reckoning is used in Kashmir, and in the Kangra district and some of the hill states on the south-east of Kashmir; some nine centuries ago it was also in use in the Punjab, and apparently in Sind. In addition to being cited by such expressions as saptarṣi-samvat, “the year (so-and-so) of the Saptarṣi,” and śstra-samvatāra, “the year (so-and-so) of the scriptures,” it is found mentioned as Lokakāla, “the time or era of the people,” and by other terms which mark it as a vulgar reckoning. And it appears that modern popular names for it are Pahari-samvat and Kašchā-samvat, which we may render by “the Hill era,” and “the crude era.” The years of this reckoning are lunar, Chaturādi, and the months are pūrṇima (ending with the full moon). As matters stand now, the reckoning has a theoretical initial point in 8077 B.C.; and the year 6976, more usually called simply 76, began in A.D. 1900, but there are some indications that the initial point was originally placed one year earlier.

The idea at the bottom of this reckoning is a belief that the Saptarṣi, “the Seven Rasas or Sants,” Marichi and others, were translated to heaven, and became the stars of the constellation Ursas Major, in 8076 B.C. (or 3077), and that these stars possess an independent movement of their own, which, referred to the ecliptic, carries them round at the rate of 110 years for each nakṣatra or twenty-seventh division of the circle. Theoretically, therefore, the Saptarṣi reckoning consists of cycles of 2700 years and the numbering of the years should run from 1 to 2700, and then commence afresh. In practice, however, it has been treated quite differently. According to the general custom, which has distinctly prevailed in Kashmir from the earliest use of the reckoning for chronological purposes, and is illustrated by Kalhana in his history of Kashmir the Bāśānumgaśa, written in A.D. 1148—1150, the numeration of the years has been centennial, whenever a century has been completed, the numbering has not run on 101, 102, 103, &c., but has begun again with 1, 2, 3, &c. Almanacs, indeed show both the figures of the century and the full figures of the entire reckoning, which is treated as running from 8076 B.C., not from 376 B.C., as the commencement of a new cycle, the second, and thus, as an almanac for the year beginning in A.D. 1703 describes the year as “the year 6890 according to the course of the Seven Rasis, and similarly the year 69.” And elsewhere sometimes the full figures are found, sometimes the abbreviated ones; thus, while a manuscript written in A.D. 1646 is dated in “the year 24” (for 4724), another, written in A.D. 1234 is dated in “the year 4300.” But, as in the Rājatarangini, so also in inscriptions, which range from A.D. 1204 onwards, only the abbreviated figures have hitherto been found. Essentially, therefore, the Saptarshi reckoning is a centennial reckoning, by suppressed or omitted hundreds, with its earlier centuries commencing in 2076, 2076 &c., and so on, and its later centuries commencing in A.D. 25, 125, 225, &c., on precisely the same lines with those according to which we may use, e.g. 98 to mean A.D. 1798 and 57 to mean A.D. 1857, and 9 to mean A.D. 1909. And the detailed difficulties attending the use of such a system for chronological purposes are obvious; isolated dates recorded in such a fashion cannot be allocated without some explicit clue to the centuries to which they belong. Fortunately, however, as regards Kashmir, we have the necessary guide in the facts that Kålhana recorded his own date in the Saka era as well as in this reckoning, and gave full historical details which enable us to determine unmistakably the equivalent of the first date in this reckoning cited by him, and to arrange with certainty the chronology presented by him from that time.

The belief underlying this reckoning according to the course of the Seven Rishis is traced back in India, as an astrological detail, to at least 6th century A.D. But the reckoning was first adopted for chronological purposes in Kashmir and at sometimes about A.D. 800, the first recorded date in it is one of 'the year 89,' meaning 889, A.D. 913–914, given by Kålhana. It was introduced into India between A.D. 925 and 1025 (Encyclopedia

"The beginning of the Saptarshi era is placed by the Kalshrians on Chaitra sud 1 of the twenty-fifth year of the Kaliyuga, and the twenty-fourth year, in which Kålhana wrote, is consequently the Saptarshi year 4224. For

| The distance between Kali 25 and the beginning of the Saka era | 3,154 |
| The distance between Saka samvat 1 and Kålhana's time | 1,070 |

Hence results a total of Saptarshi years: 4,224.

My authorities for placing the beginning of the Saptarshi era in Kali 25 are the following: First, P. Dayārām Jotai gave me the subjoined verse, the origin of which he did not know:

Kaler gatah śāyakṣaṇetra varshah saptarshivaryā śatīdram pradīvam prayatāh Lokohi samvatsarapatrikāyam saptarshīmūnam pravadanta saṁtaḥ

"When the years of the Kaliyuga marked by the 'arrows and the eyes' (i.e. the five and the two, or, as Indian dates have to be read backwards, 25) had elapsed, the most excellent Seven Rishis ascended to heaven. For in the calendar (used) in the world, the virtuous declare the computation of the Saptarshi, (years to begin from that point)."

Pandit Démodar explained the verse as I have done in the above translation, and added that each Saptarshi year began on Chaitra sud 1, and that its length was regulated by the customary mixing of the Chandra and Sastra mana.

The correctness of his statement is confirmed by a passage in P. Bhāebrām's Rājataranginiamgraḥa (No. 178), where the author says that the Saka year 1786 (A.D.
1864), in which he writes, corresponds to Kali 4065 and to Saptarshi or Laukika samvat 4040. One of the copyists, too, who copied the Dhvanīyataka (No. 256) for me in September 1875, gives in the colophon, as the date of his copy, the Saptarshi year 4061. These facts are sufficient to prove that P. Démodar's statement regarding the beginning of the

* The word lokā, 'in the world,' alludes to the appellation Lokakāla, Laukika samvatsara.

† Rājataranginiamgraḥa, fol. 4b, 1, 7 tatrādyā váke 1786 kaligato 4065 saptar-

Saptarshi era is not an invention of his own, but based on the general tradition of the country. I do not doubt for a moment that the calculation which throws the beginning of the Saptarshi era back to 3076 B.C is worth no more than that which fixes the beginning of the Kaliyuga in 5101 B.C. But it seems to me certain that it is much older than Kalhana’s time, because his equation 44 = 1978 agrees with it. It may therefore be safely used for reducing with exactness the Saptarshi years, months, and days mentioned in his work to years of the Christian era. The results which will be thus obtained will always closely agree with those gained by General Cunningham, who did use the right key.” Dr Buhler’s Kashmir Report pp 59 and 60.

Note—Mr Pargiter, reads “saptarṣayaṇas tadda Ṛṣye Pratipe rajñi val samam” and he translates it thus—The Great Bear was situated equally with regard to the lunar constellation Puya while Pratipa was king. At the end of the Andhras, who will be in the 27th century afterwards, the cycle repeats itself.

“In the circle of the lunar constellations, wherein the Great Bear revolves, and which contains 27 constellations in its circumference, the Great Bear remains 100 years in (conjoined with) each in turn” (40), (according to Pargiter)

This is the cycle of the Great Bear, and is remembered as being, according to divine reckoning, 6 divine months and 7 divine years. According to those constellations, divine time proceeds by means of the Great Bear (41a) (Pargiter)

The two front stars of the Great Bear, which are seen when risen at night, the lunar constellation which is seen situated equally between them in the sky, the Great Bear is to be known as conjoined with that constellation 100 years in the sky—42-43 (Pargiter)

This is the exposition of the conjunction of the lunar constellations and the Great Bear. The Great Bear was conjoined with the Maghās in Parikṣita’s time 100 years—44 (Pargiter)

The Brahmaṇas (the Seven Seers) will be in the 24th constellation 100 years (when) at the termination of the Andhras Pargiter—45

Note—The 24th constellation from Maghā counting retrograde is Chitra. According to this calculation the interval between Prīkṣit and the termination of Andhras is 2400 years. Subtracting 886, we get 1514, o, the interval between Nanda and Parikṣita. Or in round number the Great War took place 1500 years before Nanda’s time.

If, however, the 24th No in the order of reckoning the nakṣatras be taken, then the line of the Saptarṣiṣa will be in Satabhiṣa or 1400 years. Deducting 886 we get 514 the interval between Nanda and Parikṣita—evidently incorrect. But 886 is the interval between Nanda and the termination of the Andhras. If however we read Andhrakṣa instead of Andhras, and this is the reading of Brahmāṇa’s then it will mean, “at the commencement of the Andhras.” The Andhra dynasty lasted for 600 years or the interval between Nanda and the commencement of the Andhras was 880–860 = 276 years. Deducing 276 (instead of 88) from 1,400 we get 1,124 years, the interval between Parikṣit and Nanda. This figure is approximately correct, according to some texts.

† The use of the Saptarshi era in Kaśmir and the adjacent hill states, which continues even in the present day, has first been pointed out by General Cunningham.

The Evils of the Kali Age (Resumed)

Thenceforward all this world will fall upon very bad times. Men will be liars, greedy, and destitute of righteousness, affection and wealth. The religion of Śrutis and Smṛitis will become very lax, and so also will be destroyed the orders and castes—46

The people will be of mixed origin, weak in body and will be led astray and deluded. Brāhmaṇas will sacrifice for Śūdras (or will study under Śūdras) and Śūdras will take to teaching Mantras—47

Those Brāhmaṇas will adore such Śūdras anxious to acquire wealth from them (or anxious to get the meaning of the Mantras from them) And gradually there will be seen all the causes which go towards the removing a man from his own caste—48

Thus towards the end of the age, the few weaklings that will remain on earth will also go to extinction—49a

The duration of Kali

On that very day and in that very moment when Kṛṣṇa went to heaven, the Kali Yuga arrived on earth. Now listen to its duration from me. The wise say that its duration is 400,000 years—50

Together with four times eight (32) thousand years according to human calculation (i.e., 400,000 + 32,000 = 432,000). Or in other words, its duration is 1000 divine years together with the twilights (i.e., 1000 + 200 = 1200 divine years = 1200 × 360 = 432,000)—51

When the Kali Yuga comes to an end the Kṛta Yuga will again come—52a

The Aila and the Ikṣvāku dynasties have been described along with their branches. The dynasty of the Ikṣvākus (the Sūryavamśa) is remembered to have come to an end with Sumitra when Ikṣvāku Kṣatriyas will cease. The Aila Kṣatriyas (Chandā-vamśa) were contemporary with these (or the last of the Aila Kṣatriyas was Kṛṣṇa—the Vāyu,) so the knowers of the Somavamśa understand it—53.

Note. The text in verse 52 b is

It apparently gives no meaning. The translation follows the reading of the Vāyu:
All these are declared to be the glorious descendants of Vivasvat; those who are passed, those who exist now and those who will be in the future — 54

The Brāhmaṇas, the Kṣatriyas, the Vaiśyas and the Śūdras are remembered to exist in this Vaiśvasvata manvantara i.e., all are sons of Vaiśvasvata Manu. Thus ends the genealogy of dynasties — 55

A Prophecy

Devāpi the Paurava king, and Maru, a king of Ikṣvāku dynasty, are both existing in the village, Kalāpa, through the force of their great Yoga — 56

In the 29th Mahāyuga these two will be the leaders of Kṣatriyas and will restore Kṣatriyahood. Suvrachas the son of Manu (Mara?) will be the founder of the (future) Aikṣvāku line — 57

In the 29th Mahāyuga he will be the first founder of that dynasty. Similarly Satya, the son of Devāpi, will be the (first) king (and the founder) of the Ikṣvāku dynasty — 58

These two (Devāpi and Maru) will be the restorers of Kṣatriya chivalry, in the beginning of that Mahāyuga. Thus should be understood the characteristics of the dynasties in all the Yugas — 59

Even after the close of the Kali Yuga, the Seven Sages who continue to exist along with these two throughout the Kṛita Yuga, then will incarnate in the middle of the (future) Treta Yuga. They will take birth in order to be the seeds of Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas (of Brahmanc parentage) again. Thus at the end of the Puṣya asterism (when the Great Bear is in a line with that asterism) the Seven Sages, along with those kings (take birth on earth) for the sake of procreating children in every Yuga. Thus the Brāhmaṇas know the close relationship of the Kṣatriyas with the Brāhmaṇas (and how several Kṣatriya dynasties had Brāhmaṇa paternity) — 62

Thus at the close of each Manvantara, these (two) immortal Kṣatriyas and (seven) Brāhmaṇas, who cross over from one Yuga to another (in their full consciousness), are called Santānas in the śruti or founders of future human races. They become the origins of (the future) Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas — 63

The Seven Sages know thus the rise, and fall, and the longevity of these founders of dynasties, as well as the decline and rise of the dynasties. — 64
Thus in their due order the Aila and the Ikṣvāku kings take their birth in the Treta and come to an end in the Kali age — 65

Note — Thus in the Kṛita or Satya Yuga and up to the middle of Treta there exists no four-fold caste, or only one caste that of the fighters or warriors (Kṣatriyas who are the pioneers of emigration and open up new lands. It takes 4,200 + 1,500 = 5,500 years to settle fully and completely for a new race. After that the four-fold division takes place.

These kings will follow in due succession (through Treta and Dwāpara and Kali according to the characteristics of the age till the Manvantara comes to an end) — 66a

When Parashurāma, the son of Jamadagni, annihilated the Kṣatriyas, then the whole world became destitute of Kṣatriya-born world-rulers. They all belonged to mixed dynasties (Brāhmaṇ and Kṣatriyas or Ilā-and —Ikṣvāku kings) All the kings owed their origin to double paternity, Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas. I shall declare that now the cause of double dynastic paternity hear it from me — 67

The dynasties of Aila and Ikṣvāku are said to be the origin of all kings who belonged to a certain class (who ruled in dynastic succession), as well as other Kṣatriyas on earth who were not rulers — 68

The descendants of the Aila family were numerous, not so however the kings of the Ikṣvāku dynasty. They gave rise to full 100 famous dynasties — 69

Similarly the extent of the Bhoja dynasty was double that of the above, and double of the Bhojas were the other Kṣatriya dynasties, who spread on all quarters, and the Bhoja clan became divided into four branches — 70

Now those who are past and those who were their contemporaries together with their names I shall declare Listen to me — 71a

There will be 100 kings of the dynasty of Pratīvindhyas, 100 Nagas, 100 Hayas, 101 Dhārtarastras and 80 Janamejayas 100 in the family of Brahmadattas and 100 hero kings in the Kaurava family (or 100 Śiṅgi and Viśi kings or Śiṅgi and Karna kings) — 72

Then 100 were Pāṇchāla kings, 100 Kṛṣi-kusa kings, then 2000 Nipas and Śāśavindus — 73

All these were performers of sacrifices and all of them were givers of myriads of gold coins in feasts to the Brāhmaṇas. Thus hundreds and thousands of royal Rsi kings have passed away. They belonged to the family of Lord Vaivasvata Manu and they exist in the present day also. Their births and deaths are for the sake of the maintenance of the world — 74-75
APPENDIX III.

Even in one hundred years I cannot finish the recital of the descendants of these kings and the mutual co-relationship to each other.—76.

In the Vaivasvata Manvantara 27 Mahāyugas have passed away and the current one is the 28th Mahāyuga. Those Sūtras (the Holy Seeds) along with the Devas who are their companions are now to be declared. Listen to that.—77.

In the remaining portion of the Mahāyuga of the Vaivasvatamanvantara there will be (or there are existing) 43 Mahātmās.—78.

Thus have I declared to you fully and briefly the whole history and I cannot repeat it in its entirety on account of its being too large.—79.

I have declared all the Rājarṣis who have passed away along with the passing away of the Yugas, as well as the kings belonging to the dynasty of Yayāu and those belonging to the dynasties of the Lord of the Viśas.—80

All these illustrious ones have been declared to you. He who hears the recital of this history obtains all the seven worldy-blessings, so difficult of attainment here.—81

He gets long life, fame, wealth, heaven and progeny. By hearing and committing to memory this genealogy of kings, one verily goes to the highest heaven.—82

Here ends Chapter 273 dealing with the chronology of future kings.

NOTE

Brūhmāṇḍa III.—74, Verses 225, 226, et seq.

When the moon and the sun and the (constellation) Tisya and Brīhaspati shall come together in the same zodiacal sign, then may the Krita age be.—225.

This is the entire series of dynasties which has been declared to you in due order—the dynasties which have passed away, and those which exist now, and those which are in future.—226.

From the birth of Parikṣit up to the end of the inauguration of Mahānanda—this period is to be known as 1050 years.—227.

Similarly to speak of the duration which (elapsed) after Mahāpādama, eight hundred and thirty six years are remembered to be the interval—228.

This future interval of time is declared to be the year beginning with the end of the Andhras, and enumerated in the Bhāṣīs, by the Śrutasānti (versed in the Vedas) knowers of the Purāṇas.—229.

Note—336 years is therefore the interval beginning from the end of the Andhras to Mahāpādama reckoning backward,

(At the time of the birth) of Parikṣit the Seven Rāus had obtained (entered) them into the beginning of the hundred years in the constellation sacred to the Pitrīs (i.e., Maghā). (And after finishing their cycle) by 2700 years with the end of the Andhras, they (the Seven Rasis) commence again their future revolution—259.

In the entire circle consisting of the 27 lunar constellations, the Seven Seers remain for 100 years in each in turn—261.

This is the Cycle of the Seven Seers (consisting of 3700 human years) And reckoned in the terms of Divine years (360 human years equal to 1 Divine year), this period is equal to 6 divine months together with 7 divine years (i.e., 2700 divided by 360 equal to 13 divided by 3 equal to 7½)—259.

According to those (constellations) Divine time proceeds by means of the Seven Seers—228a.

The two front stars of the Seven Seers, which are seen in the northern region, the lunar constellation which is seen situated equally between them in the sky, the Seven Seers are to be known as conjoined with that constellation 100 years in the sky.—238b-239.

This is the length of the period of enjoyment of the (Seven) Seers with each lunar constellation.—239a.

The Seven Seers then yet dissipated, after enjoying for 100 years in the epoch of Parikṣit, (and moving on) they will be for hundred years in the 24th (lunar constellation) at the beginning of the epoch of the Andhara.—238b-239a.

Note.—The Andhra epoch commenced when the line of the Great Bear was in the 24th Nakṣatra or Ēstabhīśa.

Bhāgavata Purāṇa, XII, 11, 32-33

"From your birth (Parikṣit is addressed by Suka) to the inauguration of Nanda, 1115 years will elapse.

Of the Seven Rūgas two are first perceived rising in the sky, and the asterism which is observed to be, at night, even with the middle of those two stars is that with which the Rūgas are united, and they remain so during a hundred years of men. In your time, and at this moment, they are situated in Magha.

When the splendour of Viṣṇu, named Kṛṣṇa departed for heaven, then did the Kali age during which men delight in sin, invade the world. So long as he continued to touch the earth with his holy feet, so long the Kali age was unable to subdue the world.

When the Seven Rūgas were in Magha, the Kali age, comprising 1200 (divine) years (432,000 common years), begins, and, when, from Magha, they shall reach Purvārūpā, then will this Kali age attain its growth, under Nanda and his successors."

Viṣṇu Purāṇa, Book IV, Chap. XXIV.

As it is said — "When the sun and moon, and (the lunar asterism) Viṣṇa, and the planet Jupiter are in one mansion, the Kṛta age shall return."

Thus, most excellent Muni, the kings who are past, who are present, and who are to be, have been enumerated. From the birth of Parikṣit to the coronation of Nanda it is to be known that 1015 years have elapsed. When the two first stars of the seven Rūgas (the great Bear) rise in heavens, and some lunar asterism is seen at night at an equal distance between them, then the seven Rūgas continue stationary, in that conjunction, for a hundred years of men. At the birth of Parikṣit, they were in Magha, and the Kali age then commenced, which consists of 1200 (divine) years. When the portion of Viṣṇu (that had been born from Vāsudeva) returned to heaven, then the Kali age commenced As long as the earth was touched by his sacred feet, the Kali age could not affect it. As soon as the incarnation of the eternal Viṣṇu had departed, the son of Dharma, Yudhīśṭhira,—with his brethren, abdicating the sovereignty. Observing unpropitious portents, consequent upon Kṛṣṇa's disappearance, he placed Parīkṣit upon the throne. When the seven Rājas are in Purvāśītaka, then Nanda will begin to reign, and thenceforward the influence of the Kali will augment.

The day that Kṛṣṇa shall have departed from the earth will be the first of the Kali age, the duration of which you shall hear. It will continue for 80,000 years of mortals. After twelve hundred divine years shall have elapsed, the Kṛta age shall be renewed.

Note.—Interval between the Birth of Parīkṣit and the Accession of Nanda.

We have mentioned above that this important period the interval between Parīkṣit and Nanda is absolutely necessary to determine accurately the chronology of Indian History. The Purāṇas are not absolutely unanimous on this point. They, the most of them mention that this interval was 1015 years or 1050 years, and the Viṣṇu-Bhāgavata says that it was 1115 years. But most of these Purāṇas give also the aggregate periods of reigns of the dynasties. But the sum of these aggregates does not generally coincide with the figures given above. Thus the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, Bk IV, Ch 24, verse 22, says that from the birth of Parīkṣit to the coronation of Nanda 1015 years have elapsed. Yet according to the duration of the different intermediate dynasties as enumerated by it in Ch 23 and 24 the duration comes to 1500 years, namely:

| Magadha kings | 1000 years |
| Pradyota, &c | 188 years |
| Śisunāga, &c | 822 years |
| 1500 years |

Similarly though the Bhāgavata in Bk 12 Ch 2, verse 26, says that this interval is 1115 years, yet in the dynasties given by it the total comes up to a larger figure. This point struck the commentator, Śridharmā, and he says—"Vatsutasu Parīkṣit-Nandayon-antaram dvābhyam nyānām varṣāṇām sārdha-sahasram bhavati. Yataḥ Parīkṣit samākalam Māgadham Mājāram-ārabhyām Ripunjayatu tva nāṣṭa: rājān mahā sahasravatissnam bhokṣyanti-utkṣtam Navamaskandā. Ye Bhabrajadhābhūpāla bhāvyāh sahasravataśraṁm-śītataḥ param pañcha Pradyotanā sāgātrivesotecchām Śisunāgacca śa sathn̄yuttaraśata-trayaṁ bhokṣyanti prthilivim-iti atra-eva-uktavat".

As a matter of fact the interval between Parīkṣit and Nanda is 1500 years less 2 years, that is, 1498 years. Because beginning with Marjari, king of Magadha, who was contemporary of Parīkṣit, up to the end of Ripunjaya 50 kings will enjoy the earth for 1000 years has already been mentioned in the Purāṇa in its 9th Book in the following verses—"These Bahadratha kings of the future will endure for 1000 years, and after them the five Pradyotas will enjoy the earth for 198 years after whom the Śisunāgas will enjoy it for 800 years." Thus we have then the authority of Śridharmā for holding that 1500 years, or more accurately, 1498 years is the interval between Parīkṣit and Nanda. The great war therefore took place 1498 plus 423 years in all 1920 years B.C. according to Śridharmā.

21. Viśvajit (or, Viṣṇu), 35, d 970 B.C
22. Rīpuṣījaya (Aruṇājaya or Isuṇjaya), 50 d 920 B.C

Note — The last 16 kings ruled for 720 years Or, the entire 22 kings, 1000 years

The dynasty ended in 920 B.C The reading in one text of Mt. is that the reign of these sixteen kings lasted for 720 years —

"Vayoviṁśadhi kam teṣām rājyam cha data-saptakam", which means—(These 16 kings are to be known as the future Barhadrathas) and their kingdom will last 720 years

We take the reading 'vayo' instead of trayo, as suggested by Mr. Pargiter, because the aggregate period of the reigns, from Senājit to Rīpuṣījaya, comes up to 720 years, and thus corroborates this reading. Thus there is no reason to change वयो the reading given in Mss J to वयो। The manuscript appears to be correct. The reign did not last 723

The Maurya Dynasty.

Note.—The Matsya Purāṇa gives a very mutilated list of this family, as shown below—

1. Satadhanvan, 6
2. Bhradratha, 7
3. Asoka, 36
4. His grandson, 70
5. Daśaratha, 8
6. Sampratı or Saptati, 9

Then it adds “These ten Mauryas will enjoy the earth for 137 years.” It names only 6 kings, and the total of their reigns comes to only 136.

(2) The Vāyu, Bibliotheca Indica Edition, gives, however, the following list in Ch 37, v 425 et seq —

1. Chandragupta, 24 years
2. Bhadrasāra, 25 years
3. Asoka, 26 years
4. Kunāla, 8 years
5. Bandhupālita, 8 years
6. Indrapālita, 10 years
7. Devavarmā, 7 years
8. Satadhaba, 8 years
9. Bhradēya, 7 years

Then it adds “these nine kings should enjoy the earth for full 137 years,” but the total comes to 123.
Mr. Vincent Smith, in his chronological table of the Maurya dynasty, gives the same list, and then adds, "The names of the successors of Aśoka are taken from the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, omitting Suyādaśa, for the reasons given in the text. Other names are given in Jain books and the Buddhist Aśokavadāna. The Vāyu, which is one of the oldest of the Purāṇas, gives only nine names for the dynasty, as in brackets, and also states the duration of each reign. The approximate dates given are assigned accordingly, on the assumption that the reign of Aśoka lasted for about forty or forty-one years. Its duration, according to the Vāyu Purāṇa, was thirty-six, and, according to the Mahāvamsa, thirty-seven, years, both of which periods probably should be reckoned from the coronation. The Purāṇas agree in assigning 137 years to the Maurya dynasty, but the total of the lengths of reigns according to the Vāyu Purāṇa, is only 133. The difference of four years may be accounted for by the interval between the accession and coronation of Aśoka. For further details see Parzinger, "Dynasties of the Kali Age." The variant readings are numerous."

The Matsya Purāṇa, however, is incomplete and, moreover, it has misplaced verse 23, which ought to come after verse 24 and not before it. Therefore the Matsya list should stand thus —

1. Aśoka
2. His grandson
3. Dasaśratha
4. Sampratil
5. Satadhanva
6. Brihadratha

The names in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa are —
1. Chandragupta 74 years.
2. Vindusthara 25 "
3. Aśokavardhana 26 "
4. Suyādaśa (Kunāla) 8 "
5. Daśaratha (Bandhapālita) 8 years
6. Sangata (Indrapālita) 10 "
7. Satāsukaka 13 "
8. Somasvarman (Devavarman) 7 "
9. Satadhanvan (Satadhara) 8 "
10. Brihadratha (or Brihadāśva) 7 "

The names within brackets and the regnal periods given above are taken from the Vāyu P. The Viṣṇu Purāṇa ends by saying "these ten Mauryas will reign for 137 years." It is the only Purana that gives the correct ten names neither more nor less. The total of reigns (taken from Vāyu), comes up to 136 years.

</table>

The above comparative table requires a little explanation. The Visnu Purāṇa gives the names of ten kings, but not their separate regnal periods. It gives the total as ten kings, who ruled for 137 years. The Bhāgavata Purāṇa agrees with the Visnu, generally, but omits Dasaratha. It says at the end that there were 10 kings who ruled for 137 years. As it is exactly like Visnu it has not been shown in the above table. Brahmāṇḍa gives 9 kings, omitting Śāliśuka. It says at the end that these 9 kings ruled for 137 years. But the aggregate of the actual regnal periods comes up to 133 years. The Vāyu e names all the 10 kings, with two more, as given by Mr. Pargiter, but which are really misreadings. It gives the last king Bhadratha's reign as 87 years, which is evidently a mistake for 7 years. The table is given with these emendations. It also says at the end that these 9 kings reigned for 137 years, though the actual total comes up to 145 years. The "Vāyu generally" requires no explanation. The actual total here is 123 years.

Now, all the Purāṇas agree in giving 137 years as the total period of this dynasty. They agree also in giving the same regnal periods for the first three kings and the last three kings. It is only with regard to the middle three or four kings, that there is a difference of opinion among them. To reconcile this is not very easy. One may take it, however, as a fact that Asoka really reigned for 40 years and not 36. The difference is due to the fact that the 4 years between his coronation and accession have been omitted. Or, it may be explained on another ground, that Kunala or Suryaas, the son of Asoka, never actually reigned on account of his blindness. If 8 years of his alleged reign be deducted from 145 years, then the text of the Vayu becomes harmonized, and then the revised list would stand as follows—

1. Chandragupta 24 years (322-298 B.C.)
2. Bindusara 25 years (298-273 B.C.)
3. Asoka 36 years (273-237 B.C.)
4. Dasaratha 8 years (237-229 B.C.)
   (Bandhupalita)
5. Sampratipa 9 years (229-220 B.C.)
   (Sangata or Indrapalita)
6. Salisuka 13 years (220-207 B.C.)
7. Devadharma (Devavarman or Somasarma) 7 years (207-200 B.C.)
8. Satadhana 8 years (200-192 B.C.)
9. Bhadratha 7 years (192-185 B.C.)

Note — These thirty Andhra kings will enjoy the earth 460 years (Bd., 456). Or from 38 B.C. to 453 A.D.
It may be mentioned here that the Purāṇa states that Sūkra (Simuka) was the first Andhra king, who was the slayer of Sūdarṣmaṇa, the last of the Kanvas, in 28 BC. But from the evidence of coins it appears that Simuka reigned long before that period, not of course in Magadha, but in Andhra. The slayer of the last Kanvas was very likely one of the three kings, nos 11, 12, or 13 in the list of the Andhras. The reasons for differing in the Paurāṇic accounts may be found in Mr. Vincent Smith's The Early History of India, 3rd edition, pp 206-208.

We make only this short extract from page 207—"The Udayagiri or Rathigampha inscription of Kharvela, the Jain king of Kalinga, has been the subject of much discussion, and archaeologists used to believe erroneously that it was dated in the year 165 of the Maurya era. The latest and most authoritative account of the mutilated document is the abstract translation published by Prof. Luders in Sp Ind, vol. x, App., p 160. We learn that Kharvela, surnamed Mahā Meghavahana, the third of the Cēka dynasty of Kalinga, was anointed as Maharaj when twenty-four years of age, having been already Crown Prince (Yuvaraja) for nine years. In his second year he deified Sātakarni, by sending an army to the west. In his fifth year he repaired an aqueduct which had not been used for one hundred and ten years from the time of king Nanda, and in the same year harassed the king of Rājagṛha, i.e., of Magadha. In his twelfth year he watered his elephants in the Ganges, and compelled the king of Magadha to bow at his feet. In his fourteenth year he erected certain pillars.

"The reference to king Nanda gives the approximate date. The latest date for the last Nanda king, according to my chronology, is 222 BC. Deducting 105 we get 217 BC for the fifth year of Kharvela, and consequently 222 BC for his accession, some nine years after the close of Asoka's reign. The Andhra king alluded to can only be either Sātakarni, No. 8 of the Purāṇic list, who is commemorated by a defaced, but happily inscribed, relief image at Nanaghat, a pass leading from the Konkan to the ancient town of Junnar in the Poona District, Bombay (A & W I, vol. v, p 59).

"The synchronism of Sātakarni I with Kharvela proves conclusively that the Andhra dynasty cannot have begun with the death of the last Kanvas king. The date assigned to Sātakarni I is in full accord with the script of the Nanaghat inscriptions, which include similar records of the first and second Andhra kings, Simuka and Krisna (Luders, op cit., Nos 11, 18, 114, 1144). The king of Magadha whom Kharvela defeated was one of the later Mauryas, probably Salsanka (c. 228-211), in or about 212 BC."

APPENDIX VIII.

PAURĀNIK CHRONOLOGY

It is said that Indians have no history, and that they do not possess any historical instinct. This erroneous opinion about the Hindus, owes its origin to the fact, that the first literature to which the West came in contact was either the poetical or sacerdotal literature of India, in which one would not naturally expect much of historical knowledge. Though the Purānas were also before the public, yet, owing to their popular character, they never attracted much attention to the historical treasures buried in them. The literature of the Brāhmaṇas was always supplemented from the earliest times by the literature of the Kṣatriya Kings or the Court literature. Every prince, worth the name, had his court bard or Sāta or Māgadha, to commemorate the events of his reign and of his ancestors. These were compiled in Vamsābalis, which were popular with the public, though not of much interest to the sacerdotal class. The existence of these Vamsābalis or chronicles is proved, beyond doubt, by Kalhana in his Introduction to Rājatarāṅgini, wherein he says that he drew his materials from the Vamsābalis of Kāśmirian Kings extending over a period of 3,000 years. Now, where historic periods were of such great lengths as thousands of years, it was necessary to fix an epoch in which calculation would proceed not by years or decades, but by centuries. One such fixed epoch was already in existence in the astronomical era, called the beginning of the Kali age, which was fixed on astronomical grounds at a point 3,100 years B.C. It was, however, not convenient for historical purposes, as it was used mostly by astronomers and by sacerdotal classes. Moreover, it was not an historical era, because its starting point was not any memorable historical event. Its epoch depended on an event which took place in the heaven, in the conjunction of certain planets observable only by the initiates in astronomy. It was, therefore, necessary to fix the popular epoch in some historical event, which was well-known to the public and even to the ignorant masses, and which was preserved in legends and traditions of all Hindu nations throughout India. That memorable event was the battle of Mahābhārata, between the Kauravas and Pāṇḍavas which lasted for eighteen days. After the end of this battle, which was short but sharp, Yudhīṣṭhira was anointed as King. And, it was during this battle, that, Utārā, the wife of Abhimanyu, son of Arjuna, gave birth to a still-born child after six months' gestation, owing to the shock she received on hearing the sad news of her husband's death who had been killed by foul means, by the combination of seven chiefs against him. This tragic death of Abhimanyu was the subject of popular legend with the Hindus. Thus, these two important events—the still-born birth of Pariksit—who was resuscitated by the divine powers of SRI Kripa, and the coronation of Yudhishtira, were naturally most appropriate for fixing the starting point of the historical epoch. This epoch, ia, therefore, called the Laukika or the secular epoch, to distinguish it from the religious or astronomical epoch. This starting point is, indifferently, called the epoch of the birth of Pariksit, or the epoch of the coronation of Yudhishtira.

When was this epoch really started, it is not easy to determine, and Varaahamihira, who flourished in the sixth century, A.D., in his Bhat Samhita says, that this Saptarshi or Laukika era was noted by an astronomer before him, called Garga. This conventional era supposed that Saptarshis were in the Magha asterism, on the date of the coronation of Yudhishtira which coincided with the birth of Pariksit. The theory is that the Saptaras slowly move through the asterisms at the rate of 8 minutes of the arc of a circle in one year, thus completing one asterism in a century, or, the total circle of the 27 asterisms in 2,700 years. Thus, in this conventional method, was started a convenient mode of indicating large times. The asterisms being 27 in number—each 27th part of a circle represented a century. Thus, \( \frac{270^0}{8} \), or, \( \frac{40^0}{5} \) degrees, or, \( \frac{40 \times 60}{5} \) minutes = 800 minutes. An asterism being equal to a hundred years, thus, a part of a circle measuring 8 minutes becomes equal to one year. This was a brief and convenient method of indicating years in an abbreviated way. Each hundredth part of an asterism, called an amsa, or a part, represented a year. So, if one said, 24th amsa of Purva Phalguni, it would mean that the full asterism of Magha was passed, and 24th year in Purva Phalguni was the time indicated, or, in other words, 124 S E (Saptarshi or secular era). Similarly, 24th amsa of Revati, will mean 1,724 secular era. This Saptarshi era is the historical era of the Hindus. The commentator of Varaahamihira, named, Bhattotpala, quoting Garga, gives the following rule for converting any Saka era into Saptarshi era. He says—

"Add 2,526 to the Saka era, and divide it by 100, the quotient will represent the number of asterisms fully crossed by the Saptarshis, and the remainder will be the number of years spent in the asterism in that century. This remainder, deducting from 100, will represent the number of years still remaining up to the end of the century."
A want of knowledge of this rule led to curious interpretation of the following verse of the Vāyu Purāṇa —

(Verse)

(Bibliotheca Indica Series Vol II, Ch 37 V 417)

One such curious explanation is, that it means that in the 24th year of the century, in the commencement of which the Andhra dynasty was found reigning, that dynasty will come to an end, and, after finishing that century, a new cycle of 2,700 years will commence. Remembering that the Saptarṣi cycle begins with the first point or Amśa of Advāni and ends with the last point or Amśa of Revati, which is the last of the 27th asterisms, for Abhijit is never counted, it means that the Andhra dynasty came to an end when the line of the Saptarṣis was in the 24th Amśa of Revati. Therefore, from the date of the coronation of Yudhīśṭhira or the birth of Parīkṣit, both referring to the same epoch or time, until the end of the Andhra reign, the Saptarṣis travelled through the following asterisms in their due order: Magha, Paṛva Phālguni, Uttar Phālguni, &c., up to Revati, 24 points or Amśas, or 1,724 years, after the birth of Parīkṣit, which we have previously fixed at 1,920 BC. This Saptarṣi calculation, therefore, is a check on that calculation, for, according to it, 1,724 years elapsed after Parīkṣit’s birth. According to our calculation, the Andhra dynasty came to an end in 414 AD or 1920 + 414 = 2,334 years after Parīkṣit’s birth. The difference, between these two calculations, is, therefore, a very large one.

How is this to be reconciled?

This can be done by applying the rule given above. The Andhra dynasty came to an end in 414 AD, corresponding to 414—78 = 336 Saka Era. Add to this 2,526, and we get 2,862, which means that one complete circle of 27 asterisms was made, and the first asterism, namely, Advāni, was also crossed, and the Saptarṣis were in the second asterism, where they had passed 62 years already, for 2,862 means one full revolution of 2,700 years, and 162 years over and above it. The correct interpretation of this verse, therefore, is that at the time of the end of the Andhra dynasty, the line of the Saptarṣis was in the 24th asterism calculated from Magha. In other words, that 24 centuries had elapsed between the birth of Parīkṣit and the end of the Andhras in 414 AD. This would thus give the date of the birth of Parīkṣit as 19 centuries before Christ.
Kṣatriyas, the progenitors of the Brāhmaṇas — Another startling statement made by the Matsya Purāṇa (Ch. 273 V 57 et seq.) is that in the next cycle (Mahāyuga) the progenitors of the human race will be the two great yogis—both Kṣatriyas—named Devāpi and Maru, who are still existing in their physical bodies in the village, Kalīpā. From them will arise the future Solar and Lunar dynasties. Throughout the Satya Yuga, all the people of the earth will be Kṣatriyas, (or fighters and warriors). In other words, the beginning of every new race, is with Kṣatriyas who go to a new country, colonise it, and, settling there, start a new civilization. It is in the middle of the Tretā Yuga, that the seven Rājas take their birth in these Kṣatriya families, and start the Brāhmaṇa class, when, theocracy begins. Something like this happened in the present cycle also. The history of the Paurāvas, given in this Purāṇa, as well as in others, shows clearly that many Brāhmaṇas clans had Kṣatriya origin. This will appear clear from the genealogical table of the Paurāvas given in a separate appendix. The Matsya Purāṇa uses the term Brāhma—Kṣatriya generally in this sense of Brāhmaṇas having a Kṣatriya origin, and not that of Brāhmaṇas who have become Kṣatriyas as given by Mr. V. Smith in his history 3rd Ed., pages 419—420.

As a matter of fact, most of the Brāhmaṇas are the spiritual descendants of Kṣatriyas. They learnt the Brahma Vidyā (Theosophy) from the Kṣatriyas, as the Upaniṣads distinctly declare it. The daily prayer which they recite—the noble Gāyatri—owes its enunciation to the Kṣatriya prince, Vidvāmitra. The Matsya Purāṇa, therefore, states a natural law of the growth of civilization, namely, that new races begin with warriors, and that the intellectual's, that is Brāhmaṇas, come after the age of the warriors, namely, in the middle of the Tretā. It is hinted in the Māṇḍukya Upaniṣad II 1, also that the Brāhmaṇism arose in the Tretā Yuga.

In this connection, it should be remembered that the four Yugas, for historical purposes, should not be confounded with the astronomical Yugas. The four historical Yugas are —

1. The Kṣatriya Yuga, or the Warrior age
2. The Brāhmaṇa Yuga, or the Intellectual age
3. The Vaśya Yuga, or the Commercial or the Capitalist's age.
4. The Śūdra Yuga, or the age of Laborers.

These distinct ages may have definite periods during which they flourish, but about the length of which we have found no distinct statement in the Purāṇas. As the astronomical ages are based upon divine years, one year being equal to 360 human years, so, by analogy, we may come to the following periods —

1. The Labour Age, 1,200 years
2. The Capitalist’s Age, 2,400 years
3. The Intellectual Age, 3,600 years
4. The Military Age, 4,800 years
Total life of a race, 12,000 years

If this surmise of ours be correct, the Aryan civilization will come to an end after it has flourished on Earth for twelve thousand years, and the post-Aryan civilization, the seed of which has already been sown, will last the same number of years.

That the four ages were not always astronomical, even in our Hindu books, will be found borne out from the statement as quoted by Mr. Bentley in the Asiatic Researches, and as is reproduced in this Appendix, and which shows considerably smaller number of years for each Yuga, than the astronomical figure 4,32,000 and its multiples.

Manus and Manvantaras

Constant Reference is made in the Purānas to Manus and Manvantaras. It is desirable, therefore, to have a general idea about Indian cosmic chronology. A universe comes to an existence by the birth of a Brahma, from the cosmic egg, called Brahmadā. Our present universe came into existence from our Brahma, called the Chaturmukha, or the four-faced. There are other universes which owe their life to other Brahmas, having larger number of faces. The life of a Brahma consists of a hundred years. 50 such years of his life have passed. We are in the 1st day of his fifty-first year. The year consists of 360 days or 12 months. Each month consists of 30 days. Each day is called a Kalpa. Thus a month consists of 30 Kalpas. A different name is given for every one of these 30 Kalpas, or days of a month of Brahma. They are given below —

Each Kalpa consists of 1,000 chaturyugas or Mahāyugas, and each Mahāyuga consists of 4 minor yugas, called—

1. Kṛta or Satya yuga consisting of 4n
2. Tretā
3. Dwāpara
4. Kali

Total

where n is equal to 432,000 human years Thus a Mahāyuga consists of the following human years —

1. Satya yuga
2. Tretā yuga
3. Dwāpara yuga
4. Kali yuga

Total

A kalpa has 1,000 such Mahāyugas, or 432 × 100

A kalpa is also divided into 14 Manvantaras Each Manvantara, therefore, consists of 1,000 divided by 14 Mahāyugas Each Manvantara therefore has 71 odd Mahāyugas

The names of these 14 Manus are —

1. Svayambhu
2. Svarochisa
3. Autamiya
4. Tamasa
5. Raivata
6. Chakravata
7. Vaivasvata
8. Savarnya
9. Ranyakya
10. Bhanuya
11. Merusavarnya
12. Rita
13. Ritadhama
14. Visvakrsna

We are in the 7th or Vaivasvata Manvantara Of the 71 odd Mahāyugas, of which each Manvantara consists, we are in the 28th Mahāyuga We are, therefore, in the 28th Kaliyuga When this Kaliyuga will expire, the 29th Mahāyuga of Vaivasvata Manvantara will commence

A different system of yugas prevailed before this as mentioned by Mr. Bentley, as given below

The Ten Avatāras. See also p 125 of the of English translation of the Matsya Purāṇa

The Matsya Purāṇa gives a different list of the ten Avatāras See p 138 Each Avatāra or king is always accompanied by the Avatāra of a priest The king and his priest are thus the two founders of

In addition to these, there were others, as at page 126, viz., (1) Varāha, (2) Indra, (3) again Indra, (4) Śiva, (5) Śiva, (6) Vritrāri, etc.

We have mentioned above that a kalpa or a day of Brahmā consists of 1,000 Mahāyugas. We are in the Varāha Kalpa, which is the 26th day of the month of Brahmā. In this Varāha Kalpa, six Manvantaras have already passed away and seven more are in future, when this Kalpa will come to an end, and the next Kalpa called, Varāja, will commence. In chapter 9, verse 37 of the Matsya Purāṇa we find that 994 yugas have already elapsed.

Two ancient systems of Yugas

Most of the Eastern nations, and the Hindus in particular, appear to have employed, from time immemorial, artificial systems, not only in astronomy, but also for chronological purposes. Therefore, to form a just idea of the Hindu history and its antiquity, a knowledge of these systems, and of the various changes that have taken place from time to time, is absolutely necessary.

Two of the most ancient Hindu systems now known, and which in early times were applied to the purposes of chronology, are contained in an astronomical work entitled the Gṛha Māṇḍura. This work is extremely valuable, as it enables us to fix, with precision, the real periods of Hindu history, with their respective durations, and to show from them the alterations that have since taken place by the introduction of new systems.

The first system mentioned in this work consisted of 240,000 years, which was called the Kalpa. — This period was divided into Manvantaras and Yugas, as follows:

Hence it appears that the Kali Yuga, of the 67th Mahā Yuga, of the 7th Manwantara of this system, ended 767 years before the era of Vikramaditya, or 764 years before Christ—Therefore

- The Satya Yuga, or golden age, began B.C. 8184
- The Trātā Yuga, or silver age, 2204
- The Dwāpara Yuga, or brazen age, 1484
- The Kali Yuga, or iron age, 764, and ended.

Making in all 2400 years

During the first period of 960 years, called the golden age, the Hindus have no real history, the whole being fabulous, except what relates to the flood, which is allegorically represented by the fish incarnation.

With the second period, or silver age, the Hindu empire commences, under the Solar and Lunar dynasties, and from Buddha, the son of Sōma, the first of the Lunar line, they reckon about fifty reigns down to the end of the Dwāpara, which make, at an average, twenty-four years to a reign.

Towards the close of the fourth period, this system appears to have been laid aside, as the repeating the same names over again, would, in time, cause a confusion in history.

The next system mentioned in the Graha Munjari, consisted of 35760000 years, which was called the term of Brahmā's life. This period is divided and subdivided in the following manner:

A Kalpa is called a day of Brahmā, which in this system contains 5000 years, and his night is of the same length, 5000.

A day and night therefore, 10000.

50 of such days and nights make a month, 800000.

And 12 such months a year, 9600000.

And 167 such years and eight months make the full period of Brahmā's life, 35760000.

The Kalpa, or day of Brahmā, is divided into Manwantaras and Yugas, in the following manner:

* The Trātā and Dwāpara together make 1200 years, which, divided by 50, give 24 years to a reign. It is somewhat remarkable, that the principal Eastern nations date the commencement of their empires from nearly the same time. Thus we find the Chinese empire began under the dynasty of Hisa, according to Playfair, B.C. 2207.

† This Yuga of five years is to be met with in many books.
PAURANIK CHRONOLOGY.

16 such Manwantaras, ... 4096
Which with a Satya at the beginning, ... 2
Make a Kalpa, or day of Brahma, ... 5000 years

The years expired of this system, at the beginning of the Satya, or golden age of the former system, were, 212560000
Add thence to the Christian era 8164
Total years expired at the Christian era, 22072164
After 185798586 years had been expired of Brahma's life, he, for the first time, created the Earth, and ordained that, at the end of every Kalpa, or 5000 years, it should be destroyed, and again reproduced
Therefore, from the years elapsed, 212585164
Take the years at the first creation, 187798288
Remain, 18755878

The years from the first creation to the Christian era— which being divided by 5000, the quotient will be the number of times the world has been destroyed and created, and the remainder will show the years expired since the last creation

Thus \[ \frac{18755878}{5000} = 3753 \] times destroyed and created, and 8878 years from the last creation to the Christian era— Now since there are 387 years in each Manwantara, we have the date of the commencement of each as follow

The first Manwantara B.C. 3878 years
The second 8521
The third, 8164
The fourth, 2507
The fifth, 2450
The sixth, 2098
The seventh, 1788
The eighth, 1870
The ninth, 1073
The tenth, 685
The eleventh, 808
The twelfth, A.D. 49
The thirteenth, 408
The fourteenth, 768
and ended, 1120

Making in all about 6000 years, with the Samski of two years

Having thus exhibited the periods of ancient history, according to both systems, the annexed table will now show, at one view, the commencement of each period, by which the corresponding times in each system may be more easily seen and understood

By this table it will appear, that the Satya, or golden age, as we may call it, of the first system, began on the same year that the third Manwantara of the second system did, that is, the year before Christ 4164 And that the ninth Manwantara, of the second system, began the year B.C. 1022, only eighteen years after the commencement of the Kali, or iron age, of the first system

The Saptarshi-Era (Colebrooke, As Re, Vol IX)

I have purposely reserved for separate consideration the seven Rishi, who give name to seven stars in Ursa Major, not only because their positions are not stated by Brahmagupta, Bhaskara, and the Suryasiddhanta but also because the authors, who give their positions, ascribe to them a particular motion, or variation of longitude, different from other stars, and apparently unconnected with the procession of the equinoxes.

Varāha Mihira has a chapter in the Varāhaisanhitā expressly on the subject of this supposed motion of the Rṣiś. He begins by announcing the intention of stating their revolution conformably with the doctrine of Vṛiddha Garga, and proceeds as follows: "When king Yudhiṣṭhira ruled the earth, the Manśas were in Magha, and the period of the era of that king is 2526 years. They remain for a hundred years in each asterism, being connected with that particular Nakṣatra, to which, when it rises in the east, the line of their rising is directed."

The commentator, Bhattotpala, supports the text of his author by quotations from Vṛiddha Garga and Kāyapa: "At the junction of the Kali and Dwāpara" ages, says Garga, "the virtuous sages, who delight in protecting the people, stood at the asterism, over which the Pitrīs preside. That is at Magha. "The mighty sages," says Kāyapa, "abide during a hundred years in each asterism, attended by the virtuous Arundhāti."

The author next states the relative situation of the seven Rṣis, with Arundhāti near her husband, Vasiṣṭha, and the remainder of the Chapter is devoted to astrology.

The revolution of the seven Rṣis, and its periods, are noticed in Purāṇas. The following passage is from the Sri Bhāgavata:

"From your birth (Parīkṣit is addressed by Śūdra) to the inauguration of Nanda, 1116 years will elapse.

"Of the seven Rṣis, two are first perceived, rising in the sky, and the asterism, which is observed to be at night even with the middle of those stars, is that, with which the Rṣis are united, and they remain so during a hundred years of men. In your time, and at this moment, they are situated in Magha.

"When the splendour of Visṇu, named Kṛṣṇa, departed for heaven, then did the Kali age, during which men delight in sin, invade the world. So long as he continued to touch the earth with his holy foot, so long the Kali age was unable to subdue the world.

"When the seven Rṣis were in Magha, the Kali age, comprising 1200 [divine] years, began, and when, from Magha, they shall reach Purvāshādha, then will this Kali age attain its growth under Nanda and his successors."

The commentator Sridhāra Swāmi remarks, that the constellation, consisting of seven stars, is in the form of a wheeled carriage. Marichi, he observes, is at the extremity, and next to him, Vasistha, in the arched part of the yoke, and beyond him Angiras next to whom are four stars in a quadrangle. Atri at the north-east corner, south of him, Pulasiya, next to whom is Pulaha, and Kratu is north of the last. Such being their relative position, the two stars, which rise first, are Pulaha and Kratu, and whichever asterism, is in a line south from the middle of those stars, is that with which the seven Rṣis are united, and they so remain for 100 years.

According to a different reading noticed by the commentator, the concluding hemistich signifies "they constantly rise in the north-east, together with Arundhāti."

† Book 12, C 3.
‡ 432600 common years.
A similar passage is found in the Vīṇa Purāṇa,* and a similar exposition of it is given by the commentator, Ratnasāgarha, but the period, there stated to elapse between the birth of Parākṣit and the inauguration of Nanda, is 1016 years only.

The Matya Purāṇ conveys a passage to the like effect, but allows 1050 years from the birth of Parākṣit to the inauguration of Tabāpādana, and the seven Rishis are stated as being in a line with the constellation sacred to Kriśna (Kritika), 986 years later, in the time of the Andhrā kings.

In the Brahmi siddhānta of Sākyāya, denominated from its reputed author, Sākyāya sanhitā, the supposed motion of the seven Rishis is thus noticed: "At the commencement of the yuga, Kratu was near the star sacred to Viṣṇu (Gravanā), at the beginning of the asterism. Three degrees east of him, was Pulaha, and Pulasta, at ten degrees from this, Atri followed at three degrees from the last; and Angiras, at eight degrees from him, next came Vasuṭha, at the distance of seven degrees, and lastly Marichi at ten. Their motions are eight lippas (minutes) in a year. Their distances from the ecliptic, north, were respectively 55', 50', 50', 56', 57', 60', and 60'. For, moving in the north into different positions, the sages employ 2700 years in revolving through the assemblage of asterisms and hence their positions may be easily known at any particular time."

Lalla, cited by Muniṣvara in his gloss on the Siromani, says: "If the number of years of the Kali age, less fourteen, be divided by 100, the quotient, as the wise declare, shows the asterisms traversed by Marichi and other celestial sages, beginning from the asterism of Vṛuṇchi (Brahma).

Here Lalla is generally understood to mean Rohini, which is sacred to Prajāpati (or Brahman). But Muniṣvara has remarked, in another place, that Lalla may intend Abhijit which is sacred to Īḷa or Brahma, and consequently may mean Gravanā, of which Abhijit forms a part and thus Lalla and Sākyāya may be reconciled.

Most of the commentators on the Śrīya siddhānta and Siromani are silent on the subject of the seven Rishis. But Nrisinha, in his Vartaṇa to the Viṣṇa Bhāṣya, or gloss on the Siromani, quotes and expounds the Śrīya sanhitā, and rejects Varaha's rule of computation, as disagreeing with Purānas Muniṣvara, in his commentary on the Siromani, cites some of the passages above noticed, and remarks, that Visākha has omitted this topic on account of contradictory opinions concerning it, and because it is of no great use.

The same author, in his own compilation entitled Siddhānta Sarvabhauma, has entered more fully into this subject. He observes, that the seven Rishis are not, like other stars, attached by spikes to the solid ring of the ecliptic, but revolve in small circles round the northern pole of the ecliptic, moving by their own power in the etherial sphere above Saturn, but below the sphere of the stars. He places the Rishis in the same relative positions, which Sākyāya had assigned to them, states in other terms the same distances from the ecliptic, and the same annual motion; and directs their place to be computed by deducting 800 from the years of the Kali age, doubling the remainder and dividing by fifteen the quotient, in degrees, is divided by 30, to reduce it into signs. Muniṣvara supports this mode of calculation on the authority of Sākyāya, against Varāhamihira and Lalla, and affirms, that it agrees with the phenomena, as observable at the period of his compilation. It appears, however, to be a correction of Sākyāya's rule.

Kamalākara, in the Tatwāviveka, notices the opinion delivered in the Siddhānta Sarvabhauma, but observes, that no such motion of the stars is perceptible. Remarking,

* Part 4 Ch 23 v 32 &c
† Prasūna 1 ch 2
however, that the authority of the Purānas and Sānhitās, which affirm their revolution, is incontrovertible, he reconciles faith and experience by saying, that the stars themselves are fixed; but the seven Rishis are invisible deities, who perform the stated revolution in the period specified.

If Ācāryāka’s notion be adopted, no difficulty remains. Yet it can hardly be supposed, that Varāha-mihira and Lalla intended to describe revolutions of invisible beings. If then it be allowed, that they have attributed to the stars themselves an imaginary revolution grounded on an erroneous theory, a probable inference may be thence drawn, as to the period when those authors lived, provided one position be conceded, namely, that the rules, stated by them, gave a result not grossly wrong at the respective periods when they wrote. Indeed, it can scarcely be supposed, that authors, who, like the celebrated astronomers in question, were not mere compilers and transcribers, should have exhibited rules of computation, which did not approach to the truth, at the very period when they were proposed.

If this reasoning be admitted, it would follow, that Varāha-mihira composed the Varah mañhita about 2800 years after the period assigned by him to the commencement of the reign of Yudhīṣṭhīra, or near the close of the third century after the expiration of Yudhīṣṭhīra’s era, as defined by him. For the circle of declination passing between Kṛṣṇa and Polaha (the two first of the seven Rishis), and cutting the equinoctial plane only 2° short of the beginning of Magha, was the solstitial colure, when the equinox was near the beginning of Krittika, and such probably was the reason of that line being noticed by ancient Hindu astronomers. It agrees with the solstitial colure on the sphere of Budoxus, as described by Hipparchus. A similar circle of declination, passing between the same stars, intersected the ecliptic at the beginning of Magha, when the solstitial colure was at the middle of Asleṣa, and a like circle passed through the next asterism, when the equinox corresponded with the first point of Magha. An astronomer of that period, if he were apprised of the position assigned to the same stars by Garga reputed to have been the priest of Kṛṣṇa and the Pandus, might conclude with Varāha-mihira, that one revolution had been completed, and that the stars had passed through one Nakṣatra of the second revolution. In corroboration of this inference respecting the age of Varāha-mihira’s astrological treatise, it may be added, that he is cited by name in the Panchastara, the original of the fables of Pipay, which were translated for Nubhirvān more than 1200 years ago.†

The theory being wholly unfounded, Varāha-mihira’s rule of computation soon ceased to agree with the phenomena, and other rules have been successively introduced by different authors, as Lalla, Naksha and, lastly, Manisvara, whose rule, devised less than two hundred years ago, does not yet grossly betray its insufficiency.

This pretended revolution of the stars of Ursa Major is connected with two remarkable epochs in Indian chronology—the commencement of the Kali yuga, or sinful, * Hipparchus tells us, that Budoxus drew the colure of the solstices, through the middle of the Great Bear, and the middle of Cancer, and the neck of Hydra, and the star between the poop and mast of Argo, and the tail of the South Fish, and through the middle of Capricorn, and of Sagittarius, and through the neck and right-wing of the Swan, and the left-hand of Cepheus, and that he drew the equinoctial colure through the left-hand of Arotophylax, and along the middle of his body, and cross the middle of Cheles, and through the right-hand and fore-knee of the Centaur; and through the fixture of Britannus and head of Cetus, and the back of Arce across, and through the head and right-hand of Perseus. age, in the reign of Yudhishthira, and its prevalence, on the failure of the succession of Kshatria princes, and establishment of a different dynasty, 1015 years after the birth of Parashurama, according to the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, or 1115 years, according to the Bhāgavata; but 1498 years, if a correction, which has been proposed by Sridhara Svamī and some other commentators, be admitted. The subject has been already noticed by Capt. Wilford in his essay on Vikramaditya, and it is, therefore, unnecessary to enlarge upon it in this place.

Śrīśā CHANDRA VIDYĀRṆAVA.
APPENDIX IX.

PAURÂNIK GEOGRAPHY

Another subject, which the present part treats of, is about geography and cosmography or Bhuvanskola. The last few chapters of this part treat exclusively of this subject. If the literal sense of the verses be taken, the whole subject is open to the strictures passed upon it by unfriendly critics of Hindu scriptures. There are certainly no seas of "milk" or of "honey" and "wine" on this earth, as explored by the labours of the geographers. No more are there lions and eagles, bears and porpoises, chairs and tables in the starry firmament, as revealed by the telescope. But astronomers are never confounded with mythologists when they speak of the constellations of the ram and the bull, the crab and the goat, of the fish and the water-jar. May not therefore the Hindu Paurâns be credited with common-sense, when they speak of the seas of milk and honey, of sugar and wine? May not these be merely technical names of certain seas and oceans, like the Red Sea and Black Sea of the modern geographers? The latter are certainly not flowing with blood or with ink. Taking this rational view of the Paurânik geography, Col. Wilford tried to identify the seas and rivers, more than a hundred years ago. No doubt some of his identifications may appear to be fanciful, but a large mass of them were based upon traditions preserved by the Pandits of Benares, who communicated them to him. Some of his maps published in the volumes of the Asiatic Researches are reproduced here.

It may be objected, and rightly objected, that the figures dealing with the size of the earth are preposterous. The Hindu astronomers certainly knew the true size of the earth, and its diurnal motion on its axis, and on its being suspended in space by its own force and that it does not rest on some mythological tortoise or elephants of quarters, as will appear from the extract from Mr. Colebrooke's essays given elsewhere.

But are these figures really preposterous? Does the word "Earth" really mean this earth only, or is it not a symbol for the whole solar system, and do not the vast figures given in the Purânas represent the distances between the earth and the other planets? or, may it not be that the seven dwipas mentioned in the Purânas are, what the Modern Mystics profess to have seen, the seven spheres which surround this earth as a nucleus? One such sphere we know, namely, the atmosphere. The other spheres consist of still more rarified matters, represented by the words "milk" and "honey" "sugar" and "wine," &c The spiritualists and mystics affirm the existence of such spheres surrounding our earth, in which dwell beings of different orders of existence, than those on earth. These beings are certainly not incarnate, like terrestrial beings, but their existence cannot now be denied, after the researches of the Psychical Society, and the writings of scientific men like Crookes and Lodge. Man passes a very large portion of his disincarnate life in these spheres or dvipas, before his re-birth on earth.

Whenever the Purânas speak of the earth in general terms, it is not always to be taken as co-extensive with the physical earth. The latter they always denoted by the word Bhāratavarsa or the region of gravity ("Bhārata" the same word etymologically as the English word burden or weight). The other Varās are spiritual and beyond the region of Bhārata of gravity. It is only Bhāratavarsa where souls do acquire good or bad karmas, and therefore it is called karmabhūmi or the land of responsible actions. The other "lands" are not karmabhūmi but bhogabhūmi or the land of enjoyment and suffering, where the soul, after death, as a general rule, reaps the fruits of its actions done on earth, and where it does not generate any new karmas. When the force of the accumulated karmas is exhausted, the soul falls down from the higher regions to gather a fresh store of karmas on earth. In this mystic view, the Śvetadvipa or the White Island is the highest sphere, or the seventh heaven, where the Lord himself dwells, and which the purest souls only can reach.

As regards the ordinary Bhāratavarsa, it certainly means India, and its mountains and rivers, as given in the Purānas have been ably identified, to a very large extent, in his edition of the Markandeya Purāṇa, by Mr. Pargiter to whom the Hindu community is deeply indebted for his sympathetic treatment of the Purāṇas.

The attention of the readers may also be drawn to the Theory of Great Men as expounded by the Purāṇas and Hindu law-books as Yājñavalkya Smṛti. The modern view is that great men and geniuses are products of their age, but opposed to this is the Pauranic theory that these are the creators of their age. All great men have been divided by the Purāṇas into two great classes, men of actions and men of contemplation, grihimahāhina and urddharetas, men who look upon their family life as a sacred duty done for the sake of humanity, and the celibates who devote the whole of their physical life to the uplift of humanity in different sphere of activity. The number of these souls, whether householders or celibates, is limited. They are 88,000 in number in each class. They ordinarily dwell in higher planes, but a stream of them, without any break, flows down on this earth and incarnates as kings, warriors, statesmen, poets, artists, sages and saints. When the first class of souls comes down on earth, they act like ordinary men, with all human weaknesses and frailties, but with extraordinary powers in some particular department of human activity. The second class of souls, the celibate souls are born as great spiritual teachers, the Bhaktas and the Bhagavatas. The same idea is expressed in the verses 186 et seq. of the Yajnavalka, Prayashchita Adhyaaya, with the commentary of Vijñanesvara which elucidate the somewhat brief account of these two classes of souls, as given in the Matsya Ch 124.

EXPLANATION OF FIGURES 1 to 10 *

Colonel Wilford published in the Asiatic Researches a series of papers on the Sacred Isles in the West. These were illustrated with maps which are reproduced on the plate facing this page. Regarding the map-making of the Hindus, he wrote —

"Besides geographical tracts, the Hindus have also maps of the world, both according to the system of the Pauranika, and of the astronomers the latter are very common. They have also maps of India, and of particular districts, in which latitudes and longitudes are entirely out of question, and they never make use of a scale of equal parts. The sea shores, rivers, and ranges of mountains, are represented in general by straight lines. The best map of this sort I ever saw, was one of the kingdom of Nepal, presented to Mr. Hastings. It was about four feet long, and two and a half broad, of paste board, and the mountains raised about an inch above the surface, with trees painted all round. The roads were represented by a red line, and the rivers with a blue one. The various ranges were very distinct, with the narrow passes through them in short, it wanted but a scale. The valley of Nepal was accurately delineated but toward the borders of the map, everything was crowded, and in confusion."

Colonel Wilford's explanation of the figures on the plate is reproduced below.

No 1, represents the worldly Lotos, floating upon the waters of the Ocean, which is surrounded, and its waters prevented from falling into the vacuum by the Suvarna-bhūm, or land of gold, and the mountains of Lokalokas.

* N.B.—In these figures, the letter C should be pronounced as K.
No 2, represents the globe of the Earth, according to the Hindus astronomers. It is projected upon the plane of the equator, and the Southern hemisphere expanded in such a manner, that the South pole, instead of a point, becomes the largest circle of this projection. They also represent the two hemispheres, separately upon the plane of the equator.

No. 3, represents the same, projected upon the plane of a meridian. These two projections are against the tenor of the context of the Purānas, a Southern hemisphere being then absolutely unknown.

Here I have placed the three ranges of mountains, according to the documents of Hindu astronomers but not according to their usual delineations for, according to these, the three ranges should be represented by three concentric half circles, parallel to the meridians of the projection. It is acknowledged, that these ranges are in the direction of as many parallels of latitude. In that case the outermost ranges must be the longest, and this is the opinion of the Jains, as I observed before, in the sixth paragraph of the first chapter of an Essay on the Sacred Isles in the West in the Asiatic Researches, Vol VIII.

No 4, exhibits the old Continent, projected upon an imaginary circle passing through the North pole, and just grazing the equator of the South. Instead of a circle, it should be an oval, with the longest diameter East and West. But as the tracing of an oval would be attended with some difficulty, the indolent Purānakṣ has adopted the circle in its room, and seldom use the other. As such a delineation would be useless, I have, of course, omitted it.

The chasm in the North-West, through the mountains surrounding the world, was made by Krishna, when he went to see his prototype Vishnu, or the great spirit, the Paramātmā of the world, whose abode is among waters, in the land of darkness. Several heroes have passed since through this chasm.

No 5, explains the true system of the known world, according to the Purānas, and the Jains, reconciled with that of the astronomers of India.

Here the Mēru of the Purānakṣ is brought back to its proper place, whilst the Mēru of the astronomers remains under the North pole. The zones between Jambu or India, and the Mēru of the astronomers, are obviously our seven climates, and the points where the astronomical zones intersect the zones of the Purānakṣ round their respective centres equally called Mēru, shew the true situation of the āśīpas or countries, from which these zones, according to the system either of the astronomers or of the Paurāṇiks, are equally denominated, whether they are reckoned relatively to the North pole, or to a central point in the elevated plains of Tartary.

No 6, is a delineation of the country of Bhārata, in the fullest acceptance of that denomination. Its nine divisions with Kuru, or Siberia, and the Northern parts of Europe, making in all ten districts, were all destroyed by a violent storm, and inundation, except one. Thus the ten divisions of the Atlantis were all destroyed by a flood, except one, called Gades, which probably included Spain.

Some also are of opinion, that, out of the seven dicīpas, six were likewise overwhelmed by a flood. This circumstance is also noticed in the third volume of the Ayin-Akkabī. But I believe that this notion originated with the Paurāṇiks, who, unable to point out these wonderful countries, described in so extravagant a manner in their sacred books, found that the best way was to swear, that they had disappeared.

In the figures 7, 8 and 9, the map of Jambu is represented under three different projections. The first is according to the ideas of the Paurāṇiks, in which one half of the equator is obviously combined with another half of the meridian, on the plain of which the map is projected. I have marked the degrees of longitude upon the equator, and the degrees of latitude north, upon an arch of the first meridian. No notice is ever taken of these particulars by the Paurāṇiks, but a little reflection will show the original design of this diagram, though the projection be ever so disfigured.

The true projection of it should be in the shape of what the ancients called the bottom part of a sling, and this was admitted by Dionysius Periegetes. Posidonius before him admitted of it also, but he insisted, that the greatest length of this projection was in a north and south direction. This sort of projection is represented in the figure 9. Number 8 represents the same portion of the globe, that is to say, the northern part of the old continent, as projected in the usual form, upon the plain of the first meridian.

In the seventh and eighth numbers, the two Trī-kutādris, or islands, abounding with Kirana or resplendence, are represented diametrically opposite, with all due symmetrical arrangement in every part, to which the Hindus will always sacrifice truth. There are, however, some general outlines, which are strictly true. There are really three islands, or dicīpas in the south east and as many in the north west quarter of the old continent, corresponding exactly, or nearly so, to each other, and they have also the same names. The rest of the superstructure owes its origin to the fertile and inventive genius of the Hindus. The idea, however, is by no means a modern one, nor was it confined to India for ancient writers in the west acknowledged two islands, called Cerne, one in the east, and the other in the west; the latter, called also Cyrene, was placed near the straits of Hercules, and was said to consist equally of three islands. The eastern Cerne, it is true, was said to be near the eastern shores of Africa. This mistaken notion arose, through the information of the Hindus, who will have it that the dicta of Lankā really joins the shores of Sankha, Zeng, or Africa. The Nubian geographer adopted this idea, as well as Arabian writers in general.

"Viṣṇu, for the good of mankind, having assumed the shape of a boar, rescued the earth from the waters, and secured it on all sides. Upon it he made Meru of solid gold towards the east he placed the Udaya mountain, with others. He then went towards the south, and there framed beautiful mountains of gold and silver; these are the gold and silver peaks or islands of Lankā, Malaya, and Sumatra. In the west he made a mountain 100 yojanas high, quite beautiful, with large and variegated peaks, abounding with gold, with golden caves, with trees beautiful and resplendent like the sun (that is to say, they were of gold) there are the Tri-Vēdikā, or the three mountains, with seats for the three gods. There, in the west, is Varāha-dvīpa there Varāha, or the Boar, made 60,000 mountains, like Meru, of gold, and dreadful to behold. Among them is another Meru, from which flow a thousand streams. There are all sorts of Tīthas, or holy places. This mountain, called Varāha, is 60 yojanas long and high, and about 300 miles, and it is like Varāha himself. He made also Vaudurya (Scotland), Rayata (England), Kāneha (Ireland), high and divine mountains. He then made the Chakrāvan, or Chakramān, a very high mountain (this is Puykara, or Iceland, like a ring, or quiet, as implied by the apī Vlation of Chakra). Like a shell, and abounding with shells, with a thousand peaks, is Rayata, or the silver peak, hence it is called Sankha-parvata, or the mountain of shells. The trees there are all white; the juice of the Pāṇjāta tree is like liquid gold. There is the Ghritadhara river its waters are like clarified butter. Prabhu, or Viṣṇu, made many rivers, called Varāhasorita, or the streams of the boar, and these are most holy. Thus he made a mountain, the name of which is omitted, but it is obviously Śveta, with a thousand peaks, abounding with jewels, the Tāmra, or Vaudurya, peak of copper, and a mountain of gold, Kāneha, according to rule. Thus in the north he made the Saumya giri (Sōma or Chandra), towering to the skies the mountain of gold, Kānchana, has a thousand peaks, with many places of worship. Thus he made the Trivikram, or mountain with three peaks, and the Pushkara mountain, with many rivers, producing everything good and desirable" The north quarter is again omitted, because, as my learned friends inform me, the north pole is inaccessible, and by no means a place of delight The word, north, mentioned in this legend, relates to the situation of Soma-giri, or the White Island, in the northern parts of the White Sea, an expression very common in the Purāṇas every legend relating to the White Island, and adjacent parts, generally beginning thus, Kṛtrōdā-uttara-tiramē, in the north of the White Sea, &c"

MAHISMATI

In ancient India Māhismati was said to have been an important town and so its identification has taxed the ingenuity of many Sanskrit scholars and Indian antiquarians. The first European to study the Paurāṇik history and geography was Colonel Wilford. According to him, it was to be identified with Chauli Mahēśwarā on the Narmada (Asiatic Researches Vol IX p 105)

General Cunningham, in his Ancient Geography of India (pp 488-489) is inclined to identify it with Mahesmatipura on the Upper Narbada

Mr Pargiter (Introduction to his translation of the Mārkaṇḍeeya Purāṇa, p IX) writes —

"The modern town of Mahesar, some fifty miles lower down the river, claims to be the ancient Māhismati, but does not satisfy the allusions. Māhismati was situated on an island in the river and the palace looked out on the rushing stream (Raghu V vi 43). This description agrees only with Māndhātā."

There would have been little difficulty experienced by scholars and antiquarians in identifying this place, had they turned their attention to the description of Māhismati as given in the Matsya Purāṇa, Chapter XLIII verses 26-36 (see the translation pp 113-114) There it is stated that Kārtavīrya Arjuna "founded the city of Māhismati after conquering the Nāga King, son of Karkotaka. That city was laved by the waves of the

*Dr Fitis Edward Hall says that he "ascertained on the spot, that the place is now invariably called Maheswar simply" (Wilson's translation of the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, Vol. II. p 197) ocean during the rains wherein the king played in the waves, as it ebbed and flowed in the beach

"He alone, with his thousand arms, swelled it (the river Narmadá) by putting the water of the sea into it and increased it, as it increases in the monsoon, and the ocean being thus agitated by his thousand arms became subdued by him, and he extended his sea power, so that the residents in Pátála (antipodes) became inoffensive and quiet."

From the above description, there can be little doubt that the ancient Māhismati was the modern town of Broach, where Arjuna built dockyards and by establishing his sea-power, was enabled to subdue Itávana, the ruler of Lanká and made his influence felt in the Pátála (antipodes) which some consider to be Australia.

The ancient name of Broach is Bhrigu-kachchha. This may be explained by the legend mentioned in the same Purāṇa as Parasu Ráma, the descendant of Bhrigu defeating Arjuna and capturing his dominions. He seems to have changed the name of Māhismati to Bhrigu-Kachchha to glorify his ancestry.

THE DATE OF THE MATSYA PURĀNA.

The Sacrificial Session

The Great War had come to an end and the militarism of India, too, came to a close with it. The legends say that out of the eighteen akṣauhinis or army corps, engaged in this internecine war, ten chiefstains only survived—seven on one side and three on the other. The flower of Indian manhood perished in this war. Though the militarism was crushed for the time being, and the Kṣatriya lay prostrate at the feet of the Brāhmaṇa, another militarism, and that not of India, but of outsiders (bahlischaras) or foreigners, soon made its appearance. India lay open to them as an easy prey. Barbarians, like Ābhīras and others, overran the country, and the Brāhmaṇas who had expected, that with the downfall of Kṣatriyadom, intellectual classes would come to the front, were disappointed, and the servile Sūdras and the hated Mlechchhas were in power on all sides, the intellectual Brāhmaṇas retired from the courts of the Rajas and started a long sacrificial session in the holy places of India. After Yudhīśṭhīra had abdicated his throne, to which he had ascended through the sanguinary war, Parīkṣit, the grandson of his brother, Arjuna, became king. He lost his life at the hands of the barbarian invaders of the Nāga race led by their chief, called Takṣaka, and the central power of the Pauravas at Hastinapura really passed to these Takṣaka-led Nāgas, and the kings of Delhi were merely nominal sovereigns, as were the Moghul emperors after Shah Alam. Long before Parīkṣit had ascended the throne, Yudhīśṭhīra, in his lifetime, had the mortification to see his famous brother, Arjuna, defeated by the outsiders, Ābhīras, and to witness the delicately brought up ladies of the household of Krishna taken away in captivity by these Ābhīras. The weak son of Parīkṣit, Janamejaya, tried to stem the tide of the Takṣaka invasion, whose totem was a snake. He killed many of them, but he had not the diplomacy or the wisdom to please the Brāhmaṇas. He quarrelled with the hereditary priest of his family, Vāisampāyana, and favoured a stranger, in the person of Yājñavalkya—a person who posed as a reformer and said that he had got a revelation from the Sun, and who promulgated a new recension of the Yajur Veda called the Vājasanēyi Samhitā. Seeing Janamejaya taking sides with this new reformer (Yājñavalkya), Vāisampāyana, with other Brāhmaṇas, left his court. But Janamejaya was not allowed to live in peace. Whether it was through the fresh inroads of the Nāgas, helped by the intrigues of the Brāhmaṇas, or whether Janamejaya was disgusted with his kingdom, he, like his great grandfather, Yudhishṭhira, abdicated his throne in favour of his son, Satān'ka, and went to the forest. It was in the reign of his grandson, Adhistamakṛṣṇa, that Brāhmaṇas started the great sacrificial congress, which was moving about from one seat of pilgrimage to another.
Three years of the session of this congress were passed at Puṣkara, near Ujjain. Two sessions of this congress were held at Naimisāranya, in Śitāpur district. It was at the fifth or sixth of this session, when the Brāhmaṇas had finished the labours of their deliberations, in the long drawn sacrifice, that they relaxed their strain and asked the bard, Sūta, to rehearse the stories of the past kings. It was then that the original Purāṇa was recited which expanded into 18 Purānas, amongst which the Matsya Purāṇa is not the least.

The original Purāṇa — The original Purāṇa is one which exists in the Devaloka, and contains ten millions of stanzas, as mentioned in Chapter III A portion of it is revealed from time to time, as necessity arises. In other words, the real Purāṇa, which would contain a full account of the cosmogony of the universe, and a history of all the rulers of the world, must be a very concisely written work to be finished within the scope of ten millions of stanzas. But we have not to deal with the history of the universe, but only of India and of Vaivasvata Manu, hence our Purānas are smaller in bulk.

What is a Purāṇa? — In the beginning, there was only one Purāṇa, which may be called the original Purāṇa. It treated of five subjects, viz:

(i) Sarga, or Creation, or Evolution of the world, or Flux
(ii) Pratisarga, or Destruction, or Involution of the world, or Reflux
(iii) Vamsa, or Genealogy of Devas, patriarchs and kings
(iv) Manvantaras, or cosmic chronology, or history of Manus
(v) Vamsānucharita, or the chronicles of dynasties of rulers

The Revealers of the Matsya Purāṇa — This Purāṇa was revealed by the Lord Viṣṇu himself to Vaivasvata Manu. A great deluge was to destroy the whole creation, and the Lord wanted to save Manu for the future race.
He assumed the form of a fish, and the story of the deluge — the original account of which is to be found in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa given below — is made the opening thesis of this Purāṇa.

"In the beginning, they brought to Manu water for washing, as men are in the habit of bringing it to wash with the hands. As he was thus washing, a fish came into his hands (which spake to him), 'Preserve me;
I shall save thee." (Manu enquired) 'From what wilt thou save?' (The fish replied) 'A flood shall sweep away all these creatures, from it will I rescue thee.' (Manu asked) 'How (shall) thy preservation be effected?' The fish said: 'So long as we are small, we are in great peril, for fish devours fish, thou shalt preserve me first in a jar. When I grow too large for the jar, then thou shalt dig a trench, and preserve me in that. When I grow too large for the trench, then thou shalt carry me away to the Ocean. I shall then be beyond the reach of danger.' Straightway he became a large fish, for he waxes to the utmost (He said) 'Now in such and such a year, then the flood will come, thou shalt therefore, construct a ship, and resort to me, thou shalt embark in the ship when the flood rises, and I shall deliver thee from it.' Having thus preserved the fish, Manu carried him away to the sea. Then in the same year which the fish had enjoined, he constructed a ship, and resorted to him. When the flood rose, Manu embarked in the ship. The fish swam towards him. He fastened the cable of the ship to the fish's horn. By this means he passed over this northern mountain. The fish said, 'I have delivered thee, fasten the ship to a tree. But lest the water should cut thee off whilst thou art on the mountain, as much as the water subsides, so much shalt thou descend after it.' He accordingly descended after it as much (as it subsided). Wherefore also this, viz., 'Manu's descent is (the name) of the northern mountain. Now the flood had swept away all these creatures, so Manu alone was left here. Desirous of offspring, he lived worshipping and toiling in arduous religious rites. Among these he also sacrificed with the pdka offering. He cast clarified butter, thickened milk, whey and curds, as an oblation into the waters. Thence in a year a woman was produced.'

The Chronological Periods — The chronology of the Purânas may be conveniently studied under the following heads —

1. The period from Vaivasvata Manu up to the Mahâbhârata War
2. The period from the Mahâbhârata War up to the inauguration of Mahâpadma Nanda, i.e., 422 B.C.
3. From Mahâpadma Nanda up to the end of the Andhra dynasty, 836 years
4. The modern period, from the end of Andhra dynasty to the present age

The Matsya Purâna does not give a list of kings after the Andhra dynasty, and, therefore, it may be safely inferred that this Purâna, in its present form, could not have been composed after the Andhra dynasty.

In this Purâna, the express statement made is that it was recited by Śūta in Naimiṣārṇya, in the reign of king Adhiseimakṛṣṇa of Magadha, who was contemporary of Divākara. That was the original Purāṇa. The present Purāṇa was composed much later. Very probably it was composed in the reign of king Yaduṣṭrī of Andhra dynasty, in about 193 A.D. We quote from the introduction, p XIII of Mr Parmenter's valuable book "The Dynasties of the Kali Age" "There is an apparent indication that a compilation was begun in the latter part of the 2nd century in the Andhra kingdom, Yajñāśrī's reign, for 5 MSS of the Matsya (of which three appear to be independent, namely, b, c, and d) speak of him as reigning in his ninth or tenth year." In chapter 273, verse 14, there is found the following reading of the text, instead of the ordinary reading found in printed books. In Mt bceln, the line reads "nava varṣāṇi Yajñāśrīḥ kurute Sātakarnikah," which means "Yajñāśrī is reigning for nine years." While the ordinary reading is "nava-varṣāṇi Yajñāśrīḥ Sātakarnikah," which means "Yajñāśrī reigned for 29 years." The Andhra kingdom fell about A.D. 236, and it may be said that the Matsya account brings the historical narrative down to about the middle of the third century A.D. and no further." Yajñāśrī's reign commenced in 184 A.D., according to Mr V. Smith, and the first compilation of the dynastic account was made in 193 A.D., though it was carried up to the end of the Andhra Dynasty up to 236 A.D., or 43 years further. The Matsya makes no mention of the Guptas.

As the chronology of the Matsya Purāṇa does not go beyond the Andhra dynasty, so, in its present form, it cannot be posterior to the year 225 A.D., if that date be taken as the termination of the Andhra, according to Mr V. Smith. It would be 432 A.D., according to the Matsya Purāṇa. It is, therefore, one of the oldest, if not the oldest, of the Purāṇas. The Vāyu, the Viṣṇu and other Purāṇas mention the Guptas and other dynasties, that came into existence after the Andhras, and so they, in their present form, are later than the Matsya.

Albiruni saw a manuscript copy of the Matsya Purāṇa in his time, so it must have existed then.

The date of the recital —All Purāṇas (except the Viṣṇu) are said to have been recited by Śūta at the great sacrificial session, held by the priests and sages in the forest of Naimiṣā, during the reign of Adhiseimakṛṣṇa of Magadha, who was a contemporary of Divākara and Śeṇājī. By calculating the date of the reign of Śeṇājī, from the figures given before, it would appear that he flourished 277 years after the Great War.

Therefore, this Purāṇa, in its original form, was recited on or about 1160 B.C. According to the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, it was in the reign of Parīkṣit.
that the Purānas were recited, and the future kings are taken from that date.

Regarding the Matsya Purāṇa, Professor H. H. Wilson writes —

Matsya Purāṇa: "That in which, for the sake of promulgating the Vedas, Vishnu, in the beginning of a Kālpa, related to Manu the story of Narasimha and the events of seven Kālpas, that, O sages, know to be the Matsya Purāṇa, containing twenty thousand stanzas."'

We might, it is to be supposed, admit the description which the Matsya gives of itself to be correct, and yet, as regards the number of verses, there seems to be a misstatement. Three very good copies—one in my possession, one in the Company's library, and one in the Radcliffe library—concur in all respects, and in containing more than between fourteen and fifteen thousand stanzas. In this case the Bhāgavata is nearer the truth, when it assigns to it fourteen thousand

The first subject (in the Purāṇa) is the creation, which is that of Brahma and the patriarchs. Some of the details are the usual ones, others are peculiar, especially those relating to the Purāṇa or progenitors. The regal dynasties are next described, and then follow chapters on the duties of different orders. It is in relating those of the householder, in which the duty of making gifts to Brahmans is comprehended, that we have the specification of the extent and subjects of the Purānas. It is meritorious to have copies made of them, and to give these away on particular occasions. Thus, it is said, of the Matsya: "Whoever gives it away at either equinox, along with a golden fish and a milch cow, gives away the whole earth," that is, he reaps a like reward, in his next migration. Special duties of the householder—Vratas or occasional acts of piety—are then described at considerable length, with legendary illustrations. The account of the universe is given in the usual strain—salva legends ensue as the destruction of Tripūrāsura, the war of the gods with Tāraka and the Dāityas, and the consequent birth of Kārttikeya, with the various circumstances of Umā's birth and marriage, the burning of Kāmadeva, and other events involved in that narrative, the destruction of the Asuras Maya and Andhaka, the origin of the Mātris, and the like, interspersed with the Vaisṇava legends of the Avatāras. Some Māhātmyas are also introduced, one of which, the Narmada Māhātmya, contains some interesting particulars. There are various chapters on law and morals, and one which furnishes directions for building houses and making images. We then have an account of the kings of future periods, and the Purāṇa concludes with a chapter on gifts.

The Matsya Purāṇa it will be seen, even from this brief sketch of its contents, is a miscellaneous compilation, but including, in its contents the elements of a genuine Purāṇa. At the same time, it is of too mixed a character to be considered as a genuine work of the Paurāṇik class, and, upon examining it carefully, it may be suspected that it is indebted to various works, not only for its matter, but for its words.

Although a Śalva work, it is not exclusively so, and it has not such sectarian absurdities as the Kūrma and Lānga. It is a composition of considerable interest, but, if it has extracted its materials from the Padma,—which it also quotes on one occasion, the specification of the Upaniṣad—, it is subsequent to that work, and, therefore, not very ancient.

But modern scholars consider this Purāṇa as one of the oldest,* in fact, the Padma Purāṇa seems to have borrowed from the Matsya and not the reverse.
